TO WELCOME NEW CENTURY

Joint Committee of Municipal Assembly Will Arrange Celebration.

Alderman Bridges Withdraws Objection Because He Didn't Want to Stop Twentieth Century's Progress.

The Municipal Assembly decided yesterday that the city should hold a twentieth century celebration at midnight on Dec. 31, and $5,000 may be appropriated for the purpose.

The members of the Board of Aldermen had a lively debate over the question, and Alderman Bridges of Brooklyn declared that it was not right for the Board of Aldermen to "stop the progress of the twentieth century," and then he condemned all celebrations, and said that "there was nothing in them for the Aldermen," as they were never honored properly as City Fathers.

The reading of resolutions introduced in the Council by President Guggenheimer was listened to with much interest. Some of the Aldermen smiled when the document was read before them. The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas, On Dec. 31 at midnight a century of superb accomplishments in science and the arts of civilization will come to an end, thus marking the completion of a cycle of time in which the human race has lifted itself to heights of strength and glory undreamed of in preceding ages; and,

Whereas, At the moment when the nineteenth century will have terminated a new century will be born, whose possibilities will be greater than its magnificent inheritance; and,

Whereas, The nations of the earth will then survey with retrospective pride the miracles of science, which have beautified the cities of the world, which have drawn the nations of the earth into a closer union, which have leashed the elemental forces of nature, which have weighed the sun and analyzed the constituents of the most distant star, and which have decreased the sum of human suffering; and,

Whereas, The nations of the earth, not forgetful of the fact that the century which will then have passed has seen the advent of the steamship, the railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, the Roentgen rays, and wireless telegraphy, nevertheless turn their faces toward the dawn of the twentieth century with undiminished faith in the continued progress of mankind and with an unfaltering belief that the wonders of the future will transcend in value all the treasures of past knowledge and attainment; and,

Whereas, The people of the City of New York are confident that the twentieth century will bring to our beloved country pre-eminence in the generous arts of peace, and triumph in any struggle which may be thrust upon us in defense of our National rights; and,

Whereas, The inventiveness of the human mind, displayed in the construction of death-dealing agencies, will, in the not distant future, make war impossible, and hasten the coming of the day when international disputes will be adjusted by arbitration; and,

Whereas, The history of the past, both in our city, State, and Nation, from the War of the Revolution up to the last month of the nineteenth century, fills us with faith for the future and reliance upon that Divine Providence which has blessed us thus far and will still bless us. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a joint committee of the Municipal Assembly, consisting of five members of the Council, to be nominated by the President of the Council, and seven members of the Board of Aldermen, to be nominated by the President of the Board of Aldermen, be and it is hereby appointed to make all necessary arrangements for the proper celebration of the commencement of the twentieth century.

Alderman Bridges of Brooklyn became excited after the reading clerk had completed his work. He said:

"I move to lay this on the table. There may be something in this that we don't know about."

"If this matter is put over it will be too late to settle all the details before Dec. 31. I think the Aldermen should be proud enough of the city to vote for this celebration," said Alderman McCall, the Tammany leader.

This brought Alderman Bridges to his feet. He shouted:

"We are holding celebrations for everything. Every few months there is a celebration of some kind. Where does the Board of Aldermen come in? Why, there was a little celebration right out here in City Hall Park a few months ago, when Mayor Van Wyck dug a hole in the ground, 2 feet by 2 feet, and that celebration cost the City of New York $35,000,000."

There was a roar of laughter. An Alderman asked whether Mr. Bridges referred to the rapid transit tunnel celebration, and he said:

"Yes. What did we get out of that celebration? Did we get any tickets? There is too much money spent in celebrations. I am in favor of celebrations, but I think the Board of Aldermen should be well represented."

"I hope the Alderman from Brooklyn will withdraw his objections," said one member.

"I don't want to stop the progress of the twentieth century, but won't fetch up any kind of a controversy at this time," said Alderman Bridges.

The resolution to have the celebration was put and carried unanimously.

Alderman Muh then moved that an appropriation of $2,500 be made. Alderman Byrne wanted the sum fixed at $5,000, with a celebration in each of the five boroughs of the Greater New York. It was finally decided that $1,000 for a borough celebration was not sufficient, and Alderman Byrne withdrew his amendment. He urged the appropriation of $5,000 for the celebration in the Borough of Manhattan. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee after two attempts had been made to get four-fifths of the members of the board to vote in favor of the appropriation, as required by the charter. The leaders claim the appropriation will be passed at the next meeting.

In the Council the resolution for the celebration was offered by President Guggenheimer. It was passed unanimously and the appropriation was fixed at $2,500.

President Guggenheimer received yesterday a letter from a representative of the National Red Cross Society protesting against the City of New York holding an independent twentieth century celebration, as plans are already made to obtain "from the monarchs of the different European countries and celebrated men and women of both Europe and America on the dawn of the twentieth century messages which are to be read at mammoth watch meetings in many towns and cities of the United States on the night of Dec. 31, 1900."

The municipal plan is to have the City Hall illuminated with electric lights and to have choral singers assembled on the steps, and at midnight the City Hall will be illuminated and National songs will be sung. There will be New Year's Day receptions in Mayor Van Wyck's office and in the Council and Aldermanic meeting rooms.

THE STRONG MAN SUCCEEDED.

Five Ushers Could Not Dislodge Bentz from a Theatre Seat.

George Brown left his home in Griffith's Corners, Ulster County, last Monday, and came down to see the sights in New York. His friend John Bentz of Thirty-ninth Street and Ninth Avenue agreed to show them to him.

In making the "grand circuit" on Monday night they accidentally ran across the American Theatre, and determined on the spot to "take it in."

Knowing that they would frequently be tormented by thirst during the course of the performance and would likely have to crawl over sundry men and women in order to go out between the acts, they secured the services of a large flask of whisky before they entered.

They resorted to the stimulant so often during the performance and made so many running comments upon the play that they attracted the attention of an usher, who cautioned them. They defied him, and it was finally decided by the head usher that Bentz at least would have to be ejected. He took hold of him, but Bentz got a grip on his chair and refused to move. Usher after usher seized hold of Bentz, until five young men were trying to drag, lift, or push the disorderly but determined man from his seat. They tried the flying wedge, tug of war, and other formations with no success, while the audience became panic-stricken and five women fainted. Brown awoke to the occasion and assisted his friend by holding him with one hand and bracing his knees against the seats. Policeman George Trojan, noted as a strong man, had been sent for in the meantime, and, with one or two mighty jerks, he detached Bentz from the seat, and order was restored.

In the West Side Court yesterday Bentz and Brown were fined $10 each for disorderly conduct.

NO SMOKING CARS IN BROOKLYN

Rapid Transit Company Issues Order Abolishing Them.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company issued an order yesterday afternoon abolishing the smoking cars which have been in use on the Brooklyn elevated railroads for some years. Trains usually of but two cars each are operated on the Brooklyn linea during the middle of the day, one of the cars in each train, up to yesterday, being a "smoker."

The car set apart for general travel was soon filled with passengers, and women were crowded into the "smoker," which was often dirty and vile-smelling. Many fine silk skirts have been ruined by coming in contact with the decorations left on the floors of these cars by tobacco chewers, and every day women have been sickened by the odors which pervade the cars.

Complaints about the smoking cars have been received at intervals by the company for a long time, but during the past few months the complaints have become so many and emphatic that the railroad officials agreed that some action should be taken. Yesterday afternoon it was decided to take a firm stand in the matter, risk the displeasure of the smoking public, and do away with the smoking cars altogether. The order issued to that effect will go into operation this morning, when all of the "smokers" will be run as regular passenger cars.

"We do not expect that any hardship will be experienced as a result of this change," said General Manager Breckenridge of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. "During the day the smoker was little used by men who wished to smoke, but it would be in such a condition that women could not occupy it with comfort. We believe that the change is made in the interests of the largest number of our patrons and that the public will uphold our stand in the matter."

Small Verdict Against Wagner Co.

The jury in the case of George W. Birnbaum against W. Seward Webb, as President of the Wagner Palace Car Company, brought in a verdict yesterday in favor of the plaintiff for $2.06. Mr. Birnbaum had sued in the City Court for $200 damages for failure to get sleeping-car accommodations for which he paid $2. The jury gave him the value of his ticket and 6 cents damages.

LAW CLERK LEARNS SOME LAW.

Sigmund Stern, a law clerk, living at 270 Bowery, prided himself until yesterday upon his grasp of the intricacies of law. "Oh, you can't touch me legally, your Honor. I know the law, you know," he exclaimed in a confident tone, addressing Magistrate Crane in the Essex Market Police Court.

Stern's wife caused his arrest last March on a charge of abandonment. He was ordered to pay her $5 a week or stand committed for six months. He chose the latter alternative. Mrs. Stern came to court yesterday and pleaded to have her three-year-old daughter committed to an institution. On the street in front of the Court House she met her husband, and the two returned to the courtroom, where the woman said she had asked her husband for money and he had refused her.

Then Stern uttered his defiant remarks to the Magistrate. "No, Sir," continued the law clerk, emphatically. "The law says you cannot punish me twice in one year for failure to support my wife."

"Quite right," said the Magistrate, calmly; "but I can punish you in another way. I'll accept a complaint against you for failing to support your child."

A Gerry society agent was directed to draw up a complaint, and did so. Stern was held for Special Sessions.

OMAHA BOY HELD FOR $25,000 RANSOM

Son of E. A. Cudahy, the Packer, in Kidnappers' Hands.

WRITE FOR THE MONEY

Said to Have Threatened Violence Unless Money Is Paid.

Entire Police Force and Number of Private Detectives Trying to Find the Boy and the Abductors.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Dec. 19.—Edward Cudahy, fifteen years old, son of Edward A. Cudahy, millionaire packer and head of the Cudahy Packing Company in Omaha, is missing from his home in this city, and his parents believe he has been kidnapped. The entire police and detective force of the city and half a hundred men employed by Mr. Cudahy have been scouring the city and country throughout the day in the effort to locate the young man, or secure a clew which would lead to a knowledge of his whereabouts, but without success.

Business at Mr. Cudahy's packing plant in South Omaha was practically suspended to-day, nearly the entire force there joining in the search. The boy's parents are distracted at his disappearance, and the father has offered to pay a substantial reward and "no questions asked." If his son shall be returned to his home. An anonymous letter has been received at the Cudahy home substantiating the fears of the family that he has been kidnapped.

Young Cudahy left home at 8 o'clock last night to take some books to the residence of Capt. Rustin, about two blocks distant, and that was the last seen of him. As midnight arrived and he did not return the police were notified, and two detectives were detailed to work on the case. It was not until nearly 9 o'clock this morning, however, that the matter began to assume a really serious aspect. At that hour a man on horseback rode rapidly by the Cudahy mansion, and as he passed the front gate he threw a letter into the yard. A servant took the letter into the house, where it was read. It was in substance:

"Mr. E. A. Cudahy: Your son is safe. We have him and will take good care of him, and will return him to you in consideration of the payment of $25,000. We mean business. JACK."

The remainder of the note the police refuse to disclose, as they say it relates to the place where the money is to be left and where the kidnappers are to leave the boy in case Mr. Cudahy complies with their terms. The servant who saw the man on horseback was able to give a good description of him, and this is the clue upon which the police are working at present.

ABDUCTORS MAKE THREATS.

To-night Mr. Cudahy said: "I was not much alarmed at first, but now I fear something has happened to the boy. His habits were good, and he would never cause his mother so much trouble by staying away without her consent. The police agree with me that the boy has probably been kidnapped. I suppose that the object is to obtain money of me, and I am determined to punish the people connected with the affair, but, of course, my first consideration is to get the boy back.

"The note found in my door purporting to be written by the kidnappers I do not know how to take. Surely, men desperate enough to carry out such a deal would find other means of communicating with me, and less dangerous to themselves than this. This letter is with the Chief of Police. As to the one said to have been received later, I know nothing. Rumor said the note contained a threat to burn the boy's eyes out with vitriol, but I have seen no such note, and I have employed the best detective skill and help I can get to go through with the case.

"I am anxious to see the boy get home, and am willing to pay something for his safe return, but as to $25,000, the kidnappers will have to be very desperate and convince me that my boy's life is in danger before I will treat with them. Any one furnishing information as to the boy's whereabouts I will liberally reward."

In contrast to Mr. Cudahy's statements was his manner, however. The father of young Cudahy is evidently pretty badly scared. Now everything points to the receipt of a second and very startling note at the Cudahy residence which is being suppressed by the police. Both the Cudahy house maid and the coachman repeated remarks to neighbors before they were told to say nothing, to the effect that a note was found like this one just before dark, which said the boy would be killed or his eyes burned out with vitriol if the money was not received to-night, and that Mr. Cudahy and his wife were terribly alarmed over the note.

The police advised that the second note be suppressed, so the servants said, but later both of those servants denied ever having heard of a second note. The indications are that such a note was actually received.

Mrs. Cudahy is prostrated and a physician has been called.

Michael Cudahy, President of the Cudahy Packing Company, wired his brother Edward to-night that the firm's unlimited capital would be placed at their brother's command to ferret out the mystery surrounding the alleged abduction of his son.

FOLLOWING UP CLUES.

As to the methods employed in the kidnapping, but little is known at present, but it is believed by some that young Edward was decoyed away through the instrumentality of a boy about his own age, as two youths, one of whom answered the description of young Cudahy, were seen on a Leavenworth Street car, west bound, shortly before midnight.

It transpired that Charles W. Martin, an insurance agent, residing near Mr. Cudahy's home, while passing along a block in the rear of the house last evening, saw a covered wagon standing in the shadow of a clump of trees. One man sat in the wagon and was talking to another man, who stood on the ground. When Mr. Martin was passing they dropped their voices to an inaudible pitch. He did not attach much importance to it until he heard of the disappearance of young Cudahy.

A companion of young Cudahy also recollects seeing a vehicle standing for two or three nights near the Cudahy home.

A young lad known as "Alvin," who recently broke an arm, and who lives a few blocks from the Cudahy mansion, was seen leaving a car in the western part of the city about midnight, being assisted by a companion near his own age. The police believe the injured boy was a friend of young Cudahy, and are now looking for him.

Haunts of mysterious strangers and known outlaws are being vigorously searched or kept under surveillance. Three or four of these places were ransacked by the police during the day, but without result.

SENDS FOR PINKERTON MEN.

To-night a fresh squad of police and detectives and several special men were added to the force now searching for young Cudahy. Melville Sears, attorney for Mr. Cudahy, is in charge of the men, and nothing is being left undone to throw light on the mystery.

During the day Mr. Cudahy sent telegrams to cities throughout the country, each of which gave a description of the boy. The young man is described as fifteen years old, weight 120 pounds; height, 5 feet 8 inches; complexion light; nose, retroussé. He wore a gray suit of clothes and a black overcoat with black velvet collar.

Mr. Cudahy to-night telegraphed his brother Michael at Chicago to send a force of Pinkerton detectives to this city at once, and they are expected to arrive here some time to-morrow, when they will be put to work on the case. The entire force of the Mostyn Detective Agency of this city and all the available local detectives have also been started on the search.

It was stated late to-night that the police are watching two boys known to have been companions of young Cudahy, one of whom was seen at Fifty-sixth and Centre Streets, the extreme limits of the city, at 9 o'clock last night, in company with another boy. Several places of bad repute are located near that part of the city, and it is feared the young man got into trouble in that vicinity.

MAD DASH DOWN STEEP HILLS.

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 19.—George Mayer and Wilbur Olyan, both of Melrose, Bronx, had a lively ride this afternoon in a big steel motor vehicle which was capable of great speed. They started down the two-mile incline from Shannard Place toward the centre of the city. The street descends by a series of steep declines, at the foot of each being a level strip and then another drop.

Mr. Mayer, the owner of the machine, was driving it at about twenty miles an hour when he passed Shannard Place. He did not attempt to slacken speed when the first sharp decline was reached, but when a little way down appeared to try to slow down the machine, but it had already gotten beyond control, and the levers did not slacken the rate at which it shot down the hill. After a time he ceased his efforts and both men sat quietly, Mr. Mayer guiding the machine. It must have traveled at the rate of thirty-five or forty miles an hour down the hill. The short level stretch did not affect the speed, and at Gold Street the machine was still flying. At that street begins another and steeper decline, and when the men saw it they became alarmed.

Mr. Mayer realized that it would be impossible to continue down the hill, as such speed would result in disaster. He deliberately drove the machine into the gutter and up against a tree. The two men flew up into the air and landed twenty feet from the machine. They struck on turf, and did not appear much hurt. The machine was wrecked, and it did not seem as if there was a straight piece of metal in it. An expressman was hired to haul it to the Bronx.

A motor vehicle belonging to John E. Andrus, which was kept in a specially built structure, was wrecked yesterday afternoon. A son of Mr. Andrus, with friends, was making repairs when, without warning, one of the tanks of gasoline exploded. The men ran out in time to escape the flames. The building caught fire, but the flames were put out within a few minutes. The machine was badly damaged by the explosion and scorched by the flames.

LARGE ROLLED STEEL OUTPUT.

Total This Year Will Be 1,000,000 Tons Greater than in 1899.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Dec. 19.—Iron and steel statisticians here estimate that the rolled steel output for the year will be about 1,000,000 tons greater than that of 1899. It has been the prevalent impression that the output will show a decrease owing to the long shut-down of some mills and the cry of dull times. The output for 1899 of all rolled steel was 10,357,397 tons. The output for the present year already exceeds 11,000,000 tons. This is accounted for by the fact that the boom did not get fairly started in 1899 until the middle of the year.

The tonnage in plates for the present year has been greatly increased, and the mills closed during the Summer were tinplate, wire, and sheet plants. The tonnage of these is not great, whereas the mills rolling billets, rails, structural, and plates have not closed a week except for repairs. The bulk of the rail tonnage ordered last year was rolled this year.

Most of the mills doing heavy work have from three to six months' work ahead, and the prospects for the rolled steel tonnage of 1901 exceeding that of 1900 is good.

MR. ODELL, SR., AS SANTA CLAUS.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Prestley MacLauhlin of Cornwall will receive as a Christmas present "from Santa Claus" a large and expensive drum and a fine miniature American cruiser.

Creswell MacLauhlin was during the recent campaign one of Governor-elect Odell's spellbinders. After the election he called with his son Prestley, who is about four years old, to congratulate the Governor-elect. Mayor Odell, father of Mr. Odell, has a long white beard, and is the personification of good nature. He chanced to be in his son's office.

Mr. MacLauhlin remarked: "Do you know this gentleman, Prestley?" The youngster answered quickly, "Yes, that's Santa Claus, and I wish he would bring me a drum at Christmas."

The Mayor laughed, and yesterday he proceeded to gratify the boy's desire by purchasing the drum and a good-sized toy cruiser, which will be sent to him for Christmas.

BRYAN TO JOIN THE UNION.

Says He Will Do Part of the Mechanical Work on His Paper.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 19.—W. J. Bryan to-day told a personal friend that he intended to do a large part of the mechanical work on his new paper, The Commoner. He further said that to do this he would find it necessary to join the local typographical union.

Mr Bryan said that requests for advertising rates and subscriptions were being received by him at a rate that surprised him. He is not a publisher, and the problem of advertising rates perplexes him. His brother will be business manager of the paper. Mr. Bryan goes South for a short trip in a few days, and when he returns he will arrange for publishing the first number of his paper.

STRINGENT MEASURES IN THE PHILIPPINES

Proclamation to be Issued by Gen. MacArthur To-day.

SPECIAL WARNING TO MANILA

Few Pleas of Intimidation to be Accepted—Rebels Not Entitled to Privileges of Belligerents.

MANILA, Dec. 19.—To-morrow Gen. MacArthur will issue a proclamation warning the inhabitants of the archipelago that hereafter strict compliance with the laws of war will be required of non-combatants as well as combatants.

The proclamation will set forth the principal laws of war. It will refer to recent proclamations issued by insurgent commanders threatening natives who are friendly to the American forces, and also to the orders issued to their men to kidnap and assassinate residents of towns occupied by Americans. The insurgent leaders will be notified that such practices, if continued, will put an end to the possibility of their resuming normal civic relations, and will make them fugitive criminals.

Residents of places occupied by Americans will be notified that compliance with the demands of the enemy will create a presumption that such acts are voluntary and malicious. They will also be notified that pleas of intimidation will rarely be accepted, and that, where secret committees are permitted to exist on behalf of the insurgents, even well-disposed persons will be exposed to the danger of being tried as traitors.

The proclamation will say that its warnings and requirements are to apply with special force to Manila, the "rendezvous of the emissaries of insurrection."

Newspapers will be warned against publishing sedition; and the proclamation will declare that the rebels, who are not part of an organized force, are not entitled to the privileges of prisoners of war, adding that the fact that they have not hitherto been held responsible is "evidence of the solicitude of the United States to avoid the appearance of harshness."

The proclamation will clearly disavow any recognition of technical belligerency.

New Seamen for Manila Fleet.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The Buffalo, which is now at Hampton Roads, has been ordered to make ready to carry another draft of men for the fleet at Manila. She will take about 450 landsmen and apprentices to Trinidad, where she will fall in with the training ships Hartford and Monongahela. She will exchange her green men for an equal number of the trained sailors on the Hartford and Monongahela, and will proceed to Manila, going by way of the Cape of Good Hope and the Indian Ocean.

Capt. M. D. Parker Dies at Manila.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Acting Adjt. Gen. Ward to-day received a cable message from Gen. MacArthur at Manila saying that Capt. Montgomery D. Parker of the Eighth Infantry died in the Military Hospital at Manila on the night of the 17th inst. of dysentery and liver trouble. Capt. Parker was born in Massachusetts June 20, 1851, and was appointed Second Lieutenant of the Ninth Cavalry Sept. 1, 1879. In the Spring of 1899 he was on mustering duty in South Carolina and Georgia, and, having been transferred to the Eighth Infantry, joined that regiment in Cuba. He went to the Philippines in December last, and remained there to the time of his death. He was a son of the late Montgomery Davis Parker of Boston and a brother of Winthrop Parker and Mrs. William Howard White of New York.

CHARGED WITH SHOPLIFTING.

G. W. Lommel, wife of a wholesale liquor dealer doing business at 67 Warren Street, and living at 65 West One Hundred and Thirty-second Street, was arrested last evening in a Harlem department store on the charge of shoplifting. She wore a sealskin cape and was handsomely dressed. She had a diamond sunburst at her neck and diamonds in her ears and on her hands. She has been a customer at the store for eight years and is well known to the members of the firm and to the clerks.

For the past two weeks Mrs. Lommel has been in the store every day. Her actions on Tuesday were suspicious, but she left the store without being detained. She returned about 10 o'clock last evening, when the store was crowded, and Miss E. R. Lloyd, the detective, followed her until they reached the shoe department, where the detective alleges she saw the woman pick up a pair of shoes valued at $5 and put them into a paper bag which she carried, and which she then tied up with a string.

Mrs. Lommel started to leave the store, when Miss Lloyd said to her:

"You had better go with me to the office."

Mrs. Lommel had with her her fourteen-year-old son, Alian. She went quietly to Mr. Koch's office, where the bag was opened and the shoes found in it. The woman began to cry. At first the firm was inclined to be lenient with her, but after questioning her a few minutes they became suspicious regarding a camera that had been missed on Tuesday, and so they called in Policeman Thornton, who arrested the woman and took her to the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Police Station.

At the station house she gave her son her pocketbook and told the boy to go home and wait for his father and tell him to come to the station house as soon as he arrived. She was then locked up.

FOR A "PALACE OF JUSTICE."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Attorney General Griggs recently attracted some attention by protesting to Congress against the proposition to erect a building for the Department of Justice, at a cost of about $1,000,000, that would be smaller than he considered desirable, and at a limit of cost that would compel its erection in a manner and with material that would not satisfy the improved taste in the matter of public buildings.

Representative Mercer, Chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings in the House, has prepared a bill that answers not only Mr. Griggs's objections but provides a scheme for housing the Supreme Court of the United States, the Department of Justice, the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, the Supreme Court of the district, the Court of Claims, and the National Law Library in a great temple of Palace of Justice, to be situated east of the Capitol, and to correspond in architectural design with the Library of Congress.

The total cost, including the site, which is to be obtained by condemnation, if necessary, is to be not more than $7,000,000.

The commission to secure the site is to invite ten architects, or firms of architects, "of conspicuous ability," to submit competitive designs for the building, and the successful competitor is to be employed as the architect of the building. Uninvited architects may also submit designs, and the unsuccessful invited architects are expected to receive not to exceed $1,000 in case their plans are not accepted.

The site proposed by this bill was suggested some years ago by the late Senator Morrill as one for a building for the Supreme Court alone.

POPULAR VOTE FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS

The following table contains a statement of the popular vote on the 6th of November, 1900, in all the States of the United States, for Presidential Electors on the Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, People's Party, Social Democratic Party, and Social Labor Party, as officially ascertained.

In addition there were votes returned in five States for the candidates of the National Union Reform Party, (Seth H. Ellis of Ohio for President and Samuel T. Nicholson of Pennsylvania for Vice President,) and in two States for the candidates of the United Christian Party, (J. F. R. Leonard of Iowa for President and John G. Woolley of Illinois for Vice President,) these votes being as follows:

National Union Reform: Arkansas, 341; Illinois, 672; Indiana, 254; Maryland, 147, and Ohio, 4,284; total, 5,698. United Christian: Illinois, 352; Iowa, 166; total, 518.

Minnesota was the last State to declare its vote, this not having been done until yesterday.

In some States, as in Louisiana and South Carolina, there were the nominations of but two parties, Republican and Democratic, upon the ballot; in other States there were three and four, and in some eight.

In the table the vote for the Elector receiving the highest number of ballots is given in all States where obtainable.

In this State the vote for the first Elector on each ballot, as officially canvassed and declared, is given.

The Electors chosen in the several States will meet in their respective State Capitols on the second Monday in January next, to cast their ballots for President and Vice President of the United States.

On the second Wednesday of February, the Senate and the House of Representatives will meet in joint convention in the hall of the House in the Capitol at Washington, the President of the Senate presiding, and will then canvass the votes of the Electors of all the States and declare the results:

BIG GIFT TO INFIRMARY

Mr. Schermerhorn Gives $75,000 to Eye and Ear Hospital.

To Build a Pavilion for Patients Afflicted with Aural Diseases—Its Need Explained.

William C. Schermerhorn, Second Vice President of the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary, at Second Avenue and Thirteenth Street, yesterday presented to that institution $75,000. The money is to constitute a fund for the construction of a pavilion for patients afflicted with diseases of the ear. Plans for the pavilion were submitted by Mr. Schermerhorn with his gift.

Mr. Schermerhorn's gift was a surprise to most of the board, although one or two of the members, who had assisted in mapping out the plans for the new building for the last two weeks, knew that it would be announced. Mr. Schermerhorn was moved to make this present to the institution by a perusal of the advance sheets of the eighteenth annual report, which has not yet been published, but from which the pressing need of a separate pavilion for the treatment of such patients was apparent.

The report states that during the year just passed an unusual number of ear and intracranial infective diseases had presented themselves and that during the last five months 200 cases of mastoid operations had been performed with a marked degree of success. These operations, which were first attempted by American surgeons and which have only been in use a short time, have become the means of saving the lives of many patients who are afflicted with intracranial disease. The latter generally starts with a slight tenderness back of the ear which gradually works inward reaching the membranes at the base of the skull and invariably causing death unless relief comes.

This operation no one dared to perform until it was not long ago attempted in this country. An incision is made, the skull is trepanned, and the affected membrane is removed, the patient generally recovering. Only recently a successful operation was made at the infirmary, and a clot of blood removed which would have caused the death of the patient. The disease attacks all ages, but is most frequently found among young persons and children.

It is for these cases especially that Mr. Schermerhorn intended the new pavilion. The infirmary's aid is sought by such patients from all parts of the United States, and as the new building will be the first of its kind special care has been bestowed on the plans. These have been drawn by R. W. Gibson, the architect, with the assistance of some of the surgeons of the aural department.

The building will be of brick, five stories high, occupying a lot at Second Avenue and Thirteenth Street 35 feet wide and 85 feet deep. In the basement will be a meeting room for the surgeons of the department, a central waiting room for patients, and a reception room, and there will also be three rooms for electrical treatment. The first floor will contain two rooms for dispensary cases. The two front rooms on the second floor will be occupied by the two resident surgeons, while in the rear there will be a room for delicate tests of hearing. The third floor will contain three front rooms for private patients, while the rear will be occupied by two wards for males, one for ordinary hospital cases and the other for intracranial diseases, the latter requiring special seclusion and quiet. On the fourth floor there will be similar arrangements for women.

The fifth floor will have some unusual features. The front space will be occupied as a ward for children, babies in arms frequently being attacked by diseases of the ear, and in the rear there will be a large operating room with skylights and windows on three sides. There will also be an etherizing room and a room where patients may recover from the effects of this anæsthetic.

According to the annual report for the year ending Oct. 1, 1900, the institution is incapable of meeting the great demand on its accommodations, the capacity of the wards being tested to the utmost. In the Dispensary Department 135,289 cases were treated, while the ward cases numbered 2,257. Of the patients treated 23,764 were of American birth, 8,949 were Russian Hebrews, 3,850 were Germans, 3,029 were Irish, over 2,000 were Austrians, and over 1,000 Italians. During the year a training school for nurses was established, and the Platt Pavilion for Contagious Diseases of the Eyes was completed. The institution received many gifts last year, those for the permanent fund amounting to $65,673.

RESCUES AT HARLEM FIRE

Two Girls and an Invalid Carried Safely Through Thick Smoke.

Both of Policeman Grogan's Daughters Were Unconscious, but Revived—Factory Burned—Loss $75,000.

There were plenty of incidents connected with a big Harlem fire early last night, which was witnessed by an enormous crowd. The fire did $75,000 damage to the brick factory building 240, 242, and 244 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Street and to the brown-stone dwellings at 254 and 256, next them.

Winifred Grogan, the ten-year-old daughter of Patrolman John Grogan of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Police Station, was carried out of her home at No. 256, unconscious from smoke, and her six-year-old sister Veronica was rescued from a sick bed on the second floor. A good deal of time was lost by the firemen in going to the duplicate box of that from which the alarm was sent in.

The factory building is owned by Bernard J. Voss of Fifty-third Street and Second Avenue, who was fitting up a machine shop on the ground floor. It is occupied by Sachs & Stern, overgaiter manufacturers, and by Edward Rafter, a grocer, who used part of the place as a storage house. He had twenty barrels of spirits on the ground floor.

Detective Hawkins and Patrolman Robert Hart made a tour of the five-story flat 256 East One Hundred and Twenty-second Sttet, which adjoins the factory. The halls were filled with smoke, and the men had much difficulty in groping their way about, being obliged to hold their handkerchiefs over their mouths. In the hallway leading to the top floor they discovered the two Grogan children unconscious from smoke. Picking them up in their arms, they made their way to the street, where the children were identified by their parents, who believed they were out of the building.

Winifred had been working on the top floor, and the smoke had been so dense she was overcome before she could escape. She was carried by Dr. Givings of Harlem Hospital, who responded with an ambulance, brought the girl back to consciousness. Dr. Givings said Veronica would recover.

Roundsman John Stevenson carried out a woman from 258 who revived, and Frank Roderman of 260, who was operated upon only a few days ago for cancer, was carried out and removed to Harlem Hospital. Fireman John Baninger, forty-six years old, of No. 42 engine company, situated on Fulton Avenue, between One Hundred and Sixty-seventh and One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Streets, was thrown off the tender on the way to the fire and badly cut and bruised. He refused to go to the hospital.

The flames were so fierce that Chief Croker ordered all the families out of the houses on East One Hundred and Twenty-first Street, just back of the factory. These houses were prevented from taking fire. Some of the firemen worked from the top of the five-story building at 2,369 Second Avenue, occupied by the Harlem Bedding Company and a casket company. A little damage by water was done here.

One of the barrels of spirits exploded during the fire, and then all the rest went up, causing the fire to spread and attacked the roofs of the dwellings.

The fire badly damaged the factory building, though the top and ground floors were the least damaged. The roofs of 254, occupied by Policeman Beasley of the Church Street Station, and of Grogan's house were badly damaged.

The engineer, B. F. Kuhnke, said he banked the fires just before leaving at 6, and he was the last out. He did not know the origin of the blaze and the firemen could not ascertain it. Fire burned the building on the site ten years ago, when the Mount Morris Electric Light Company occupied it.

Won $35,000 with $2.50 at Faro.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Washington, Dec. 19.—One of the most remarkable faro plays of record is said to have been made three weeks ago in Dawson by a man named Allen of San Francisco, a Klondike passenger on the steamer Dolphin, which arrived to-day. From $2.50 Allen asserts, he won in four days $35,000. Two of the houses in which he played turned over their boxes, and two others had enough of his game. Of his winnings, it is reported, he devoted $8,000 to "staking" his friends. Of the score or more "staked," but one, a man named Cullen, won. With the money furnished him he drew out $4,000 for himself and a like amount for Allen. Then, having paid $1,400 for debts, he proceeded to plunge on his own account and went broke.

CHEMICALS EXPLODE IN THE HERALD BUILDING

Three Engravers Badly Burned, Two of Whom May Die.

An explosion of chemicals in the etching room on the third floor of The Herald Building last evening probably fatally burned two engravers—Charles S. Hennessy, thirty-eight, of 722 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, and Fred Scheele of 16 Bergen Street, Brooklyn—and seriously burned Herman Sorensten of 203 East Forty-sixth Street, Manhattan.

The explosion occurred at 11:40 o'clock when the engravers were making plates for an edition. A number of these plates were in rocking pans containing in addition to other chemicals a liberal quantity of turpentine.

The plates were suspended over a series of gas jets, and one of the pans spilled over and igniting, the flames spread in an instant, causing an explosion that shook the building and was heard for several blocks. The etching room was demolished, and a partition separating a small room was blown down. A mass of material and chemicals was scattered promiscuously over both rooms.

The streets were filled with pedestrians at the time, and a panic followed, both among the employes of The Herald and on the street. In the city room of The Herald the reporters and editors at first thought a boiler in the cellar had burst, and a wild scramble was made for safety, most of the men making a break for the stairways. Several minutes elapsed before the exact location of the explosion was discovered, and as quickly as possible messages were sent to Bellevue and New York Hospitals for ambulance, and the reserves of the West Thirtieth Street Station were summoned.

In the meantime an excited crowd gathered on all four sides of the building. The crowd augmented every second and many tried to get into the building, and the few policemen in the vicinity were utterly unable to handle them. Just then Capt. Thomas, at the head of the reserves, charged into the crowd and succeeded in driving it back.

Before their arrival, however, some of The Herald employes ran to the etching room and there found the men on the floor groaning and calling for help. Hennessy was found to be the worst injured. He was burned in every part of his body and the ambulance physicians found it necessary to completely cover him with bandages. Scheele's burns extended to his face, head, and hands, and he had inhaled some of the fumes of the chemicals. Sorensten was similarly burned, but the physicians said his injuries were not as severe as those of his companions.

Hennessy, after his wounds were dressed, was taken down stairs and placed in the Bellevue ambulance, but he protested vigorously and demanded to be put in the New York ambulance, where the other two men had already been taken. The physicians demurred at first, but finally gave in, and when the crowd around the wagons saw that he had carried his point a cheer went up for the injured man.

Acting Night Editor John Burke, when asked about the explosion, said there had been a slight accident, and that a few men had been injured. He refused to talk further.

Capt. Thomas later, when talking about the accident, said that it was supposed that a sudden gust of wind blew the flame from one of the jets into a pan and the explosion followed. One of the office boys, it was afterward found, had a narrow escape from being killed. He was in the small room adjoining the etching room just a second or two before the explosion occurred, and had he been there the force of the collapsing partition would probably have crushed him.

There were 60 men in the composing room adjoining at the time, but they recovered their composure long before the other employes in the building found out just what had happened.

The damage to the building was nominal, being placed at $100.

ATTEMPT TO CORNER LARD.

Big Buying by the Cudahys—Deliveries Up to Now Small.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—The idea prevailed in the hog-product trading pit to-day that a number of prominent packers are about to lock horns as a result of an attempt on the part of the Cudahy interests to control the lard market, which, however, has only been partially successful up to the present time.

The Cudahy interests are credited with having secured a big line of December lard, their holdings being estimated at about 100,000 tierces. So far, the deliveries on December contracts have been relatively small. In the meantime the price has been held above that of January lard to the extent of 30 cents per 100 pounds. It appears that the packers and the people who are short to the Cudahy interests are holding off on their deliveries for the purpose of selling the daily manufacture, which is big, and is estimated at from 12,000 to 15,000 tierces in the West.

The country and western packing houses are selling largely in this market, this month's run of hogs being large. It is claimed there is a good Spring demand for lard. It has been assumed for some time that the packers who are short to the Cudahy interests have been taking all the lard they could, and it is claimed that last Tuesday, owing to the small deliveries, 4,750 tierces of loose lard were purchased by the Cudahy interests, they giving in return December futures or paying 27½ cents below the price of tierced lard, this representing the price of tiercing.

To-day there was heavy buying of January ribs, credited to the Cudahy interests. Inasmuch as the stock of January ribs last Saturday was only 12,000,000 pounds, and as thirty days are required to cure ribs to make them deliverable on speculative contracts, the result of the heavy buying by the Cudahys was to create a short interest, and perhaps the intention is to use these holdings as a lever to force packers who are short to make more liberal deliveries of lard.

PHILADELPHIA FIRM ASSIGNS.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—Snyder, Harris, Bassett & Co., incorporated, one of the largest clothing manufacturing concerns in this city, with headquarters at 525 Market Street, made an assignment to-day for the benefit of their creditors to Arnold Kohn, Emerson Snyder, and Preston Chambers, the two latter representing the stockholders. The assets of the firm are estimated at about $335,000 and the liabilities at $250,000, most of which is owed to the banks of this and neighboring cities.

Mr. Kohn, one of the assignees, said that all things seemed to point to an early and full settlement of all claims against the concern. There will be a meeting of the creditors in New York Friday, when matters relating to the assignment will be discussed and a course of action decided upon.

The failure came in the nature of a great surprise to the clothing trade, and, in fact, to all business circles, as the firm was considered one of the soundest in a financial way, in the country.

Locomotives Ready to Ship to France.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—American locomotives have captured the French Government, and shortly a shipment of forty engines will be sent to that country. These have been completed at the Baldwin Locomotive Works in this city, and will be loaded on the Norwegian steamship Fortuna at Port Richmond, making one of the largest cargoes of this kind ever taken in one shipment from an American port. With each engine will be shipped interchangeable parts, to be used in event of breakage.

BIG BANKERS FEAST AND MAKE MERRY

Many Gems of Verse Enliven the Elaborate Menu.

SECRETARY GAGE'S ADDRESS

What is technically known as Group VIII. of the New York State Bankers' Association, really the bankers of old New York, representing one of the largest moneyed interests in the world, sat down to their annual dinner last night in the large ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria.

It

controlled as to volume by the price of interest-bearing United States bonds in Wall Street.

"Our independent treasury absorbs the circulating medium when active business most requires its use, only again to disburse it when falling revenues, the effect of industrial dullness, bring about an excess in expenditures. Industrial activity increases the public revenue, but is checked if not throttled by the enlarged contributions to the life funds in the public treasury.

"It is these influences," said the Secretary, "which have brought our industrial and commercial life into a too dangerous dependency upon our public finances. This marriage between these two whom God did not join together ought to be put asunder, but not by any hasty South Dakota divorce method is the separation to be accomplished. The children of this wedlock must not be dishonored. Time, attention, and great care must be exercised.

"If the course of trade with foreign nations which has marked the last three or four years is to continue we are to assume not long hence a financial relationship heretofore unknown. In the long past we have been under tribute of interest for the use of capital furnished from abroad; the promise is that we shall soon become recipients of interest on capital furnished by us for use abroad.

"To bring about this desirable end, new conditions are imposed, new questions arise, new knowledge is to be acquired, and as our horizon expands we must be ready to meet enlarging opportunities and to occupy wisely and well the broader field where our powers are to be exercised.

"Here at home, in our own land, we are witnesses to what is nearly a metamorphosis in previous conditions and methods of business. The consolidations of capital, the centralization of industries, excite new and serious inquiry as to the consequences and effects they may carry in their train. Are they the natural and healthful unfolding of a true economic movement? Will they carry beneficial fruits which will find an equitable distribution through the body politic as a whole, or will they prove to be engines of power by the aid of which the few can exploit the many?

TWO DANGERS APPARENT.

"My faith is strong in the first direction, but the real meaning and future influences of these modern phenomena should be studied and made clear to the general comprehension. Grave consequences depend upon it. Two dangers are apparent. One is that through prejudice and ignorance we may block the path of natural progress. The other is that the force and power involved in these great organizations may be utilized for oppression and robbery.

"The peculiar position of the banker as an intermediary in affairs gives him a special advantage in the study and comprehension of the question. His interests tied in as they are to varied and multiplied business activities, put him under bonds to do all he can for the general welfare. Upon his character, intelligence, fidelity, and truth, as applied to all of these questions, the country has the right to rely with confidence."

Assistant Attorney General James M. Beck, in responding to the toast "The Bar and the Banker," said that the bankers had given him a share in their gracious hospitality, while he, in return, could only give a speech, in which the words to the ideas would stand in the sacred ratio of 16 to 1.

"The balance of trade will, therefore, be to my favor," said Mr. Beck, "and you will make a draft upon my resources which I cannot honor. Here the analogy ceases, for it is you and not I that will go to protest. I must, therefore, throw myself upon your indulgence and ask you to practice the patience and philosophy of the old Scotch lady who was sick unto death with a very painful malady.

"Her minister sought to console her, and asked her whether she derived any consolation from the promises of Scripture, and she replied that she did. Much edified, he then asked her which one of the promises had given her the most consolation. She thought a moment, and then replied, 'Grin and bear it.' With equal patience I must ask you to accept my poor return for your gracious hospitality."

Mr. Beck said he preferred rather to talk to the diners of their own profession than on the bar, although, he said, he knew little about the former.

"In this regard," he added, "I am very much like a certain Western Congressman, who, prior to the Presidential election of 1896, argued to the voters that between the price of silver and the price of wheat there was a certain parity, and that wheat rose and fell with the rise and fall of silver.

"After the election wheat commenced to rise and silver continued to fall, and he was then asked to reconcile these facts with his ante-election predictions. He boldly claimed that the facts entirely harmonized with his opinions, for, said he, 'If silver continues to fall and wheat continues to rise, they will cost the same—per bushel.'"

THE BANKER AND THE STATESMAN.

Mr. Beck then said he preferred to speak of the American banker as a statesman. He continued:

"A distinguished naval officer has acquired world-wide fame by a book which seeks to demonstrate the fact that the sea power is the chief means of national defense. Why does not some banker write a similar book to show that the banking interests of a country, far more than the sea power, constitutes the very bulwark of national defense?

"The true Gibraltar of England is not that mighty promontory at the gates of the Mediterranean Sea, but that smoke-begrimed building in the great metropolis from which the Bank of England controls the destinies of civilization. Let the 'Old Lady of Threadneedle Street' tremble, and the effect is felt around the world.

"The strongest defense of the English Empire lies not in those mighty steel-sheathed fleets—swift shuttles of an Empire's loom—but depends upon her financial resources, with which she has hitherto maintained her supremacy as an empire builder.

"Napoleon said that the god of battles was on the side of the heaviest battalions, but he could have added with more truth, 'and the biggest army chest,' for without credit and resources neither an army nor a navy is possible. A century ago all Europe was but a chessboard, upon which two young men moved kings, knights, bishops, castles, and pawns at will.

"They played for the mastery of the world, the one, Napoleon, who at the age of thirty-five pressed the crown of Charlemagne upon his head, and the other, young Pitt, who at the age of twenty-three was the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The military genius of the one was checkmated by the statesmanship of the other, whose chief weapon, as Napoleon himself bitterly complained, was English gold.

Mr. Beck sketched the history of the power of finance throughout the history of the Republic, and in conclusion said:

"I have endeavored to do that which your own modesty would prevent you from doing—to call attention to the values of the banking power, which need yield nothing in importance to that of the sea power of which Capt. Mahan has written.

"No prejudice can be much more ignoble and absurd than that against the banker. He maintains the equilibrium between the supply and demand for money, borrowing from those who need it not and lending to those who do. He stands sentinel to-day and guards the most sacred and precious interests. The subsistence of old age, the portion of the widow, and the inheritance of the fatherless are all in his keeping. His occupation is in the truest sense a sacred one.

It needs in character. The man who despises money despises the blessings of life, for a dollar is more than a piece of glittering metal. It is a certified check upon the bank of civilization for a proportionate share of its accumulated capital of happiness. And, therefore, gentlemen, the law, in my most modest person, salutes your most useful and honored profession to-night." [Great applause.]

"The Other Bar and the Banker," was the toast to which Simeon Ford of the Grand Union Hotel responded, and he kept the diners in a roar of laughter throughout his address.

MR. FORD'S HUMOR.

"A year ago," said Mr. Ford, "you may remember (those of you who were sufficiently in possession of your faculties) I sat up here among the elect, with Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan on the one side and the Rev. Dr. Greer on the other, suspended, like Mohammed's coffin, 'twixt heaven and earth. During dinner I tried to work Mr. Morgan for a tip, but found I was up against his deaf ear. Dr. Greer tried to work me for a contribution to his mission school, but he found he was up against my deaf ear. So this year I am asked to be seated down among the riffraff of bank presidents. It is a mistake for a man to go out of his class.

"I noticed about ten thousand of you bankers on the 3d of November rubbering up town in the wet-goods parade. Several of you had taken so many precautions against catching cold that I don't believe you fully realized the difference between the full dinner pail and the empty coal scuttle. I saw one prominent banker make several ineffectual efforts to get through the Dewey Arch, and finally give it up and walk around. He said it was an outrage to obstruct the highway with an edifice under which an ordinary load could not pass. He then fell in with the plumbers, where he was received with open arms. As they say at Weber & Fields's, 'One touch of nature makes the whole world skin!'

"To me, the most impressive sight of the parade was when the bankers broke ranks at Forty-first Street and broke for my bar-room. I was not only impressed, but deeply touched. About 200 bankers touched me for a drink. William McKinley's button was on their breasts, but King William's old vatted Glenlivet was in their midst. When one reflects upon the vast quantity of liquid refreshment, which, like a resistless torrent, swept up Broadway that day, it is not to be wondered at that McKinley went in on a tidal wave.

Col. Barnes read a telegram and a letter of regret from Secretary Long, who was down to respond to the toast, "The Navy and the Bankers." Secretary Long regretted that the ill health of Mrs. Long and the press of business prevented his attendance.

PULPIT AND BANKER.

The Rev. Dr. Van de Water responded to the toast, "The Pulpit and the Banker." He said that there was not one particle of truth in the statement that "the rich are growing richer and the poor poorer." The rich, he declared, have learned the lesson of what to do with their wealth.

"The Army and the Banker" was responded to by Col. George B. Davis. His remarks were confined to a eulogy of his branch of the service.

St. Clair McKelway said that the true limit on the speakers reminded him of a note written by one candid friend to another to "steal five minutes some day and tell me all you know about finance."

"The gold standard was a test fact," continued Mr. McKelway. "Those honestly and heartily for it have no regrets to register, no mistakes to renounce. Those against it have apologies to make. Still, I think they will be forgiven before those are who used gold to chill patriotism in the late contest.

"Worse than the enemies of our currency are the enemies of our country—the man before the dollar, when the man is on the firing line repelling the assallants of the National flag and making the bounds of freedom wider yet. [Cheers.]

'Parties have a propensity to folly, but not a passion for suicide," continued Mr. McKelway. "No wrong has ever been beaten a third time in American elections. Two knockouts have sufficed for a funeral, and the corpse has always been ready and mourners few.

"As truly as the indestructibility of the Union was settled at Appomattox was the permanency of honest money for America settled last November at the polls."

MR. COMSTOCK'S ANSWER.

His Version of the Anti-Policy Legislation Attacked by F. Norton Goddard.

Anthony Comstock, Secretary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, yesterday issued a statement replying to the recent criticisms made by F. Norton Goddard respecting his attitude toward policy shops and his suggestions of legislative methods of dealing with them.

The statement in part is as follows:

"Mr. Goddard's insinuations about 'improper affiliations with friends of the policy business at Albany' last Winter is a perversion of fact and malignantly false. Mr. Goddard has had but a limited experience, and seems to be radically ignorant of the decisions of the higher courts in their interpretation of the law. He proposed to amend existing laws by a bill drawn by one of his attorneys, and introduced in the Legislature last Winter.

"The bill was so loosely drawn, contained so many foolish absurdities and objectionable features that in order to preserve existing laws I prepared a substitute bill; and believing Mr. Goddard honest, fair-minded, and honorable, I showed him my bill and offered to co-operate with him in securing important amendments.

"Mr. Goddard took my substitute bill and went over it with his attorney. In the end they adopted it, with one or two omissions. Going up on the train together to appear before the Senate committee, we discussed the matter and agreed that I should introduce the bill as they had prepared it and leave it to the committee, and I was not to say anything about the matter before the committee, unless they brought it up, and we were to abide by the decision of the committee.

The Senate Committee unanimously adopted the substitute bill. Returning upon the train, Mr. Goddard congratulated me upon my address before the committee. Subsequently, however, and in violation of the agreement which we made upon the train, he used all his influence to defeat the amendments, while I faithfully endeavored to secure the passage of the bill pursuant to our agreement. Mr. Goddard violated his agreement and then tried to besmirch me.

"It may not be improper to add that I attacked lottery and policy years before F. Norton Goddard had been heard of. I acquired my knowledge of the law and my experience in prosecuting these criminals in a much larger field than Mr. Goddard ever attained unto."

PNEUMATIC TUBES IN BOSTON.

Court Refuses to Stop Construction of a System.

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—Judge Morton, in the Supreme Court, to-day, refused an injunction on the petition of J. B. Mulholland of Lewis, N. Y., and others, to restrain the Boston Pneumatic Transit Company from continuing its work on the construction of an underground pneumatic tube system in Boston for the purpose of carrying packages, parcels, mail, &c., the work on which is nearly completed.

The action was brought on the ground that the contract of the Boston Pneumatic Transit Company, with the American Pneumatic Service Company, to do the work for $137,000, is illegal, as it was secretly made by the same Trustees acting for both the contracting companies, in alleged violation of the fiduciary relation which they hold toward the plaintiffs as stockholders in the Massachusetts company, for whose benefit, as well as the other stockholders, they hold the Boston company in trust.

Pneumatic Tube to Hartford, Conn.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 19.—A pneumatic tube company, which has petitioned the incoming Legislature for incorporation and which will have, it was reported to-day, $1,000,000 capital, purposes to run a main tube from New York to Hartford, through Bridgeport, New Haven, and Meriden. One of the features of the project is said to be the practically instantaneous delivery of newspapers from New York to various cities in Connecticut. New York and Hartford capitalists are interested in the plan.

THE WESTERNLAND DISABLED.

Red Star Liner Loses Propeller—Being Towed to Southampton.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The British steamer Somerhill, Capt. Cooke, from Newport News, Dec. 1, for Ipswich, passed the Lizard to-day having in tow the Red Star liner Westernland, Capt. Ehoff, which sailed from Antwerp on Dec. 15 for New York.

The Trier's Machinery Out of Order.

PONTA DELGADA, Azores, Dec. 19.—The North German steamer Trier, Capt. Von Decker, which sailed from Bremen, Dec. 1, for New York, has put in here. She has 630 passengers on board. The circulating pump valves of the Trier are out of order, her steering gear is disabled, and she is short of coal. The Trier reports that between Dec. 9 and 15 she encountered three separate hurricanes, the seas constantly washing over her. She saw two other liners in distress, but was unable to distinguish the signals.

LINCOLN BANK DIRECTORATE.

William Rockefeller Chosen, Increasing Standard Oil Representation.

William Rockefeller of the Standard Oil Company of New York was yesterday elected a Director of the Lincoln National Bank to fill a vacancy of long standing. Mr. Rockefeller's election has no significance further than that it increases the interests in the institution of the New York Central Railroad, of which he is a Director, as well as those of the Standard Oil Company, and co-ordinately the National City Bank.

The last previous addition to the Lincoln Bank Directorate was in the election in August of James Stillman, President of the National City Bank, when Mr. Stillman increased his holdings by purchasing 1,000 shares of Lincoln Bank stock from Cornelius Vanderbilt.

FAITH CURISTS DIE OF TYPHOID.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Dec. 19.—Charles Mosher, aged thirty-five, and his son Harold, aged ten, are dead from typhoid fever, and a daughter is not expected to live. The mother was sick, but is recovering. The father died yesterday, while the boy died Sunday. The family are followers of the Dowie faith and refused to have physicians. The sick members refuse to take medicine.

CHIEF DEVERY DEFIES PRESIDENT YORK

WILL NOT RESIGN, HE SAYS

Declares Politics Will Not Be Allowed to Interfere with the Police Department While He is Chief.

Chief of Police William S. Devery made it plain yesterday in a dictated statement that the police situation is narrowed down to an issue between him and Bernard J. York, President of the Police Board, and that the Chief's attitude toward the Willoughby Street Democracy is a minor factor in affairs. The statement, issued at his home, 310 West Twenty-eighth Street early yesterday morning, was a joint compilation of its official author and his friends. This is his statement:

"I am still Chief of Police. I expect to remain Chief of Police. I question the right of the Police Board to remove me. Within a few days I shall be back at my desk in Mulberry Street attending to my duties.

"I think it is high time politics were removed from the Police Board. I am Chief of Police for the people—not for the politicians.

"My work has been constantly hampered and impeded by President York and Deputy Chief McLaughlin.

"President York told me to keep my hands off Brooklyn and that he would be responsible for affairs there.

"As for Deputy Chief McLaughlin, he refused to take orders from me. He has never visited my office since I have been Chief.

"The transfers that I made in the Police Department were on my own judgment and without consultation with any other official. I want to tell the people of New York that I am prepared to stand on my judgment.

"York and the Brooklyn crowd have been throwing mud at me since Saturday. I want to tell you something about Mr. York and his Brooklyn people. When I was made Chief of Police York told me I must keep my hands off Brooklyn. He said he would be responsible for that borough.

"I did keep my hands off and let him run it. But one thing concluded I was Chief of Police for the people of this community and not for the politicians. York and Deputy Chief McLaughlin ran Brooklyn to suit themselves. McLaughlin did nothing. He sailed around with a high hat on the back of his head.

"I never could get him to my office at Police Headquarters. He has never been there since I was Chief of Police. I never talked police business with him, because I could not get him to come.

"I could do nothing in Brooklyn on account of York, and knew nothing about what was going on there. York's instructions were for me to keep my hands off.

"I refused to do so any longer, and you know what the result is. I did not want to bring trouble. Whatever is going on there that is wrong York is responsible for. He said he would be, and he is.

"I made up my mind to remove McLaughlin because I believe in the people, and not politicians, running the Police Department.

"I don't give a rap what Whalen says about my right to make transfers. I know what I was doing, and I stand by what I have done. The Police Board can make the Deputy Chief, but after they have made him he is subject to the orders of the Chief of Police.

"When the charter was framed it provided for the organization of the Police Department. It gave the right to the Police Department to appoint the Chief and his deputies, but after their appointment the Commissioners had nothing more to do with their disposition, except in the case of charges.

WILL REMAIN CHIEF.

"Let me tell you, I am not 'stuck' on my place. Providence put me there. I didn't have much help. But since I'm here I am going to be the Chief, and nobody else. I am not going to resign. Get that straight. Neither am I afraid of the Police Board removing me.

"I question their power to do so. If the board deems fit to make transfers over my head, that is another matter. They know the law on that subject, and so do I.

"I have seen it printed that the transfers were part of a political deal. Now let me say most emphatically that Tammany Hall, Senator Platt, or any other politician had nothing to do with it. There was no political interference.

"I am not dealing with politicians as Chief of Police. And you can say right here that I believe that there is no place in the Police Department for politics.

"And you can say further that politics will not be permitted to interfere with it while I am Chief of Police. I won't have it, and they know I won't have it.

"I believe in putting men in responsible positions who know how to treat people decently.

"If you ask why I removed Chief of Detectives McClusky, I'll tell you. Because he was too 'chesty.' I look upon the Detective Bureau as part of my own office. It is created as part of the Police Department, and is under the supervision of the Chief of Police.

"I have in the Chief of Detectives controlling his own men, but at the same time I want to know what is going on. Under McClusky I did not.

"Take the Rice case, the Peck murder, and other mysteries. I wanted to know all about those cases. I worked just as hard as any other man in this department, and I am responsible for the entire police.

"Now, I couldn't get McClusky to give me any information. When I sent for him he swelled up and seemed affronted. As Chief of Police I could not and would not tolerate that.

"The sort of men I want in responsible positions in this department are men like Titus. He is an able officer, treats people well, and understands his business.

"McClusky was a good man, too; conducted his office ably, only he was too 'chesty.'

"They say I sent my own men down to Coney Island to look after things. I never did. I haven't any of my own men to send. York and McLaughlin did send their men down there, and whatever has gone wrong they know about it and are responsible for it.

"They've been shielding themselves too long. I don't propose to stand for what York is responsible for.

"As to the other transfers, I haven't anything against the men, but it is good for the department to shake them up now and then.

"I repeat that all the transfers were made solely on my own judgment, without consultation with another individual, and absolutely without political advice."

"That," said Chief Devery last night, "places my position and views before the public."

"Does what you say about President York apply to Hugh McLaughlin and the Willoughby Street Democracy?"

"I will not say anything about that. I stand by the statement."

"Do you mean that the Board of Police has no power to remove you?"

"I do not intend to intimate that. I know that it has that power—if there's a majority vote on it."

"Then you count on a majority vote to retain you?"

"I did not say that, and am not discussing that point. I said that I wouldn't talk any more about my statement."

"Are you going to remain away the full thirteen days that are due you?"

"I am going to remain in town and enjoy myself. But thirteen is an unlucky number, and it's likely that I'll shave off a day or so and go back to duty before New Year's. Now, no more, and good night."

POLICE BOARD MAY ACT.

President York declared last night that he had not studied Chief Devery's declaration of independence. "Keep it away from me. I have more important matters to think of. I don't care what he says."

"But he holds you responsible for vicious conditions in Brooklyn—"

"I don't care whether he holds me responsible or not. It's a matter of no concern to me."

"He says he is Chief of Police, and defies you."

"He does, eh? We may settle that to-morrow."

"What action will you take? Will it be at the board meeting?"

"Can't tell until the meeting is over."

"Will there be action taken affecting Chief Devery at the meeting?"

"Now, I decline to talk further. It's no use questioning me. I'll not entertain the subject."

Capt. George W. McClusky of the Grand Central Police Station command said last night of the Chief's explanation of his transfer from the Detective Bureau:

"I have read it. I am a policeman, and have nothing to say in regard to what Chief Devery may see fit to say about me."

President York went to the Law Department yesterday afternoon and talked with Corporation Counsel John Whalen and First Assistant Counsel Theodore Connoly about his request for an opinion on the power of the Chief of Police to transfer Deputy Chiefs. Mr. Whalen afterward said:

"I see that I am to give an opinion that Chief Devery had not the power to transfer Deputy Chiefs McLaughlin and Clayton. Now, I have not yet decided on my report, so it is not yet drawn, and I shall give no hint as to what my opinion will be when it is formed. It may be drawn up to-morrow. In such case it will go to President York, and its nature will not be known until he chooses to make it public."

"Are the wires 'hot,' Mr. Whalen, with messages from Mr. Croker giving instructions in regard to Chief Devery and the police situation?"

"Nonsense! Such talk was indulged in when the vice crusade started, and I said that Mr. Croker had such confidence in me that he would not trouble to wire instructions from Europe."

Deputy Chief W. W. McLaughlin said last night that the report that he had been transferred from the Central Office to the Borough of the Bronx was absurd. "Under the old rule," he added, "I should have my office in the borough, but it was at Police Headquarters. Last week it was arranged that I should move to the Bronx, and I am moving."

COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN MEET.

Outline a Plan for Their Crusade and Elect Officers.

The Committee of Fifteen met yesterday afternoon in the office of George Foster Peabody and elected William H. Baldwin Chairman, Prof. E. R. A. Seligman Secretary, and George Foster Peabody Treasurer. The only absentees from the meeting were Austen G. Fox and William J. O'Brien, one of the labor representatives. The following report of the sub-committee as to the plan and scope of the committee's work was given out;

1. To institute a searching inquiry, uninfluenced by partisan considerations, into the causes of the present alarming increase of gambling and the social evil in the city, and to collect such evidence as shall establish the connection between existing conditions and those who, in the last analysis, are responsible for these ends.

2. To publish the results of such investigation in order to put our fellow-citizens in possession of facts and to enable them to adopt such corrective measures as may be needed.

3. To promote such legislation as shall render it less difficult to reach offenders, and as shall put an end to the shifting and division of responsibility in the local administration of the laws relating to vice and crime, and to the end that public officers and their subordinates may be held to a strict accountability for their acts.

4. To suggest and promote the provision of more wholesome conditions and surroundings in order to lessen the allurements and incentives to vice and crime.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock at the United Charities Building, in Fourth Avenue, where permanent quarters will be established. The committee, Mr. Baldwin says, has ample funds for the work.

"GUILTY," SAYS HUGH McLAUGHLIN.

Hugh McLaughlin, the Brooklyn Democratic leader, said last evening that the reasons advanced by Chief Devery for the police shake-up were ridiculous.

"That statement must appear to any intelligent person as the plea of a guilty man," he said. "It is a ridiculous answer to a serious proposition.

"Deputy Chief McLaughlin was transferred, it seems, because he wore a plug hat. Now, that is certainly very serious, isn't it? To my knowledge he has had the plug hat habit for twenty years, and therefore he should never have got above the ranks, if, indeed, he should have been allowed to continue on the force.

"And there's McClusky. Look at the terrible crime that led the conscientious and zealous Devery to remove him! 'McClusky is too chesty,' says Devery. Well, that must be something heinous. I don't know what it is. Devery ought to send some one of his friends over here to interpret that expression to Brooklyn folks. We're not slangy people over here, and we find it hard to understand Devery sometimes.

"Devery reminds me of a man who thought he was big enough to swallow a ship whole. He swallowed a sloop and then tried to appear comfortable with the mast sticking up through his throat and out of his mouth."

SLAVERY'S GOOD TO NEGROES.

Major Pratt Says It Was the Black's Bridge to Civilization.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Dec. 19.—In reply to a protest from Bishop Francis H. Hill of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, Major Richard H. Pratt, Superintendent of the Carlisle Indian School and an officer in the Tenth (colored) Cavalry, has written to Bishop Hill defending his assertions as to the benefits of slavery for the negro.

Major Pratt last week delivered an address before the Cumberland County Teachers' Institute, in which he spoke of slavery as having been the means of developing the negro race and bringing it into a beneficial contact with civilization. On the appearance of a report of his address Bishop Hill, who lives at Harrisburg, addressed a vigorous letter to the Major, demanding to know on what grounds he justified negro slavery. Major Pratt in his reply said, in part;

"My Dear Brother Hill: What I said was that slavery had brought 10,000,000 blacks from the torrid zone into this enlightened country, taught them a new language, and prepared them by association for citizenship. I am beginning to question whether freedom for your people in the United States is going to be such a boon to you and to the United States.

"We blame the people of the South for 'Jim Crow' cars. The United States makes a constitutional amendment that there shall be no distinction 'on account of race, color, or previous conditions of servitude.' Then Congress immediately legislates that there shall be two regiments of cavalry and two of infantry, made up entirely of colored men.

"You certainly have no grounds to quarrel with slavery unless you regret being transplanted from the jungles of Africa and your low estate there to the citizenship, freedom, and intelligence in the United States you now enjoy, for slavery was the bridge that carried you over, and there was not, and is not, another bridge equal to that job."

GIRLS BROKE THROUGH THE ICE.

Sank in Twenty Feet of Water, but Rescued with Ladder and Rope.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 19.—Cecelia Gramshaw, eighteen years old, of 140 Governor Street, and Annie Handwerk, sixteen years old, of Auburn Street, were rescued from drowning to-night, after a plunge in the Passaic River, near Great Falls.

They were skating, and went through the ice, sinking in about twenty feet of water. There were hundreds of other skaters near, and many tried to aid the two girls. A long ladder was procured and pushed out until the end of the ladder reached the point where the girls went down. A rope was thrown to the girls, they got hold of it, and were dragged out upon the ice.

GEN. GREENE TO RETIRE

Will Not Accept Re-election as Chairman of Republican Committee

LETTER TO COLLEAGUES FINAL

Communication Was Unexpected and Came as a Great Surprise—His Probable Successor.

Gen. Francis Vinton Greene will not accept a re-election as President of the Republican County Committee. He has so declared in a letter to the executive branch of the organization, which met yesterday. Gen. Greene was not present, and William H. Ten Eyck presided. In his letter Gen. Greene said:

After giving the matter the most careful consideration I find that it will be impossible for me to give to the office that close personal attention which it requires, and I am therefore compelled to inform you in advance that I shall not be a candidate for re-election, and that it will be necessary for you and the other members of the committee to make another choice. In leaving the office of President I desire to thank the members of the committee for their loyal and hearty support throughout the arduous and successful campaign which closed on Nov. 6.

When the letter had been read by Secretary George R. Manchester, Mr. Ten Eyck said:

"This announcement is a severe shock and a great surprise to me. I have seen Gen. Greene several times since his return from California, but at none of our interviews did the General give me the least intimation of his intention. I don't know what is best to do under the circumstances."

Then ex-Senator Frederick S. Gibbs arose and remarked: "This announcement has come very suddenly and unexpectedly. It will be best to go slowly and make no selection of a successor until there has been an opportunity for deliberation."

The new Republican County Committee is to meet at the Murray Hill Lyceum, on East Thirty-fourth Street, to-night for organization, but in view of Gen. Greene's action an adjournment for one week will be taken.

The Executive Committee made progress with the arrangements for the attendance of Republicans at the inauguration of B. B. Odell, Jr., as Governor, and William McKinley as President.

When Gen. Greene was seen at his home last night he declared he would not accept a re-election. He said he had given the greater part of his time in 1898-9 to the work of the Canal Commission, and that for the past year had devoted much of his time, to the detriment of his personal affairs, to the affairs of the County Committee.

Now that Gen. Greene is out of the way, there is much speculation as to his possible successor. Lemuel E. Quigg, who preceded him, is favored by many. He is now on his way home from Havana, and is expected in New York on Saturday or Sunday.

William N. Ten Eyck and George W. Wanmaker are both mentioned, but their friends say that while they could well fill the place it would hardly be the right thing to ask them to resign their official positions. Charles A. Hess and Job E. Hedges are also mentioned.

Another matter that developed at the meeting yesterday, while it formed no part of the proceedings, was a decided antagonism to Senator Platt's proposed measures. It was an open secret that Frederick S. Gibbs, W. H. Ten Eyck, Thomas L. Hamilton, William Halpin, and half a dozen others don't approve of the single-headed Police Commission measure.

TO MAKE PAPER IN MINNESOTA.

Syndicate of Principal Concerns in the Country Buys 100,000 Acres of Spruce Timber Land.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—Minnesota will, in the near future, be the great paper-making State of the Union. A syndicate, comprising almost all of the principal paper manufacturers of the country has purchased 100,000 acres of spruce timber land in the northern portion of the State and taken an option on several thousand acres more, and will proceed to erect great pulp mills.

The syndicate includes the owners of nearly every paper and pulp mill in the United States, and has several millions of dollars at its back. It is said that the intention of the promoters is to make paper on such a large scale that the prices of common white paper will be cut in half.

The State officials are being harshly criticised for selling all of the spruce timber lands of the State to the syndicate. For a long time past the paper men have had representatives in the field here, and this purchase is the result.

COAL FAMINE IN ALABAMA.

Mines Unable to Meet the Demand from Railroads and Industries.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 19.—The Alabama railroads and those taking Alabama coal are undergoing a regular famine, the mines not being able to meet the demand upon them made by the railroads and the industries of the Birmingham district. C. A. Wickersham, President of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad and the Western of Alabama, was in Birmingham to-day endeavoring to make the mines supplying his system live up to the terms of contract. His lines alone are short 5,000 tons. All other roads are in similar straits.

The Alabama coal mines have enjoyed the most active demand in their history for two years and more; not a day occurring during that time when the supply exceeded the demand, and the present status has frequently existed, in spite of the scores of new mines that have been opened.

Will Erect Monument to Garibaldi.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—The United Italian Societies of Chicago have chosen the plans and model for the monument to be erected to the memory of Garibaldi in Chicago. Signor Victor Gherardi, the New York sculptor, is now at work on the monument. It will consist of a bronze statue of Gen. Garibaldi, mounted on a granite pedestal. The base will be about twelve feet and the statue nine feet high. The monument is to stand in Lincoln Park and will be sent here June 1, 1901, though it will not be unveiled until Sept. 2.

HEARING IN GARDINER CHARGES

To Be Held in Albany Saturday—No Postponement—Hearing To-day in Case of Dr. Peter W. Wise.

ALBANY, Dec. 19.—Gov. Roosevelt arrived here from New York at 6:40 o'clock this evening and proceeded at once to the Executive Mansion. The Governor said that he intended to give a hearing on the charges preferred against Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, District Attorney of New York County, for alleged failure to prosecute offenders of the election law, on Saturday morning at the Executive Chamber.

The Governor further said that there would be no postponement of the hearing even if it was found necessary to conduct it at the bedside of the District Attorney. No written answer to the charges has been filed with the Governor as yet, but it is expected to arrive to-morrow.

To-morrow morning at the Executive Chamber the Governor will give a hearing on charges preferred against Dr. Peter W. Wise, President of the State Commission in Lunacy, by Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York City. The Governor refused to state the nature of the charges, but intimated, as in the case of Col. Gardiner, that if necessary he would go to Dr. Wise's home and hold the hearings there.

Governor-elect Odell was expected to join Gov. Roosevelt as his guest for a day or two at the Executive Mansion, but found it impossible to keep the engagement owing to a great pressure of business. Gov. Roosevelt will spend Christmas week with his family at Oyster Bay.

COL. GARDINER'S ANSWER.

His Defense and That of His Assistants Will Go to Governor To-day.

District Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner's answer to the charges preferred by Deputy Attorney General John Henry Hammond will be placed in Gov. Roosevelt's hands to-day. Col. Gardiner's reply consists of affidavits from each of his assistants mentioned in the charges who enter specific denials to each allegation. The most important affidavit is that of Assistant District Attorney Unger, who was charged with obstructing the Attorney General in the presentation of election violations to the Grand Jury. Mr. Unger states that the instance referred to by Mr. Hammond occurred on Nov. 1, when he presented the Grand Jury the evidence against the proprietor and inmates of a notorious resort in Bleecker Street.

"I had previously spoken to Mr. Hedges and Mr. Hammond," said Mr. Unger, "and sought to arrange with them to let me know at least two days in advance when they wished to go on with their cases so that we could gauge the work of the Grand Jury accordingly." On this day, says Mr. Unger, Mr. Hammond appeared without previous warning and requested that he be permitted to submit some cases to the Grand Jury. While he was still present, late in the afternoon, Mr. Unger says he advised the Grand Jury of the exceptional aggravation of the Bleecker Street case, whereupon they properly said they would take it up."

District Attorney Gardiner denied yesterday that either or any of his assistants had any fear as to the outcome of the charges.

READY TO VOTE ON TREATY

Senators, Tired of Discussion, Have Nothing More to Say.

Prospect for a Vote on the Canal Bill at This Session Is Not Bright—Linked with Shipping Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—To-morrow, according to agreement, the Senate will reach a vote on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and will assert to the extent a two-thirds majority shall determine its co-ordinate right to negotiate treaties. The vote might have been taken to-day, for when upon Senator Lodge's motion the doors were closed and he called up the treaty, no Senator evinced a desire to speak upon it.

Nearly everything that the Senate has regarded as of importance that has been said in the executive sessions has been made public, quite without regard for the rule of the Senate prohibiting the giving of information upon international matters pending before that body. Not since the Senate dismissed its chief executive clerk, with the intimation that he had given information to the press of the sessions at which he was expected to be present, and then abolished the office of Chief Executive Clerk, has there been such unblushing publication of secret discussions, and so little pretense that the Senate ought not to have given it out.

Those Senators who still believe that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty should have been adopted as Mr. Hay drew it, and those who have from conviction or the belief that compromise was necessary to get any treaty at all, supported the amendments look for ratification, and the impression is growing that it may be accepted by Great Britain. That impression is not entertained at the Department of State, although there is no pretense that the British Ambassador has made any communication calculated to give the idea that the amended treaty will certainly be rejected.

Senators expect that Great Britain will be deliberate, and that it may be some weeks before a positive opinion can be expected from the Ambassadors. With the adoption of the declaration superseding the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the declination to inform the powers that the United States has decided to neutralize the canal without consent or assistance, it is certain that a feeling of doubt has been created as to what Great Britain may do with the treaty when offered to that Government.

Perhaps the most anxious Senator is Mr. Morgan, who desires prompt action upon the Nicaragua Canal bill. He would not wait a moment if he consulted merely his own desires and plans. He argues to other Senators that if Great Britain accepts the amended treaty there will be no obstacle to the passage of the canal bill, and if the treaty is rejected he depends upon the Congress to pass the canal bill as an expression of the independence manifested in the treaty as reshaped.

Meantime the discussion continues touching the effect of the flight of time and the employment of almost the entire session prior to the holiday recess upon the treaty. When the Congress reassembles, after New Year's, its life will be but eight weeks long. In that time the Senate must pass upon the appropriation bills, none of which has been taken up.

Some time will be consumed in discussion of the Subsidy bill, if Mr. Hanna insists upon having it taken up. The Democrats cannot be prevented under the rules of the Senate from discussing it indefinitely, and almost every Senator of the minority is anxious to contribute to the discussion. Several Republican Senators also must discuss it, even at the risk of being considered dilatory.

The possibility of protracting debate on that bill, and on the Nicaragua Canal bill, is well known to the managers of the Republican side, and the prospect is not distasteful to all of them. Even among Senators who are counted in Mr. Hanna's canvass as ready to vote for ship subsidies, some admit that they are not at all confident that Mr. Hanna will be able to realize his expectation and that a vote will be taken before the end of January, or even before the Congress expires.

TILLMAN'S CANAL RESOLUTION.

Colombia Has Made No Offer Concerning a Canal, Nor Has the Panama Company.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Senator Tillman's resolution asking for copies of all correspondence between the United States and Colombia relative to the Panama Canal will not be productive of very large results. The State Department will reply that it has no offers from Colombia. The Central American dispatches state that Colombia is about to make certain propositions, but she has not done so yet. The Colombian Legation is, however, about to be re-established, and it is reported that the new Minister will make an offer to the United States concerning the canal.

Senator Morgan's amendment to the Tillman resolution will produce some information, but not what the Senators favoring it desire. This amendment calls for information about the offers made by the Panama Company. The Panama Company has made no offer in writing to the State Department. Informally President Hutin has communicated something about his company's intentions, but not even orally has he made a definite offer. It is understood that the Panama Company is not ready to make a proposition for a sale, but is desirous of giving the United States simply a controlling interest.

WILL FIGHT CANTEEN PROVISION.

Conference of Church and Temperance Bodies in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—A conference of Church and temperance bodies favoring the anti-canteen section of the House Army bill was held here to-day. The bodies represented by delegates or communications were the permanent Committees on Temperance in the Presbyterian Church in the United States, the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Disciples of Christ, the Universalist Church, the Friends, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the National Non-Partisan Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the National Division of the Sons of Temperance of North America. Representatives of the Baptist and Congregational Churches and Independent Order of Good Templars participated as individuals.

The Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, Legislative Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, said after the conference:

"The conference held to-day indicated that the bodies represented, having a constituency of about 8,000,000, will not be content with any compromise such as has been reported by the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, but will insist on the anti-canteen provision as it passed the House.

"Our reasons for this position are, first, that the present system has been tried for a number of years, and by the testimony both of army officers and others outside fully competent to judge, is proved a failure both as a temperance measure in the army and in closing up the outside saloons. Second, that the sale of intoxicating liquor in the army canteen is an unnecessary and unwarranted temptation to drinking to hundreds and thousands of new recruits. Third, we are especially opposed to that feature of the canteen system which relies upon the profits of liquor selling to improve the mess and hospital service, and, fourth, the attempt to except beer from intoxicating liquors is not justified by the testimony of medical and other scientific authorities throughout the world, nor by the observation of those represented by the conference to-day."

Figaro Explains Canal Situation.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Referring to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty this morning, the Figaro says: "The Republicans, who were formerly the champions of the Nicaraguan Canal, doubtless wish to obtain the postponement of a project that would menace the Anglo-American entente, but their attitude is principally dictated by a fear of interfering with the interests of the managers of the Transcontinental railroads."

DADY'S HAVANA CONTRACT.

The Entire Matter Will Probably Be Carried to Washington.

HAVANA, Dec. 19.—The Municipal Council at to-day's session voted unanimously to incorporate in the advertisements for bids, in connection with the sewering and paving contract, the facts of Michael J. Dady's appraisement and the award of more than $500,000. It is believed that Mayor Rodriguez will veto the whole proceedings.

Mr. Dady expects that the fight will be carried to Washington, where Lemuel E. Quigg will go immediately. The military government and the engineers generally are disgusted at the outcome.

Cuba's First Habeas Corpus Case.

HAVANA, Dec. 19.—The Habeas Corpus act of the island will go into effect to-morrow. The first case under it will be that of an American of the name of Thompson, from Detroit, who is held on telegraphic request, under a charge of altering the books of the Standard Life Insurance Company. Thompson is represented by a Cuban attorney, and the developments of the case will be watched with interest.

Gen. Castillo's Sister a Suicide.

HAVANA, Dec. 19.—An invalid young woman, sister of Gen. Castillo of the Cuban Army, committed suicide to-day by shooting herself through the heart in her bathroom. The motive for the deed is believed to have been grief over the marriage of a sister.

SAYS HE GAVE FALSE TESTIMONY.

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 19.—In the hearing to-day on the petition for a pardon in the case of David L. Stain and Oliver Cromwell, both of whom are serving life sentences in the State Prison, at Thomaston, for the murder of John Wilson Barron, Cashier of the Dexter (Me.) Savings Bank, in February, 1878, the most notable testimony was that given by Charles F. Stain in the form of a deposition. The deponent, who is the son of David L. Stain, makes the following statement:

"My name is Charles Franklin Stain; my age is forty-six years. I reside in Canaan, N. H., and have resided there about two years. I am working at the business of a harnessmaker and go under the name of George Clark, by which I am generally known where I live. I am a son of the prisoner, David L. Stain, and brother-in-law of the prisoner Oliver Cromwell, who married my sister.

"At the trial of said prisoners, at Bangor, in February and March, 1888, for the alleged murder of John Wilson Barron, on Feb. —, 1878, I testified for the prosecution. All my testimony on that occasion insofar as it implicated said prisoners in the murder of said Barron, was false and was shown to be false when my testimony was given.

"My purpose or intention of giving said testimony was to cause said prisoners to be convicted of a murder which I then believed they did not commit and had no reason to believe they did commit. I gave said testimony partly because of malice toward my father and to have revenge upon him, partly through fear of exposure of a crime I had committed, and partly because of hope of reward.

"I give this affidavit voluntarily, of my own free will, without reward and without hope or promise of reward. I repent of having testified as I did at said trial, and desire, so far as possible, to rectify the wrong that was done by reason of my said testimony."

SHOT WITH "UNLOADED" GUN.

Husband Handled It, Wife Was Hurt, and Later Died of Pneumonia.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Dec. 19.—Mrs. John W. Griffin of Hyde Park died in Vassar Hospital in this city last night as the result of being accidentaly shot by her husband at their home last Saturday. Griffin and his wife's brother were preparing to go rabbit hunting, and the former was handling a hammerless shotgun, which, according to his story to Coroner Selfridge to-day, he did not know was loaded. The gun was discharged, and the bullet passed through his wife's shoulder. She fainted and her husband was terribly frightened.

As soon as Mrs. Griffin recovered consciousness she was removed to the hospital, where an examination showed that the injury was not serious. Soon, however, pneumonia set in and caused her death. She was twenty-two years of age, and had been married four years.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—The Rev. Dr. William Wallace Fenn, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, Chicago, was to-day elected Bussey Professor of Theology at Harvard University, to succeed Dr. Charles Carroll Everett, who died last month. Dr. Everett was also Dean of the Divinity School, but Dr. Fenn will not hold that position, which, it is expected, will go to the Rev. Dr. Francis G. Peabody, the Plummer Professor. Dr. Fenn was born in Boston and was graduated from Harvard in 1884 and from the Divinity School in 1887. He went to Chicago in 1891.

Sailors for the Variag Arrive.

On board the Rhynland were 225 Russian sailors, who will complete the crew of the Russian cruiser Variag, recently built by Cramps. Immediately after this vessel had been docked the Russian sailors were taken to the shipyard and went aboard the Variag. The cruiser has now her full complement of men and is ready to sail for Russia as soon as sailing orders are received.

Hayes Homestead to be Sold.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 19.—The Supreme Court has affirmed judgment of the lower courts in the case of Rutherford Platt Hayes et al. and Scott R. Hayes et al. vs. James Hunt, administrator. The decision necessitates the sale of Spigel Grove, the home of Rutherford B. Hayes, at Fremont, Ohio. The property was willed to the late President with a provision that an annuity should be paid to an insane uncle. At the death of the ex-President the annuity was stopped. The administrator of the uncle sued the Hayes heirs, and has won the suit.

THE BURNZ MURDER TRIAL.

Capt. McClusky Testifies that Defendant Confessed to Killing Fellows.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 19.—The most important evidence taken during the trial here of Edgar C. Burnz for the murder of Herbert B. Fellows, the Scarsdale station agent and Postmaster, was that of Mrs. Ida C. Angel of Scarsdale. Mrs. Angel testified that on the night of the murder she had given her son, Stephen Leroy, a fifty-cent piece with which to pay Station Agent Fellows the express charges on a package. She identified a fifty-cent piece which was produced in court, as being the one which she had given her son. This coin was found in the possession of Burnz after his arrest on a charge of murder.

Stephen Leroy corroborated his mother's testimony as to the coin. He said that Burnz was in the depot, and that all were engaged in commonplace conversation, one of the subjects being the age of the coin and its worn appearance.

Richard W. Powers, a conductor on the Harlem River Railroad, said that Brunz boarded his train at 11:18 at Tuckahoe on the night of the murder, and paid him 38 cents, the fare to New York. In paying his fare Burnz exhibited a good-sized roll of money.

Cornelius J. Sullivan, a New York Central Office detective, testified to arresting Harlem River Railroad, said that Burnz persistently denied to the detective that he had shot Fellows. Capt. McClusky of the New York Detective Bureau testified that he had obtained a confession from Burnz. Edward C. Humphries, stenographer at Police Headquarters, told about his taking the statement made by Burnz. The trial will be continued to-day.

MINISTER LOSES DIVORCE CASE.

Boston Court Decides the Dixon Matter —Co-respondent Is Dead.

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—Judge Fessenden to-day filed his decision in the divorce proceedings of the Rev. Dr. Joseph E. K. Dixon, formerly pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, this city, and his wife, Annie, entering a decree nisi in favor of Mrs. Dixon. The libel suit of Dr. Dixon against his wife on the charge of cruelty was dismissed as unproved. Mrs. Ella M. Ammerman, widow of ex-Congressman Ammerman of Pennsylvania, who died some months ago, was named as co-respondent by Mrs. Dixon.

The decision, it is said, will play an important part in the contest over the will left by Mrs. Ammerman, which bequeathed $55,000 to Dr. Dixon. The relatives of the woman contest the will on the ground of alleged undue influence.

H. WALTER WEBB'S ESTATE.

Appraiser Places the Value at Over $673,000—The Widow's Tax.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Anson Baldwin, who had been appointed appraiser of the estate of H. Walter Webb, who died recently at his country home at Scarborough, has filed his report in the Surrogate's Court.

He finds the gross estate to be worth $673,725.79. Mr. Webb left to Mrs. Webb $118,000, which was not taxable; which leaves $555,725.79 as the gross taxable estate. The expense of the appraisal was $4,000, which leaves $551,725.79 as the net estate to be taxed. The widow pays a tax of 1 per cent. Mr. Webb carried a life insurance of $144,170.

Engineer Finds Dead Body on Track.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Dec. 19.—The body of a dead man was found on the track of the Central Vermont Railroad by the engineer of the east-bound train about 10 A. M. to-day. He saw the body just ahead of the train and stopped just as the engine reached it, but before it had mangled it in any way. The dead man's head was covered with blood and a bullet hole was found at the base of the brain in the back of his head. Two men, John Julien and Frank Coolridge, staid over night at a hotel in Rouse's Point. Papers on the dead man's body sent him from Montreal showed that he was Julien, and the supposed murderer, who has been apprehended, is Coolridge.

Find Fault with Vaudeville Trust.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Though denial is made by interested managers, the rumor is current in theatrical circles that the Chicago members of the "Vaudeville Combine" are not satisfied with the treatment they are receiving from the Eastern members. The intimation is that the Eastern managers have so agreed among themselves on questions of salary and the like that they are able to keep the majority of the best vaudeville performers near the Atlantic Coast. Whether this is the cause or not, it is undeniable that Chicago is not being treated to its share of available vaudeville talent.

THE CLARENDON HOTEL IN BROOKLYN ABLAZE.

A fire which caused a great deal of excitement in the busy Borough Hall district, Brooklyn, and routed out the guests at the Clarendon Hotel, Washington and Johnson Streets, occurred at about 6 o'clock last evening in that house. For fear that the flames would spread through the hotel, and because of the close proximity of the Post Office and other large buildings, three alarms were sounded. When the alarm was given in the hotel the guests fled from their rooms to the ground floor and the street, and two of them had to be carried downstairs.

The fire started at the bottom of a flue leading from the kitchen ranges to the roof of the hotel, and is believed to have been caused by a back draught. One of the kitchen attendants ran upstairs when the flames were discovered and gave the alarm. The other employes in the kitchen succeeded in putting out the fire in the lower part of the flue before the firemen arrived.

The flames, however, had leaped up the flue to the third floor, where another fire was started. The hotel began to fill with smoke, and the guests, many of whom were dressing for dinner, fled down stairs in alarm. B. P. Sharp, proprietor of the Sharon House, Sharon Springs, N. Y., was among the guests who were in their rooms when the fire occurred. In September last Mr. Sharp was struck by a train at Gloversville and injured so that his left leg had to be amputated. He has been staying at the Clarendon with his son, A. E. Sharp, for some time. Mr. Sharp was carried down stairs by his son. S. L. Carlyle, another guest, who was in his room on the first floor, was carried down stairs by his wife. No one was injured.

Robert Fitzsimmons, the pugilist, with his wife and family, occupied apartments on the third floor of the hotel. Fitzsimmons is filling an engagement at a local theatre. He was getting ready to go down to the dining room when he heard the alarm of fire, and ran out into the hall. He said afterward that he saw smoke coming through the cracks of a small door opening into the shaft leading to the kitchen. Opening the door, Fitzsimmons says he saw that the interior of the shaft was ablaze. He procured a pail of water, and throwing it on the blazing woodwork, partially extinguished the flames. When the firemen arrived they ran a hose up through the interior of the hotel, and played a stream down into the blazing shaft, putting out the fire.

The police estimated the damage caused by the fire to be about $2,000. The hotel people said, however, that the damage would amount to much more than that, probably about $6,000, as several of the rooms up stairs and the men's dining room and café on the ground floor had been flooded.

SENATOR MARTIN HONORED.

Twentieth Year of His Reign as District Leader Commemorated at a Dinner.

Democrats of the Fifth Assembly District tendered to State Senator Bernard F. Martin a banquet last night at the St. Denis Hotel, in recognition of the twentieth year of his district leadership.

Two hundred and fifty of his friends crowded around the numerous tables in the banqueting room and for over three hours toasted the Senator. Eagles and flags and municipal coats-of-arms were displayed at every point of vantage, and the favorite district orchestra played Tammany's favorite tunes, in which the diners lustily joined when not otherwise engaged in praising the menu.

Civil Justice Moore presided at the guest table, at which were seated, among others, Senator Grady, John F. Carroll, Police Commissioner Sexton, Corporation Counsel Whalen, Charities Commissioner Keller, Surrogate Fitzgerald, and Senators Plunkitt and Trainor. Police Captain Halpin and Chief of Detectives Titus were also present.

The flow of eloquence began with the presentation of a set of engrossed resolutions to Senator Martin by Joseph Rowan.

"This is a gala night in the old Fifth District," began Mr. Rowan. "I might say a red-letter night."

"This isn't no red light district," shouted a Tammanyite in the rear, who didn't hear distinctly. Mr. Rowan continued:

"Senator Martin may congratulate himself upon this great outpouring—"

"Extra dry," called a stout diner in a Tuxedo coat and white vest, to a passing waiter.

"Of his faithful constituents," finished Mr. Rowan, hurriedly. "Senator Martin's generosity to the poor of this district has made, as you know, a poor man of him. He has been a philanthropist secretly, and no one has known of it except two or three who could not keep it secret. None of you who have won the Senator's friendship have ever asked anything of him which it was in his power to get for you and been denied."

"That's no lie" and "You bet," yelled the Martin enthusiasts.

Mr. Rowan concluded by presenting the resolutions and proposed three cheers for the Senator, which were given amid cries of "He's the boy for us."

Senator Martin responded and Senator Grady was introduced as "the Old War Horse." Mr. Grady was to speak on "The Democratic Party." He said that the subject was an unusual one for him, as he was generally asked to speak on "Ireland" or "Civil Service Reform."

Senator Grady then entered into a eulogy of the Democratic Party, saying that faith alone would not return the past when love of country was placed above selfish interests, when patriotism was considered first and partisanship afterward.

The Senator closed by paying a high tribute to Senator Martin, and was followed by Commissioner Keller, who spoke on "New York City."

CHAIRMAN JONES MAY RESIGN.

He Is Anxious to Give Up His Position, It Is Said.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Senator J. K. Jones, according to reports in Democratic circles, soon will call a meeting of the Democratic National Committee in Washington for the purpose of resigning as Chairman. This information came to Chicago to-day straight from men who are close to Senator Jones. They said that the manager of Col. Bryan's last campaign was anxious to get out, so that the committee can elect his successor.

They said that J. G. Johnson, who was Chairman of the Executive Committee, is an active candidate for the Chairmanship of the General Committee and that ex-Gov. Stone of Missouri would like to be Chairman. It is said that a majority of the committeemen are in favor of Mayor Taggart of Indianapolis, the Indiana committeeman.

NAVY AS A REFORM SCHOOL.

Representative of Recruiting Office Agrees to Take Unruly Chicago Boys.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—The United States Navy, by agreement with the Juvenile Court here, is to become a reform school for unruly Chicago boys. The John Worthy School, accordingly, will lose scores of the older lads sent there for correction. Boys out on probation and under supervision of officers will be picked up, and future candidates for the institution will be sent to the Government's training ships.

This will greatly lengthen the period for discipline and increase the chances of thoroughly reforming wayward youths. As it is, good behavior secures the release of many from the John Worthy School after two or three months. Some of them find their way back again, and others remain at large or with their parents. The navy plan will hold them in check for a term of from three to five years, and under influences likely to produce the best results.

The matter was discussed in Judge Tuthill's court to-day. A representative of the navy recruiting office conferred with the Judge and said that the navy would be glad to avail itself of suc han opportunity.

COULD NOT FACE DISGRACE.

William Weil, Accused of Theft, Commits Suicide.

William Weil, an inspector of hydrants in the Brooklyn Water Supply Department, committed suicide early last evening in the rear room of a saloon at 896 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, by swallowing acid. Weil lived at 459 Pulaski Street. He was arrested on Tuesday night on a charge of petit larceny and was arraigned in the Gates Avenue Police Court yesterday.

Frank J. Mills complained that Weil had represented himself to him as an advertising solicitor for a weekly paper, which, he said, was to be issued under the auspices of two local Jewish congregations. The complainant alleged that he had given Weil an advertisement and paid him money in advance, but the advertisement had not appeared, and his money had not been returned. When arraigned in court, Weil pleaded not guilty, and his examination was adjourned, he being released in $200 bail. Weil died while being taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

The ART CLUB

If there is one particular friend for whom you are seeking a gift of refined and artistic character, here is a decision easily made, and a gift suggestion that will appeal to the most æsthetic taste.

Portfolio of Masterpieces Of American Art

Containing twenty-five reproductions of the acknowledged greatest paintings of twenty-five notable American artists.

23 Photogravures and 2 Genuine Water Colors

All by the best experts in the craft, under the direct criticism of the original artist—the work having his fullest approval before being accepted. The water colors are signed in each case by the original artist.

It is a valuable collection as representative of American Art, which is now second only to French, and a very close second. It is interesting for the pure delight of the pictures; and it offers rare opportunity to adorn the walls with pictures of high character, and subjects that can never become common, as all these paintings are copyrighted.

You can give the whole portfolio as a sumptuous gift; or you can give selections from it to various friends and retain a handsome collection for your own home.

The price is not half the value of the collection; and you can pay the full amount at once, or join the Club and buy the portfolio on easy monthly payments—

Come and see the pictures, or write for full particulars to day.

HOUSE COATS

The ideal gift for a man. We sell them by thousands at this time—prepare as no other store prepares for the enormous demands you make for holiday giving. And yet the superb variety of these handsome coats is here because this is an all-year-'round store; and we plan six months ahead to be ready for December.

Then we have had unusual good fortune in the special lot of fine coats that came to us under-price. Still excellent opportunity among these:

160 House Coats at $6.50, worth $9
122 House Coats at $5, worth $7.50

Men's Sack Suits

Another accumulation of little lots. They seem to have been of unusual frequency this season. But the method of disposing of them doesn't change. Their distribution in each event must be quick. There's no time here in any season to dally with incomplete lines.

There are about 200 men's suits this time. Of fancy cheviots and neat worsteds; all in good patterns; all in correct style.

Choice at Ten Dollars

Values up to $16.50.

Two hundred men's fancy Silk Vests, double-breasted—a handsome Christmas present—sizes 33 to 46 chest measure, at $3.50.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Boys' Clothing

There's no wider assortment of thoroughly good and good-looking clothing for boys than we're showing just now. And in the uniformly excellent gathering there's no better value than the "Wanamaker Special Suit," for boys of 8 to 16 years. Of plain blue and fancy mixed cheviots, silk sewed throughout; seams extra well stayed; double seats and knees. The coat in the latest double-breasted style. $5 a suit.

Here's a sailor suit at same price, for boys of 3 to 12 years. Of fine hard serge, neatly trimmed with black or white soutache. And here a particularly dressy suit—one that will wear satisfactorily, too, for boys of 9 to 16. This in striped or mixed cheviots. Price, $6.50. All exceptionally good values, but merest hint of the broad variety.

Stylish, durable overcoats of all sorts of materials—all-wool, of course—at all sorts of prices. All very moderate, of course.

Five hundred all-wool trousers, in 3 to 16 year sizes, at 75c each.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Men's Underwear

Heavy selling has been going on here—the heaviest the store has ever known. We're able, however, to present an unbroken front. All lines remain complete. All fully up to the high standard for which Wanamaker underwear is noted.

The man particular about the fit of his underclothing will find an acquaintance with this store of advantage. We are somewhat more careful than is usual on that point. The economical men will likewise be benefited. Prices here are never else than very moderate. A little group of sample values:

$1 each—Heavy natural colored merino shirts; drawers to match, in short or regular inseam; durable garments that give universal satisfaction.

Christmas CANDIES

Might almost as well have no Christmas presents as do without the Christmas meed of candy. It is one of the most important requisites for a proper enjoyment of the feast. On that day, and for days afterwards, as long as the supply holds out, old and young alike deliver themselves over to revelry in these sugared delights.

Need have no fear of the consequences attendant upon an even reckless indulgence in Wanamaker candies. Naught but the best and purest of ingredients enters into their make-up; nothing but care and cleanness in manufacture and surroundings. And besides, they're absolutely fresh—a rarity in candy at this season. And just at this time,—yesterday, in fact—comes a fresh shipment from the factory, of mixed chocolates and assorted candies. Of either kind you can get

A five-pound box for $1

Of candies by the pound, there are:

At 60c a pound—Best assorted chocolates and bonbons.

Then there are the five-pound boxes of Glace fruit, at $1.50, prepared especially for and imported by us. The sort that usually costs 50c a pound or more.

Handkerchiefs

Plain white hemstitched handkerchiefs are often most appreciated. No attempt of any kind at ornamentation. Just plain white, and just pure linen. We show these sorts in many grades for both men and women. Even these almost ridiculously low priced sorts mentioned below are linen—not a thread of cotton in any handkerchief here.

For women, at 5c up to $2.50 each.
For men, at $1 a dozen up to $6.50 each.

Broadway.

PICTURES Under-Price

They are etchings, all good landscapes, in ornamented gilt frames, 14x28 in. and 17x26 in., neatly matted, at $1.50, though easily worth $2.25. Same style patterns, in frames 20x30 in., at $2—would be moderately priced at $3.

There's still good choosing among the splendid carbon photographs mentioned here yesterday. They are $4, though regularly $6.50 and $7.50.

Picture Store, Fifth floor.

Gloves for Gifts

We are all familiar with the funny little subterfuges practiced by both sexes to learn the size of glove the one to be favored wears. No need to worry much on that score. Select the style you think would please, and if size is not exactly right the gloves may be exchanged at any time.

There are two splendid glove stores in this building. One devoted solely to the sale of men's gloves. Every new correct style is there—all the noted makes—Fownes', Dent's, Perrins', and Fisk, Clark & Flagg's. Fine fur gloves in excellent assortment. And though last in mention, still far from last in importance, our own Royale at $1.50, and Victoria at $1.85.

Broadway and Ninth.

The Women's Glove Store is on the Tenth street side, near Rotunda. The famous Princess May kid glove—the best ever sold for one dollar—is shown there in all the new shades. The Royale, than which there is no finer glove at $1.50, and the peerless Victoria at $1.85, likewise make this their only home.

OPERA CAPES

One entire aisle on the second floor is given up today to the showing of our splendid collection of these garments. Beauty and warmth were never more satisfactorily combined than in these luxurious capes. And to that attractive double recommendation we add another of hardly less importance—that of exceptionally moderate low prices.

Beautiful full-length garments with elaborate applique designs, mouffion edging, silk embroidery and so on, at $27.50, at $35 and at $38, up to $70. All of fine vicuna Chudda.

ALL for SMOKERS

Surprising how many things are required for a smoker's comfort and convenience besides tobacco. The smokers' store in the basement shows an almost bewildering gathering of absolutely essential articles, in all sorts of shapes, together with many interesting novelties.

Among the pipes are some that sell for 2c each—some are $16.50. Especially handsome are meerschaum pipes at and around $5.

Smokers' tables, at $1 and up to $40. The latter represents a remarkable combination of conveniences. It furnishes light for the room in which it is placed—an electric light. Is ornamented with a handsome clock; has a cigar-lighter that never requires a match; a cigar cutter; a tobacco receptacle that is at the same time an elegant music box, and an electric bell.

Cigarette holders, match boxes and so on—everything a smoker is likely to need. A good place for seekers for men's gifts to visit.

Basement, Fourth avenue side.

They are mounted on vases of French china, handsomely decorated in rich floral designs and paintings after Rembrandt and Rubens; with solid brass trimmings in French Renaissance styles finished in Etruscan gold. All are complete with globes to match.

Last year these lamps were priced at $60 to $125. This year's regular prices were about half that. To-day they are marked this way:

CHANGES IN THE ARMY BILL

Senate Committee Adopts the Modified House Measure.

ROOT'S STAFF PLAN RESTORED

Veterinary Corps Cut Out—Important Change in Artillery Provisions—Sale of Beer Allowed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The full Senate Committee on Military Affairs has adopted the Army Reorganization bill reported by its sub-committee. The measure is a complete substitute for the House bill, and while much of the language is the same as that of the House measure, there are numerous changes.

Probably the most important change is in the provision regarding the artillery arm of the service. The sub-committee recommended the retention of the present regimental organization of the artillery and did not give its assent to the corps organization proposed by Secretary Root and accepted by the House. In the matter of the appointment of staff officers the bill follows largely the lines of the recommendations made by Secretary Root.

The House canteen provision was amended so as to permit the sale of beer at the canteens. This exception was made by omitting the word "beer" from the prohibited articles. As amended the paragraph reads as follows:

The sale of or dealing in wine or any distilled spirits by any person in any post, exchange, or canteen or army transport or upon any premises used for military purposes by the United States is hereby prohibited. The Secretary of War is hereby directed to carry the provisions of this section into full force and effect.

Senator Harris made an effort to have the canteen provision extended to the City of Manila so as to prohibit entirely the sale of liquors in that city, but failed.

The provision of the new Army bill regarding the general organization and scope of the army is as follows:

That from and after the approval of this bill the Army of the United States, including the existing organizations, shall consist of fifteen regiments of cavalry, twelve regiments of artillery, thirty regiments of infantry, one Lieutenant General, six Major Generals, fifteen Brigadier Generals, an Adjutant General's Department, an Inspector General's Department, a Judge Advocate General's Department, a Medical Department, a Pay Department, a corps of engineers, an Ordnance Department, a signal corps, the officers of the Record and Pension Office, the Chaplains, the officers and enlisted men of the army on the retired list, the professors, corps of cadets, the army service detachment and band at the United States Military Academy, Indian scouts as now authorized by law, and such other officers and enlisted men as may hereinafter be provided for:

Provided, that when a vacancy shall occur through death, retirement, or other separation from active service in the office of storekeeper, now provided for by law in the Quartermaster's Department and Ordnance Department, respectively, said office shall cease to exist.

DETAILS OF ORGANIZATION.

The cavalry regimental organization is to consist of a Colonel, a Lieutenant Colonel, three Majors, fifteen Captains, and fifteen each of First and Second Lieutenants. Two veterinarians are allowed for each cavalry regiment. Of these officers the Captains and Lieutenants not required for duty with the troops are to be available for detail as regimental and squadron staff officers and also other details under the law.

The President is authorized to increase the number of privates in each troop of cavalry to seventy-six, "but," the provision continues, "the total number of enlisted men authorized for the whole army shall not at any time be exceeded."

All the House provisions in regard to the artillery are stricken out and a provision substituted continuing the present regimental system and giving each regiment a Colonel, a Lieutenant Colonel, three Majors, seventeen Captains, and the same number of First and Second Lieutenants. A veterinary is to be allowed to each artillery regiment.

Twelve companies of foot artillery are allowed to each regiment of artillery and three battalions are provided for.

The President is authorized to increase the privates in these companies to 85 and those in field batteries to 135, but not by so doing to increase the size of the army.

The infantry regiments are allowed the same general officers as the other branches of the service, and the same provision is made for detail in all cases. The President is allowed to increase the number of privates in infantry companies to 127, but the same restriction as in other cases is put on him as to the increase of the total strength of the army.

The enlisted force of the corps of engineers is to consist of three battalions of engineers.

The appointment of Chaplains by the President is authorized at the rate of one for each regiment, including the artillery service. Post Chaplains are abolished.

In the Quartermaster General's office there are to be six instead of seven Quartermasters with the rank of Colonel, nine instead of eleven with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, eighteen instead of twenty-eight with the rank of Major, and fifty-four instead of seventy-two with the rank of Captain, mounted.

Provision also is made for assistants in the Adjutant General's office. There are to be five Assistant Adjutant Generals with the rank of Colonel, seven with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and fifteen with the rank of Major.

In the Subsistence Department the number of Commissary Sergeants is made the same as under the existing law, instead of 150, as in the House bill. Vacancies in the grade of Captain in the Subsistence Department are to be filled by the President from officers of the Volunteer Army.

The Pay Department is to consist of one Paymaster General, who is to be a Brigadier General; three Paymasters with the rank of Colonel, four with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, nine with the rank of Major, and twenty with the rank of Captain. The House bill provided for twenty-nine Majors and twenty-five Captains. The grades of Assistant Paymaster and Deputy Paymaster are stricken out.

The head of the Ordnance Department and of the Signal Corps are to be Brigadiers. In the Signal Corps there will be only one Colonel, three Majors, and nine instead of nineteen each of Captains and First Lieutenants.

TRANSFERS TO THE STAFF.

The provision in the House bill regarding staff promotion is changed and extended so as to read as follows:

So long as there remains any officer holding permanent appointments in the Adjutant General's Department, the Inspector General's Department, the Quartermaster's Department, the Subsistence Department, the Pay Department, the Ordnance Department, and the Signal Corps, he shall be promoted according to seniority in the several grades, as now provided by law, and nothing herein contained shall be deemed to apply to vacancies which can be filled by such promotions, or to the periods for which the officers so promoted shall hold their appointments, and when any vacancy, except that of the chief of the department or corps, shall occur, it shall be filled by detail from the line of the army, and no more permanent appointments shall be made in those departments or corps.

Such details shall be made from the grade in which the vacancies exist, under such system of examination as is now prescribed by law or as the President from time to time may prescribe. All officers so detailed shall serve for a period of four years unless sooner relieved, at the expiration of which time they shall return to duty with the line, and officers below the rank of Lieutenant Colonel shall not be again eligible for selection in either staff department until they shall have served two years with the line.

The Medical Department provision is the same as that of the House bill, except a slight change as to qualifications for head nurse.

MAXIMUM STRENGTH 100,000.

The maximum strength of the army is fixed at 100,000 men, and the figure is not mentioned until near the close of the bill. It is then inserted in connection with the provision for the enlistment of Filipinos. The provision is as follows:

That when in his opinion, the conditions in the Philippine Islands justify such action, the President is authorized to enlist natives of those islands for service in the army, to be organized as scouts, with such officers as he shall deem necessary for their proper control, or as troops or companies, as authorized by this act, for the regular army.

The President is further authorized, in his discretion, to form companies, organized as are companies of the regular army, in squadrons or battalions, with officers and non-commissioned officers corresponding to similar organizations in the cavalry and infantry arms.

The total number of enlisted men in said native organizations shall not exceed 12,000, and the total enlisted force of the line of the army, together with such native force, shall not exceed at any time 100,000.

The field officers for the native troops are all to be Americans for the present, but whenever the Filipinos show fitness for command the President is authorized to make provisional selections from among them for the grades of First and Second Lieutenants.

Following are provisions of the new bill:

That, to fill vacancies occurring from time to time in the several organizations serving without the limits of the United States with trained men, the President is authorized to enlist recruits in numbers equal to 4 per cent. in excess of the total strength authorized for such organizations.

That the President is authorized to maintain the enlisted force of the several organizations of the army at their maximum strength, as fixed by this act, during the present exigencies of the service or until such time as Congress may hereafter direct.

That nothing in this act shall be held or construed so as to discharge any officer from the regular army or to deprive him of the commission which he now holds therein.

THE REAPPORTIONMENT BILL.

Compromise May Be Effected Placing the House Membership at About 373.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Some unexpected trouble is looming up for Mr. Hopkins, the Chairman of the House Census Committee, and for his plan to reapportion the representation of the States in the Fifty-eighth Congress.

When it was found that Indiana and other States that are menaced with the loss of a member, under the scheme for retaining the present membership of 357, were developing disaffection, a caucus was suggested as a means of getting an expression in advance from the Republicans and holding the minority by the vote of the majority. It has been discovered that in such a caucus the Hopkins plan might obtain a majority vote, and in order to avoid that the dissatisfied Republicans may decline to enter a caucus or be bound by its action.

There are two or three elements of opposition that promise to be combined against the plan to keep the House at 357 members. The Democrats generally are inclined to favor the increase of membership, because that will save to every State the representation it now has. Those Republican States that will lose by the Hopkins plan, and those also which will fail to secure the increase that the census returns led them to expect, may combine with the Democrats to overturn the committee plan.

The scheme of Mr. Burleigh of Maine, which provides for a membership of 387, may be pressed as a menace to compel a compromise by which Maine will hold her four members and other States be given additional representation.

Mr. Crumpacker of Indiana, who introduced a bill intended to provoke discussion of the proposition to reduce Southern representation, is talking for that measure, partly because he believes the Constitutional instruction ought to be observed and partly because he hopes to defeat any scheme that will take away a member from Indiana. The effect of the contention over the bill may be the adoption of a compromise figure, possibly 373, or something between 357 and 387, that will not deprive any State of the representation it now has.

Republican members are regretting that fuller counsel was not sought by the committee before a plan was reported. The attempt to restrict the extension of the membership, it is maintained, should have been discussed before seven members undertook to decide that the House should not contain more than 357 Representatives.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Provisional Allotments Nearly $80,000,000—$4,000,000 for Chairman Burton's Home Town—Other Items.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The River and Harbor Committee of the House has practically decided not to give out the bill until after the holidays. The members fear that the publication of the items would give the friends of projects unfavorably acted upon an opportunity to organize combinations against the bill.

The bill has reached such gigantic proportions (almost $80,000,000 under the provisional allotments) that some vigorous pruning will be necessary to reduce it to the $60,000,000 or $65,000,000 to which the committee desire to hold it down. The direct appropriations probably will not much exceed $20,000,000.

The committee has provisionally agreed to the Southwest Pass project at the mouth of the Mississippi, which involves $8,000,000 in continuing contracts. The Mississippi River is to get $10,000,000 during the next ten years. A lock and dam on the Ohio below Cincinnati is to be provided at a cost of $1,000,000. The harbor at Cleveland, Ohio, the home of Chairman Burton, is down for over $4,000,000. Provision is to be made for restoring the jetties at Galveston, Texas, and general improvement there at a cost of $1,000,000. Aransas Pass, Texas, is to receive $350,000 and Sabine Pass $125,000.

SPANISH TREATY IN THE SENATE.

Mr. Lodge Explains the Agreement to Buy Two Islands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The Senate today in executive session took up the treaty with Spain providing for the cession to the United States of the Philippine Islands of Cibutu, Cagayan, and Sulu and their dependeneies, in consideration of the payment to Spain of $100,000.

Senator Lodge (Rep., Mass.) went into a brief explanation of the terms of the negotiation. He explained that the islands are comprised in the Philippine group, and said they were supposed to have been ceded by Spain in the Paris treaty, and the United States had taken possession of the islands under this supposition. It was soon found, however, that the definite line of our acquisition fixed by the treaty cut both of them out.

In order to leave no doubt of our ownership the treaty for the cession of these islands had been negotiated, and he believed that the United States would be saved much trouble in the future by consummating the bargain. He characterized the proceedings as in the nature of a title-quieting process. Mr. Lodge also called attention to the fact that one of the islands is directly on the line of communication with Borneo and the straits, and he drew the conclusion that some day it might be important as a cable station.

Senator Hoar (Rep., Mass.) said he should like to have more time to consider the question, and Senator Bacon (Dem., Ga.,) said that, notwithstanding he is a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, he had not been present when a report upon the treaty was authorized. He therefore would appreciate further opportunity to go over the document. Senator Wellington (Rep., Md.,) made unqualified objection. Accordingly the treaty was laid aside for the time being.

HOUSE PASSES RAILROAD BILLS

Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio Must Build New Terminals.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The House today at the end of a spirited contest extending over two days passed bills to compel the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio Railroads to abolish grade crossings, to alter their routes into this city, and to change their terminal facilities.

An amendement was placed upon the Pennsylvania bill to require the road to build a new station, to cost not less than $1,500,000. The bills were vigorously antagonized by a portion of the minority, under the leadership of Mr. Cowherd of Missouri on the ground that they were too liberal to the roads. The Pennsylvania bill was passed by a vote of 163 to 71.

The Baltimore and Ohio bill also requires that road to build a new station. It appropriates $1,500,000 outright to the road in consideration of the changes it would be compelled to make. The vote on the bill was 151 to 49.

Nominations by the President.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The President today sent the following nominations to the Senate:

Marine Corps.—First Lieut. Harry Lee to be a Captain; First Lieut. Frederick H. Delano to be a Captain.

War.—Capt. Constantine Chase, Fourth Artillery, to be Major; First Lieut. John K. Cree, Sixth Artillery, to be Captain; Second Lieut. William W. Hamilton, Second Artillery, to be First Lieutenant; Andrew Geddes, late Captain, Twenty-fifth Infantry, to be a Captain of Infantry.

Senate Passes Boutelle Resolution.

STATUS OF ISLANDS OBTAINED FROM SPAIN

Mr. Griggs Concludes His Argument for the Government.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The United States Supreme Court again was crowded to its full capacity to-day to hear the concluding arguments in the cases involving the status of Porto Rico and the Philippines. Among those who secured points of vantage in the area reserved for the bar was Judge Day, who, as Secretary of State during the critical stages of the war with Spain, and later as head of the American Commissioners who negotiated the treaty of peace at Paris, was one of the most influential factors in shaping the conditions now under discussion before the court.

Judge Day listened attentively to the argument of the Attorney General, which took up the events following the treaty of peace and maintained the right of the Government, pursuant to that treaty and to the Constitution, to follow the bill of action which had been taken in these cases relative to the Philippines and Porto Rico. Near him sat ex-Secretary Carlisle and other prominent members of the bar and of the two houses of Congress, while the small circular area open to the general public was filled with spectators.

Attorney General Griggs, who began the Government's presentation yesterday, had four hours remaining, and the indications were that he would consume practically the entire day, leaving the close by Charles Aldrich, on the Philippine case, to be presented to-morrow. Mr. Griggs spoke in the calm and argumentative style adopted yesterday, occasionally, however, throwing great earnestness of voice and gesture into the assertion of the Government's right to pursue the policy thus far taken.

AS TO FORMER TERRITORIES.

The Attorney General elaborated the points enunciated yesterday. One of these to which special attention was given was the distinction between organized Territories and unorganized territory under the jurisdiction of the United States. Justice Brewer had asked the Attorney General to make clear his views on this distinction. Mr. Griggs took up Territory after Territory, showing in each case that it, the Territory, came under the operation of the laws of the United States by an act of Congress specifically extending the laws to the Territory, and not ex proprio vigore. He said that while Rhode Island and South Carolina stood outside of the Union, they were treated as foreign States, and when they ultimately assented to the Union, Congress passed a law extending the revenue laws to them.

Vermont had, prior to its admission as a State, been a part of the territory belonging to the United States. If the revenue laws were applicable to the Territory of Vermont ex proprio vigore, it was an act of supererogation to extend them to the State. In the case of Louisiana, the Attorney General pointed out that all the declarations of Jefferson were to the effect that in order to come under the operation of the laws of the United States, those laws must be explicitly extended to new acquisitions. Jefferson selected certain acts to be immediately extended, and others to be extended from time to time as might be found practicable.

In the instance of the acquisition of Florida, the Attorney General directed attention to the fact that three American statesmen, Monroe, John Quincy Adams, and Andrew Jackson, each of whom was elected President of the United States, united in declaring officially that the Constitution did not apply of its own force to territory newly acquired by this Nation, by virtue of the act of acquisition, but that such extension must be accomplished by the action of Congress.

ORGANIZED TERRITORIES.

Mr. Griggs also referred to the Territorial organization of Oregon, Missouri, Montana, and Wyoming, in each case showing that Congress specifically extended the laws to these Territories.

Finally, as to the extension of the laws to the Territories, Mr. Griggs said that, by act of Congress in 1874, Congress had expressly extended the Constitution and Federal laws to the "organized Territories" and to every territory "hereafter organized." But the act went further than "organized Territories," and could not be interpreted to mean that expanse of country entirely unorganized. The Guano Islands were cited in support of the proposition that territory may belong to or be under the jurisdiction of the United States without being part of the United States. Over seventy different islands, keys, and groups of islands have thus been taken possession of and made for such special purposes the property of the United States. They enjoy certain privileges under the law, and the United States Supreme Court has recognized their status, but they are not a part of the United States.

Turning from his books, Mr. Griggs exclaimed in impassioned tones: "Why should this Government be considered to have less freedom of action in this matter than other nations? What clause of the Constitution so compels? Why are we so tied and bound that we are never to secure the fruits of victory, never to acquire an island of the sea, a belt across the isthmus, a station for a naval base, unless at the cost of admitting those inhabiting the soil to full rights as citizens of the United States, whether they be cannibals or savages, granting them the glorious potentiality of being a part of the people of the United States? Did our forefathers hamper us like that? If so, this Constitution is as misshapen as Richard, the hunchback, sent into this world before his time, scarce half made up, and that so lamely and unfashionable that nations laugh at us as we halt by."

The Attorney General made this comparison between the Constitution as it was sought to be construed and the misshapen hunchback in tones which rang through the chamber and out into the corridors. Soon after the court took its usual midday recess.

JUSTICES ASK QUESTIONS.

The crowds continued to fill the courtroom during the afternoon, among those coming in being Senators Fairbanks, Bacon, and Nelson, Representatives McCall and Littlefield, who together made the fight against the Porto Rico bill; Solicitor General Richards, Secretary Pruden of the President's executive staff, and many officials from the Treasury and other branches.

When the Attorney General resumed his argument Justices Brewer and Harlan asked a number of questions. Justice Brewer asked if the Attorney General held that as Congress extended the Constitution and laws to the organized Territories, Congress also could take them away from the Territories.

Mr. Griggs answered that this was a most serious question, but he thought it safe to say that when the laws were once extended to Territories an inviolable contract was created and could not be broken.

Justice Harlan asked the Attorney General to state later on, to what extent Congress could impose a tariff to be collected against goods coming from New Mexico, Arizona, and Alaska. Justice Brewer also reminded Mr. Griggs that Oklahoma was not included in the treaty taking in the Louisiana and Mexican territory, and was an apparant exception to the rule stated by the Atorney General.

Mr. Griggs said that Congress at its last session in effect declared that the existing tariff laws were applicable against the goods of Porto Rico. This was in the act of last March, remitting to Porto Rico certain duties collected "under existing law." This, Mr. Griggs declared, was an assertion by both branches of the present Congress that the tariff act which was the "existing law" operated against Porto Rico.

Justice White asked the Attorney General if he claimed that Congress could so exempt Territories from the laws as to give them privileges not enjoyed by the States. Mr. Griggs responded that he did so claim; that in fact the Territories had been for years exempted from internal revenue and direct taxes.

The Attorney General referred to the celebrated case of Loughborough vs. Blake, whereupon Justice Harlan, reading from that decision, asked Mr. Griggs what Chief Justice Marshall meant in saying: "The power to lay and collect duties, imposts, and excises may be exercised, and must be exercised, throughout the United States." Mr. Griggs said "throughout the United States" referred to the States of the Union, but Justice Harlan pointed out that it referred also to the District of Columbia and the territory west of the Missouri.

GOVERNMENT'S CASE CLOSED.

Mr. Griggs closed his five hours' speech with a brilliant and eloquent peroration. "I am here in a feeble and humble way," said he, "to support the executive and legislative branches of the Government in dealing with these momentous questions. Throughout I have felt a serene confidence that nothing I have advised, nothing the Government has done, has been without its precedents and forerunners from the most illustrious of our forefathers, from Jefferson, Jackson, Madison, Gallatin, and from the great Chief Justice of the past; that nothing has been done but tended to the great exaltation and extension of our country and the improvement of the people coming under our control."

Instead of seeking strict and narrow constructions, he said, the powers of the executive and legislative branches had been so construed as to give them a wise and safe discretion, so that the day would be hastened when we might give to these new peoples self-government, and to some of them, perhaps, a place in the galaxy of States.

The court adjourned as soon, as Mr. Griggs finished, and members of the bar gathered about him to congratulate him upon his able and eloquent presentation of the Government's case. Mr. Aldrich will close for the plaintiff in the Philippine case to-morrow, and the cases then will be submitted.

Hearing on Oleomargarine Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The Senate Committee on Agriculture to-day began the consideration of the Oleomargarine bill which recently passed the House. A large majority of those present were opponents of the bill, and it was stated that as the friends of the measure had not been heard before the House Committee, they would be given the preference in the present hearing. The oleomargarine men generally complained of having received very short notice, and most of them asked for more time.

CONTRACTS FOR WARSHIPS.

Naval Board Agrees Upon Builders of Vessels, Though Arrangement May Be Changed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The Board on Naval Construction to-day completed its report. Although lacking as it does the signature of one absent member, it is still subject to change. The result of to-day's meeting was to disturb slightly the scheme of award of contracts for the battleships and cruisers arranged yesterday.

By to-day's arrangement, which will be submitted to Secretary Long to-morrow, the Pacific Coast gets only two ships, both armored cruisers, one sheathed and the other unsheathed, and these go to the same bidder, the Union Iron Works. The Cramps hold on to the number allotted yesterday, one sheathed cruiser, one unsheathed cruiser, and one battleship. Newport News also maintains her quota at yesterday's standing, one sheathed cruiser, one unsheathed cruiser, and one sheathed battleship. The Fore River Works of Quincy, Mass., are scheduled for two unsheathed battleships, and Bath is set down for one sheathed battleship.

This arrangement is still subject to change. In the first place, the board suggests that where the bid of any of the firms named exceeds the limit of the cost of the ship as fixed by Congress, after deducting sums for absolutely necessary equipment, that firm must bring its bid within compass; else an award will be made elsewhere. The bidders also are required to restore most of the important items they have cut out of the specifications, in cases these exceed in the aggregate $200,000 for one ship. It is a matter of conjecture whether the bidders are willing to meet either or both of these conditions. There also are other complexities, arising from doubt as to the intent of Congress in making a geographical disposition of the contracts.

Senator Foster and Representative Jones of Washington spent half an hour with Secretary Long this afternoon endeavoring to show cause why some of the contracts should go to Moran Brothers of Seattle, their constituents. The Secretary listened to their representations, but made no promise. He said afterward that he hoped to be able to announce the awards in a day or two.

Congressional Library Open Sundays.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Librarian Putnam of the Congressional Library has achieved a victory in the approval in committee of the amendment proposed by Senator McMillan of Michigan to the Legislative Appropriation bill by which $10,000 is to be allowed to pay the cost of keeping the Congressional Library and reading rooms open on Sundays from 2 o'clock in the afternoon to 10 at night. The money appropriated will be used to pay necessary extra employes in the library and under the Superintendent of the building and grounds.

Congressional Notes.

The Urgent Deficiency bill passed the Senate yesterday with two minor amendments.

The Senate yesterday adopted a resolution directing the Committee on Foreign Relations to examine the claim of Harry McCoy and report whether the Secretary of State should be directed to pay the sum of money claimed by him out of the award in the hands of the State Department in the matter of the Delagoa Bay Railroad.

Representative Sutherland of Nebraska yesterday introduced a resolution for the appointment of a special committee of seven to investigate the whole subject of the Government ownership of railroads in Europe as well as in this country, with a view to future legislation upon this subject.

The Senate yesterday passed seventy-one private pension bills, including two giving pensions of $50 a month to the widows of Gen. John A. McClernand and Gen. John M. Palmer, and one giving a pension of $40 a month to the widow of Col. James Mercur, late Professor of Civil and Military Engineering at West Point.

In the Senate yesterday Mr. Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, offered a resolution of discharge the Committee on Contingent Expenses from the further consideration of the resolution authorizing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to send for persons and papers in the investigation of the Montana Senatorial case. His idea was to get the original resolution before the Senate. Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.,) objected, and the resolution went over under the rule.

From the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate Mr. Cullom yesterday favorably reported with an amendment a bill to pay to the Republic of Mexico $240,683 paid by the Government of Mexico on account of an award in favor of La Abra Silver Mining Company, the whole of which award it has been declared by the United States Supreme Court, was procured by fraud. Mr. Cullom also reported from the same committee a bill to pay to the Republic of Mexico $171,899, the amount of an award paid to Benjamin Weil, the circumstances being similar to those of La Abra case.

CADETS DESCRIBE HAZING

Describe Their Practices to the -Booz Inquiry Board.

Thirty-five Cadets Examined—Experiences of Young Phil Sheridan and Lieut. Hobson's Brother.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 19.—There was some very interesting testimony brought out to-day by the court of inquiry which is investigating the alleged hazing of cadets at the Military Academy here. Thirty-five cadets were examined during the morning and afternoon sessions. One is the brother of Lieut. R. P. Hobson of Merrimac fame, another is the son of Gen. Phil Sheridan, and a third, Mark Brooke of Pennsylvania, is a nephew of Gen. Brooke, who is the presiding officer of the court. All three told of the hazing they got during the encampment of 1898, at the time Oscar L. Booz was their classmate, and not one of them said that the treatment they received or the things they had to do were either brutal or degrading.

In nearly every instance the witnesses said that all these forms of hazing were obsolete, and, while "bracing" was still practiced secretly, it was against the regulations, and if any one was detected violating these regulations he would be severely punished.

Cadet Raymond L. Linton of Michigan was the first witness. He said he knew former Cadet Booz in 1898, and he seemed to be in good health. He described "bracing" as an exaggerated form of the position of a soldier. It was a drawing in of the chin and the throwing back of the shoulders at the same time.

Capt. Dean, the recorder of the court, asked:

"If a fourth class man is unpopular, is he subjected to more 'bracing' and 'exercising' than others?"

On a blackboard in the rear of the hall the following was written:

To Haze—To play mischievous or abusive tricks on, try the pluck, or temper of, especially by physical persecution, lower class students in a college or new comer in an establishment of any kind.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF HAZING.

Cadet Stephen Abbott of Illinois, the next witness, when sworn, was asked to read this definition of the words "to haze," and he said that was not his construction of the words as applied to the hazing by "bracing," &c., which took place in the academy. In reply to Commandant Hein, the witness said that he had known cadets as well as the commandants of the mess tables to be severely punished for permitting or practicing "restraint," "bracing," or other "exercises" on lower class men.

Cadet Albert B. Dockery of Mississippi was questioned at length on military regulations prohibiting hazing. Gen. Brooke read an extract from the United States Military Regulations, prohibiting nearly everything which could be construed as hazing. Then the General said:

Are these regulations violated?

Yes sir.

On being questioned by Col. Mills, Superintendent of the Academy, the witness said tabasco sauce, if not on the table, can be had by asking for it.

"Do you know any other name for it?" asked the Superintendent.

After some hesitation he replied:

Cadet Charles McH. Eby of Pennsylvania, when sworn said that he knew Booz, who was not held in very high regard by the cadets, as he had not shown courage in his fight with Keller. Eby was asked about the hazing which used to be prevalent, but which he said was discontinued about two years ago. He described them as follows:

"Bracing," an exaggerated form of a soldierly position; "wooden willie," continuous gun drill; "football," lying on back and raising the legs to a perpendicular position and back again several times, probably for six or seven minutes; "eagling," standing on toes; "hanging on stretcher," suspended on hands from bar with feet not on floor.

"Did you ever see a man faint while undergoing any of these exercises?"

"Well, I have known a man to feign."

"Under what form of exercise?"

"Eagling, I think, Sir."

"How long did he exercise?"

"I can't exactly say, about five or six minutes, I think."

"Who was that man?"

"Myself, Sir."

This reply caused laughter, in which the women spectators joined.

"Then you are an authority on fainting?"

"No, Sir; I never fainted."

Eby then at the request of Superintendent Mills stood up and gave the court an exhibition of what is known as bracing, which did not seem to be a very unnatural or painful position.

DESCRIBES BOOZ'S FIGHT.

Cadet John K. Herr of New Jersey, who was present at the fight between Keller and Booz, and who acted as one of the latter's seconds, was then put on the stand. In reply to several questions he said:

"I knew Cadet Booz. I saw him hazed in his tent in camp in 1898. Booz was holding out Indian clubs, and was informed that he could be 'called out that evening or next day,' and he then put down the clubs."

"Tell us about the fight."

"The men put up their hands and sparred. Keller landed a blow on Booz's eye, and the latter turned his head away. He tried to avoid Keller, who said, 'Stand up and fight.' Then Booz went down from a light blow and did not want to get up. He was helped up, but went down again two or three times and wanted to quit. He got a blow in the body, but not hard enough to knock him down. Booz flopped down. He cried and said he would give up. He wasn't knocked out. He just lay down.

"After the fight I told Booz that his actions were cowardly and were so regarded by the others, and that he could remove the stigma by fighting another upper class man his own size or smaller, but he paid no attention to me."

Continuing, Herr said that many fourth-class men, on their arrival at the academy, were "Full of conceit," which had to be taken out of them. Gen. Brooke said:

Describe the conceit.

Some of them are conceited on account of wealth and others on social standing, position, or superior intellect.

Then these are treated by the upper class men this way in order to bring them to a realizing sense of the fact that they are no better than anybody else?

Exactly, Sir.

Hiram M. Cooper, a cadet of the second-class, from North Carolina, when asked if he had been hazed as a fourth-class man, said:

Yes; on one occasion I was in the bathroom and was compelled to take a cold bath.

Was it in Winter?

No, Sir; it was in Summer.

The reply of the young man, who blushed when he made it, caused the women in the gallery to titter audibly.

YOUNG SHERIDAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Cadet Philip H. Sheridan of Illinois said he was a member of the class in which Booz was in 1898, but he did not know enough about him to form an opinion of him or have any feeling toward him. Asked if he himself had ever been hazed, the witness replied:

"I was made to say, 'turn, boys, turn,' several times."

"From what is that taken?"

"From Sheridan's ride."

"What else were you asked to do?"

"Oh, some foolish things, such as riding broom handles and sitting in wash bowls in the company's streets."

"Did you think that these acts which you were asked to do humiliated you?"

"No, Sir; they were not humiliating, although I did not like to do some of them."

Rigby D. Valliant of Arkansas said he himself was hazed; had taken part in pillow fights and a "rat funeral." The latter was held in his tent. The body of a dead rat was placed on top of a box and a towel laid over it. Four lighted candles were placed on the corners of the box. A high priest was appointed, who read from the "Black Book." Capt. Dean asked:

What is that?

The regulations of the Military Academy, Sir.

Continuing, Valliant said flowers were placed around the body of the rat. The services lasted about half an hour. Several upper-class men took photographs of the proceedings, after which the rodent was buried.

He had heard the President of the Young Men's Christian Association called "Saintly Mitchell," but it was not done in disrespect. All the cadets, he said, looked up to Mr. Mitchell.

James A. Shannon, a cadet from Minnesota, said there were about five fights between fourth and upper class men during camp in 1898. It was the rule, he said, that if two men had a disagreement and they were of unequal size, one or the other would choose a man to replace him, so as to equalize matters.

Cadet William Davis of Georgia said he had been subjected to hazing in 1898. He had to go through exercises, and was frequently tired by his efforts. Gen. Clous asked:

"Did you ever drop from exhaustion?"

"Yes, I dropped, but I was not exhausted; I only pretended to be."

"Then you were feigning?"

"Yes, Sir."

"What else were you required to do?"

"I had to sing songs, climb up the ridge pole of the tent and crow like a rooster."

Cadet Benjamin F. Miller of Virginia knew Booz before they went into camp in 1898. Hot candle grease had been dropped on his feet, and the same was done to Booz. It did not hurt.

"Were you hazed in camp in 1898?" was asked.

"No, Sir."

This was the first cadet out of all those examined who said he was not hazed, and the court looked surprised. Continuing, Miller, with his face wreathed in smiles, said:

"You see, I came from Annapolis, and I was supposed to have got it there; they don't generally give it to a man twice."

He was excused immediately.

NO RELIGIOUS PREJUDICES.

Samuel Frankenberger of West Virginia was then sworn. He said he had been hazed by exercising, bracing, and other methods, some of which were injurious. Commandant Hein asked:

"What is your religion?"

"I'm a Jew, Sir."

"Have you ever been slighted or annoyed on account of your religion by any of the cadets?"

"No, Sir."

"Have you known any case of a person being annoyed or interfered with on account of their religious views?"

"No, Sir."

"Did you know Booz?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Who was his tent mate?"

"Cadet Albert."

"What was Albert's religion?"

"He was a Jew, Sir."

"Was there any discrimination in his case on account of his religious belief?"

"No, Sir; not at all. He was not a companionable man."

Derchie O. Mahaffy of Texas said he knew Booz, who was unpopular on account of his cowardice.

"I met Booz in the bathroom about three days before he left. I knew he was in disfavor for his actions, and said to him: 'Why don't you brace up? Call somebody out and redeem yourself.'"

"Why did you give him this advice?"

"Because I had heard men say things to him as they passed which were of such a nature that if I were he I should have resented them. He left three days later. His eyes were weak, but I would not have known that only he was attending hospital."

James M. Hobson, Jr., of Alabama, a brother of Richmond Pearson Hobson, was then sworn. When he gave his name the women in the gallery stared at him and never took their eyes off the witness until he left the room. He said that Booz was disliked for his lack of physical courage.

Hobson went on to tell of the forms of hazing he was subjected to in 1898. He had to climb the pole of the tent, stand on his head in a bathtub with water in it, and other little ordeals which his classmates had to go through.

"Was anybody strangled by this practice of standing on head in the bath tub?"

"Yes, Sir; I was slightly strangled myself, but not hurt."

"What other forms of hazing were you subjected to?"

"I had to endeavor to tell jokes and try and sing."

The court adjourned at 6 o'clock until 9:30 to-morrow morning.

CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The special committee appointed by Speaker Henderson to investigate the circumstances connected with the death of Oscar L. Booz held its first meeting to-day, and decided to enter upon the investigation immediately after the holiday recess.

The committee has determined to probe the Booz case to the bottom. It will meet at Philadelphia, Jan. 3, and go thence the next day to Bristol, Penn., the home of the young man's parents. Chairman Dick was authorized to instruct the Burgess of the town to notify all who have knowledge of the case that they will be expected to testify there.

Thence the committee will go to West Point. Col. Mills, the Superintendent of the Academy, will be notified that all cadets having knowledge of the case will be required to give their testimony. In addition, the committee will examine some of the young men who were in Booz's class, but who have failed or left the Academy for other reasons, in order to procure testimony which is not prejudiced by the atmosphere of the Academy. Further, the committee will investigate the general subject of hazing sufficiently to make an intelligent recommendation to Congress.

Chairman Dick will call upon the Secretary of War for a transcript of all the testimony before the military board, which is now making an independent inquiry.

LEGAL NOTES.

LIABILITY OF SURETIES ON GUARDIAN'S BONDS.—James Van Riper and John Bezant were sureties for John H. Schilling as guardian of Alice Otto and several other minor children who were entitled to a certain fund upon attaining their majority. To secure his sureties, Schilling executed a mortgage upon his real estate to an amount equal to the entire fund. He then used the money in his business, and the entire amount was lost. Subsequently the real estate covered by the mortgage was sold, the amount of the mortgage was paid to the sureties, and deposited with the American Loan and Trust Company to the joint account of Schilling and the two sureties. The money was on deposit in the company in 1891, when it became insolvent, and the entire fund was lost. Schilling removed to New Jersey, where he died over five years ago, leaving no property. Miss Otto, on becoming of age, brought an action against Van Riper and Bezant to establish a devastavit, and to charge them as sureties. They claimed the action could not be maintained because no accounting had ever been had.

Justice Stover, before whom the case was tried, in Supreme Court, Special Term, in this city, granted a decree in favor of the plaintiff. This decision, which was affirmed by the Appellate Division, in June, 1898, in an opinion by Justice Ingraham, has now been sustained by the Court of Appeals. Judge O'Brien, giving the opinion, holds that it being impossible for Miss Otto, because of the removal of her guardian to New Jersey, and his death there intestate, without leaving any property in either State, to have a judicial settlement of his accounts in a direct proceeding, such settlement was not a condition precedent to this action in equity to charge the sureties with what might be found to be due from the guardian to the ward. The failure of the trust company after deposit of money with it, was held not to operate as a discharge of the sureties from their liability to make good the money of the ward received by the guardian and misappropriated by him.

LIABILITY OF MASTER UNDER LABOR LAW.—The recovery last Spring by Thomas C. Stewart, as administrator, from John W. Furguson of damages for the death of Andrew C. Stewart, which was upheld by the Appellate Division in this city, has been sustained by the Court of Appeals. The accident happened about three years ago. While the deceased, who was then in the employ of Mr. Furguson, was engaged in laying brick in the wall of a building which Mr. Furguson was erecting in Long Island City, the scaffold upon which he was standing fell and caused his death.

The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Judge Landon, holds that no other cause of the fall of the scaffold being ascertained except as inferred from the fall itself, such fall was prima facie evidence of the negligence of the master. The court held further that if the case was one where the cause of the fall was otherwise ascertained, Sections 18 and 19 of the labor law of 1897 enlarged the duties of the master and extended it to responsibility for the safety of the scaffold itself, and thus for the want of care in the details of its construction.

In conclusion the Court said: "Prima facie it was so constructed as to bear less than one-fourth the weight required by Section 19. Its fall, in the absence of evidence of other producing cause, points to the omission of the duty enjoined by the statute upon the defendant to the plaintiff in its construction, and points to it with that reasonable cerainty which usually tends to produce conviction in the mind in tracing events back to their causes, and thus creates presumption. It is circumstantial evidence, and if it does convince the jury it justifies their verdict."

Payment of Election Officials.

The payment of all election officials and landlords for the use of their places for election purposes will begin to-day at the City Paymaster's office, 83 Chambers Street, this borough. The election officials will be paid each day from 10 A. M. until 3 P. M., except Saturday, when payments will not be made after noon.

FAITH HEALERS' METHODS

Brush Will Contest Discloses How They Secured Death Certificatets.

SIGNED BY ONE PHYSICIAN

He Is a Believer in Christian Science—Miss Brush Received No Medicine from Him.

The methods used by Christian Scientists to obtain death certificates for members of their organization who die were disclosed at the hearing in the Brush will contest yesterday. The Scientists are absolutely opposed to physicians and the administration of medicines. One of the laws of the State requires that a physician shall sign a death certificate, and that he shall have been in attendance on the patient a certain length of time.

Miss Brush, according to all testimony so far given, died firm in the belief in Christian Science, yet her death certificate was duly signed by a physician. From the evidence given it appears that this physician has given up regular practice and long since abandoned the use of medicines. He is an active member of the First Church of Christ, and as such went to call on Miss Brush several times just before she died of consumption, last July. In fact, he and Mrs. Stetson, the first reader of the church, were with her for hours before she died, but gave her no medicine. After her death the doctor signed the necessary certificate showing that he was in attendance on the case.

The witness who gave this testimony also said that the same physician had signed a great many other certificates of death. The making out of the regular certificates, as a rule, stops all inquiry from the Coroner's office as to the death of a person.

In addition to the testimony on this point there was much more light thrown on the principles of the Scientists and on the care with which members of the First Church looked after Miss Brush during the five years she professed to be a Scientist.

As has been the rule ever since the will contest started before Surrogate Fitzgerald, the courtroom was filled yesterday with believers and non-believers in Christian Science.

Agnes Bayle, a healer, continued her testimony yesterday. She assisted Mrs. Stetson in attending Miss Brush in 1895, when she was ill with pneumonia.

"Is it not the teaching of Christian Science that there is no such thing as disease?" the witness was asked.

"Yes. There is no such thing as disease in the Divine mind; it is only a belief of the human mind."

"What disease did Miss Brush have?"

"She had no disease; she only had a false belief."

"Isn't it a fact that the course you pursue when you attempt to heal the sick is to try and convince them that they are not sick?"

"The Divine mind can do that."

"Miss Brush was once cured of pneumonia, was she not?"

"Yes, by the Divine mind."

"Through what agency?"

"The practitioner."

"What practitioner?"

"Mrs. Stetson."

"I understand that pneumonia was recognized as a disease by you?"

"As a human it was."

"What do you mean by that?"

"As a human opinion I recognized that there was such a disease."

"Is it the practice of Christian Scientists to use hynotism and mesmerism?"

"Certainly not."

"Can you tell us just what treatment healers use in cases of pneumonia?"

"I could not do so in five minutes."

The witness then explained that Mrs. Stetson was the one who conducted all the healing in Miss Brush's case and that she, the witness, was merely at the house to keep away all "evil influences," which, she said, meant those who were antagonistic to the belief.

John M. Bowers, counsel for the contestants, then asked the witness:

"How do you tell the difference between contagious diseases and others?"

"There are some so-called contagious diseases. They are called so in the human mind."

"Do you think the human mind is powerful enough to carry contagious diseases from one to another?"

"According to my opinion contagious diseases are not carried from one to another."

"Do you know measles?"

"Yes."

"Smallpox?"

"No."

"Did you ever treat a case of scarlet fever?"

"Yes, one."

The witness testified that healers did not report cases of contagious diseases to the Department of Health.

Susanna Margaret Duncan, a young woman, who is also a healer, was then called to the stand.

The fact was brought out that in December, 1899, Mrs. Stetson sent her to read Christian Science books to Miss Brush. This she did for three or four weeks, then Miss Brush felt as if she would like a healer permanently in the house with her. This was after she was cured of pneumonia. Miss Duncan remained at the house, 71 West Forty-seventh Street, until July, 1896, when she went to the country with Miss Brush. On the return from the country in the Fall the two were constantly together until late in 1898.

Then Miss Brush went to see her sister, Mrs. Southard, who is also a Scientist, at Bayonne, N. J. Miss Duncan went over there in a few days. Later the two came back and rented a room from a Mrs. Drumm, another Scientist, at 40 West Seventy-second Street. They remained there a few weeks, and then went to live at Miss Duncan's home, 245 West Forty-ninth Street. It was at this place that the contested will was drawn.

Miss Brush, in June last, engaged two rooms at the Hotel Beresford, and Miss Duncan went there with her and was with her until she died. Miss Duncan and Mrs. Stetson were warm friends, and Miss Duncan would report to her about Miss Brush. The witness said she knew nothing about the will being drawn while Miss Brush was at her house. She remembered Mr. De Lano calling, but she was informed that he had to talk about a safe deposit box. During Miss Brush's last illness Mrs. Stetson treated her, witness said.

"Was Miss Brush given any medicine?"

"Never. She was a true Christian Scientist."

"Did any physician call upon her?"

"Yes, a dentist."

"The physician who called was the man who signs your death certificates?"

"I suppose he has signed a great many certificates."

"You know Dr. Charles Griffin Pease?"

"Did he treat Miss Brush!"

"No."

"What is his business?"

"He is a dentist. He gave up the practice of medicine some time ago."

"He is a believer in Christian Science?"

"Yes. He said at one of our experience meetings that he could not use drugs any longer."

"Why was he called in if Mrs. Stetson was treating the case?"

"He signed her death certificate?"

"Yes."

"Don't you know that it is his custom to sign certificates in all Christian Science cases?"

"I suppose so."

"You are sure he did not act as a physician when he called on Miss Brush?"

"I know that he did not attend her as a doctor of medicine."

"Was he there when she died?"

"Yes; both he and Mrs. Stetson had been there for several hours."

"Why did Miss Brush die?"

"Because there was not sufficient understanding on the part of the healer to fit the case. Circumstances may increase or reduce the understanding of the healer."

"Outside of Mrs. Eddy, do you know of any one with more power to heal than Mrs. Stetson?"

"I know no one."

The witness testified that from June, 1899, she had acted as Miss Brush's private secretary and had filled in all checks for her. In June, 1900, Miss Brush had signed a number of blank checks and given them to her to pay bills with. The only salary she received from Miss Brush was $10 a week for two weeks, $5 a week for six weeks, and $2 for another week. The remainder of the five years she had lived with Miss Brush as a friend. When asked how much money she had received from Miss Brush she said she thought between $600 and $700.

Miss Duncan was still on the stand when a recess was taken until to-morrow morning.

NEW GLUCOSE REFINERY.

Standard Oil Men Interested in a Big New Jersey Enterprise.

Officials of the Glucose Trust, otherwise known as the Glucose Sugar Refining Company, heard with surprise yesterday that a big plant for the refining of glucose was being projected by a combination of men most of whom are connected with the Standard Oil Company. Ground for this plant has already been broken at Shadyside, N. J., which is opposite West Sixtieth Street. The new company has not yet been incorporated, but papers will soon be taken out in the State of New Jersey. Among the principal Directors in the concern are John D. Rockefeller, H. H. Rogers, E. T. Bedford, and C. M. Pratt.

Contracts for work have been given out in the name of the Mount Morris Building Company of Brooklyn, an offshoot of the Pratt Institute. Thomas Gaunt is engaged as manager for the plant. Eight years ago he was in charge of the works of the American Sugar Refining Company, and a few years before that time he superintended the building of a million-dollar plant in Chicago for the Glucose Trust. The buildings will cover nearly a third of a mile of the water front. There will be two factories, one of fourteen stories and the other of eight, with a capacity to begin with of 20,000 bushels of corn per day. About 600 persons will be employed at the outset. In front of the buildings are to be four docks, capable of accommodating ocean-going steamships, and connections will be made with the Erie and West Shore Railroads. Following the method of the Oil Trust, the new company is planning to make use of tank cars for railroad transportation.

E. T. Bedford said yesterday that it was not the intention of the Directors to try to rival anybody. No refining of sugar in the ordinary way, he said, would be undertaken by the company, which proposes to deal only in glucose.

"What we intend to do," he added, "is to produce a better quality of glucose than any one has hitherto put on the market. We are not against others who are engaged in the business. The statistics that we have at hand tell us that such an establishment as we plan is warranted by the demand for the product."

The daily capacity of the plants controlled by the Glucose Trust is about 100,000 bushels of corn. Nearly 75 per cent. of the country's glucose is disposed of East of Chicago.

WOMAN BOARDER IN JAIL.

Ties Her Landlady's Son and Packs Up Jewelry, Suspecting Plans for Her Arrest.

Anna McNabb was a prisoner in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday on a charge of having stolen silverware and jewelry to the amount of over $100 from Mrs. Kate Denning of 117 East Seventy-seventh Street, with whom she had been boarding for the last three months.

Mrs. Denning, according to her story told in court, has suspected the honesty of her boarder for some time, and yesterday afternoon she locked her flat and started for the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station to have the woman arrested. As soon as she had left the house Miss McNabb, suspecting her purpose, determined upon an immediate plan of action. Going to the fire escape she pulled in the clothes line, cut a large piece from it, and with this cord securely bound Mrs. Denning's eight-year-old son, Harold, hand and foot and tied him to a chair. Then she calmly went about packing up such articles of jewelry and such other household goods as she desired and prepared to leave the house. Before going, however, she wrote Mrs. Denning the following note:

"You must think I'm a fool to stay here and be arrested. Try again."

At this juncture Mrs. Denning and two detectives arrived and Miss McNabb was arrested. Young Denning told in court how he had been bound by the woman and she was held in $1,000 bail for trial.

SUED BY JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

He Asks an Accounting of the Dante Inferno Company.

John L. Sullivan, the ex-champion pugilist, has commenced an action in the Supreme Court against "Tom" Allen for an accounting of the profits of the Dante Inferno Exhibition Company. Sullivan was engaged by Allen, and was to receive 50 per cent. of the net receipts for his services. One-half of the stock of the company was to go to Sullivan absolutely in 1904. The gross receipts of the business for six months was $48,000. Recently Allen disposed of the place for $14,000.

Allen lives at Metuchen, N. J., and was accustomed to visit New York every day. Jacob E. Bab, a private detective, was engaged to serve the papers. Bab would be termed a "featherweight" by pugilists, while Allen weighs something over 250 pound. Bab waited in Metuchen three days, then Allen started for New York accompanied by two men even larger than himself. The party came across the Cortlandt Street Ferry. Bab arranged with three policemen for protection, and then rushed up to Allen, shoved the papers into Allen's hands, and then ran back to the policemen.

ARTIST WILLIAMS DISCHARGED.

Was Accused of Attacking Sixteen-Year-Old Girl on Monday Night.

Charles B. Williams, the young artist who was arrested late Monday night on a charge of having attacked sixteen-year-old Ada Howard on the doorstep of her home, at 386 Park Avenue, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Hogan. The young woman was in court with her parents, and several well-known artists were on hand to hear witness to the good character of the defendant. Among these latter were Albert Levering, Sewall Collins, and Matthew Morgan, Jr.

Williams's counsel drew from Miss Howard the admission that she had once before complained to a policeman that she had been assaulted by another man. Magistrate Hogan then dismissed the case and honorably discharged the prisoner.

Birds Give Fire Alarm.

The songs of two canary birds at dead of night saved a family from death by fire in a cottage at Quarry Road and One Hundred and Eighty-first Street on Tuesday. The family consists of James E. Powers, a building foreman, his wife, and sixteen months' old baby. At 3 o'clock yesterday morning Powers was awakened by the furious singing of the canaries. He found the place in flames. He rushed up stairs and hurried his wife and baby to a place of safety. The fire did a damage of $1,000 to the furniture and $1,500 to the house.

A Legacy for Councilman Sulzer.

A legacy of 100,000 marks has been left to Councilman Hermann Sulzer by his uncle, Dr. Johann Agolf Sulzer of Frankfort, Germany. Dr. Sulzer was the family physician of the German branch of the Rothschild family, and he died on Nov. 20, leaving a fortune of $100,000. Councilman Sulzer's father will receive 25,000 marks. The remainder of the estate is to go to institutions in Frankfort.

MANY CLUB PRESIDENTS,

Daughters of 1812 Meet and Hear Each Other Speak.

It was honor day of the Empire State Society of the Daughters of 1812 yesterday, and it was celebrated by a big feast at Delmonico's. There were 300 women present, and among that number some 250 Presidents of women's clubs. The Presidents carried off the honors of the occasion. This was not intentional, except in a small way, for the honor guests of the day were the chief officials of the United States, naval and military heroes, and literary men. Unfortunately, they were of such high rank that other engagements prevented them from appearing. This did not make as much difference as might have been expected, for many of them sent autograph letters of regret, which will be preserved in the archives of the society, and will be relics of a glorious past when the granddaughters of the present society women are wearing their grandmothers' badges.

The club Presidents were called by name, and each stood up to acknowledge the honor or say a few words. There were two or three men present, who gazed at the great body of Presidents with awe. The Rev. Dr. Vandewater almost forgot a wedding at which he was to officiate in his interest, but he roused himself before he left and whispered in tones of admiration to a woman at his side: "Do you know what in all this gathering impresses me most? It is that with all these women there are no two hats alike."

Dr. William Tod Helmuth said that a wedding did not take him away, but that vaccinations did.

"He needn't go for that," whispered a woman at the honor table. "He can begin right here."

"I don't know whether he can or not," whispered another. "It would depend upon er—er—upon where people want to be vaccinated."

Mrs. Russell Sage told a story of her mother during the War of 1812, and it was announced that Miss Helen Gould had been made an honorary member of the society. Mr. and Mrs. McKinley, Roosevelt, Dewey, Wu Ting Fang, Mark Twain, and a few others were the honor guests who didn't come.

THE DUKE REFUSED A LICENSE.

Manchester, Being an Alien, Cannot Run Motor Vehicle Here.

Shortly before noon yesterday the Duke of Manchester, accompanied by a licensed engineer, pulled up in front of Police Headquarters in a motor vehicle. The Duke and his companion went to the Bureau of Boiler Inspection, in charge of Sergt. Mangin. The Duke approached Sergt. Mangin and said:

"I'm Manchester."

"You're what?" asked Mangin, in surprise.

"Oh, I'm the Duke of Manchester, and I came here to get a license to run a locomobile. I know all about them, having run them in the old country, and I'm conversant with steam engines, too. I'm ready for the examination."

The Sergeant told the Duke that he was sorry, but could not grant the license, as the law forbid the issuing of a license to an alien.

"Too bad," said the Duke, "as I expected to operate a 'mobile here in the city."

The Sergeant said he was sorry, too, especially as the Duke had married an American girl, but the law was inexorable, and the Duke departed sorrowfully.

Christmas Tree Society's Appeal.

An appeal is made by the Brooklyn Christmas Tree Society, through its President, Mrs. Lena Sittig of 378 Jefferson Avenue, for aid in carrying on its charity. The purpose of the society is to bring joy to children who, if they have ever heard of Santa Claus, regard him as a myth. The Brooklyn society purposes to make the day happy for such unfortunate little ones by seeing that they are not forgotten in the distributions. Contributions of food should be sent to the Salvation Army Headquarters' Receiving Committee, or if a postal is addressed to Mrs. Sittig, baskets will be called for.

City's Twentieth Century Celebration.

President Guggenheimer of the Municipal Council yesterday appointed the committee to take charge of the twentieth century celebration at the City Hall. Councilman Hermann Sulzer was appointed Chairman, and the other committeemen are Councilmen Wise, Hattenroth, Doyle, and Leich. The committee will meet to-day in the Council chamber to prepare plans.

ACQUITTED, THEN ARRESTED.

Albert Albertson Accused of Getting Thousands of Dollars by Fraud.

Louis Stuyvesant Chanler, after securing the acquittal in General Sessions yesterday of Albert Albertson, charged with swindling Mrs. Mary O'Leary of $10,000, was amazed a short while later to be approached on the street by the weeping wife of his client, with the intelligence that Albertson had been rearrested on a similar charge as he came out of the courtroom.

Albertson was charged originally by Mrs. O'Leary of 211 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street with obtaining $7,000 from her under pretense of consummating a deal with the lawyers of the Pennsylvania Steel Rail Company by which he would be enabled to sell to them a valuable patent. Mrs. O'Leary claimed that she gave Albertson the money on May 15 last and never saw either it or the prisoner afterward. In three years, says Mrs. O'Leary, Albertson obtained from her $10,583.

Detectives Barrett and McConville arrested him in the corridor while his wife and child were congratulating him on his release. John Yule, a contractor and politician of 510 East One Hundred and Sixty-first Street, accused Albertson of obtaining from him by worthless checks and promissory notes nearly $22,000. He was charged specifically with the larceny of $550 on Jan. 26. Mr. Chanler, who had in the meantime been notified by Mrs. Albertson, hurried back to court, and, Mr. Yule seeming disposed to withdraw his charge, Albertson was about to go free, when Assistant District Attorney Byrne requested that he be remanded for forty-eight hours, in order that the District Attorney might look into the case further. Magistrate Deuel granted the request, and Albertson went back to the Tombs.

FORGED FOR HER SISTER.

Fifteen-year-old Nellie Moffett, who confessed recently to forging the name of her employer to checks for over $300, was held for trial in the Centre Street Court yesterday by Magistrate Deuel, and committed to the care of the Gerry society.

Nellie was employed by Mrs. M. E. Leary, at 513 Broadway, at a salary of $2 per week. She claims to have spent the greater part of the money she obtained by forgery in paying her aunt $4 a week rent and buying clothes and jewelry for her small brother and sister, who are in the orphan asylum, at Fifty-first Street and Madison Avenue. A doll for her small sister, for a Christmas present, cost $10. President Schlesinger of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, on which the checks were drawn, says the doll will be sent to the little girl.

All of the cars used in this service have been equipped so that they may be operated by the third-rail system while on the elevated road and by the trolley arrangement when they travel on the surface.

REASONS WHY A

Pianola

IS AN IDEAL

Christmas Gift

It enables the receiver to play upon the piano at will any and every selection desired.

It extends this pleasure to every member of the family, thereby multiplying the usefulness of the piano.

It makes unnecessary the drudgery of practicing, as no musical knowledge is required in order to play it.

And it admits of the effects and pleasure of hand-playing, for the player regulates the expression, which is the soul of music.

If you wish to play the piano by hand, roll the Pianola to one side. When you desire to play a selection outside of your selection, roll the Pianola back so that its felt-covered fingers will rest upon the keys of the piano, and insert the music roll.

Nothing is too difficult. Nothing is debarred.

If you wish delivery before Christmas place your order as early as possible, to avoid disappointment as to matching wood of your piano.

JUGGLED CHECKS, NOT BOTTLES

Patrons of the Comique Music Hall who may have expected to see John F. Wright, the "wonderful bottle juggler," on the opening night, may be grieved to learn that Wright is at present "doing stunts" in a narrow cell in the city prison. He is a negro, and when he is not appearing on some stage, he says, he is a bartender in Matawan, N. J. Needing money to get to New York and fill his theatre engagement, Wright says he forged the name of Alexander Gaston, a Matawan brick manufacturer, to

GROVER CLEVELAND ON DEMOCRACY'S PLIGHT

Declares Alliance with Undemocratic Forces Caused Two Defeats and Would Cause a Third.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland contributes to this week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia an extended article on the plight of the Democracy and the remedy. Mr. Cleveland begins by reviewing the history of the party, and he discusses its defects since 1864, in detail. In taking up the question of the present condition of the Democracy, he says that the success of the party in 1892 was so decisive and overwhelming that a long continuance of its supremacy was anticipated. Then came "The fallacy" of free silver and populism. Mr. Cleveland proceeds as follows:

Copyright, 1900, by the Curtis Publishing Company.

"The culmination of Democratic woe was reached when its compact with these undemocratic forces was complete, and when our rank and file were summoned to do battle under banners which bore strange symbols and were held aloft in unfamiliar hands. The result of such a betrayal was foredoomed. This abandonment of the principles of true Democracy, this contemptuous disobedience of its traditions, and this deliberate violation of the law of its strength and vigor, were, by a decree as inexorable as those of fate, followed by the inevitable punishment of stunning, staggering defeat.

"The disaster of 1872, invited by similar mad adventure, was quickly followed by a return to the professions and practices of sane Democracy. But the extent and persistency of our wanderings in 1896 is illustrated in a most astounding way by the command, issued on the day of our rout and discomfiture, that a second battle should be fought on the same field, with the same false war cries and the same leadership that had brought us to the surrounding gloom of defeat."

Again he says: "Thus, in 1900, the lesson of 1896 was contemptuously rejected, and every hope of Democratic success was wilfully cast aside. Again our long-suffering rank and file, whose loyalty and obedience deserved better things, were sacrificed in a cause theirs only in name; and again it was demonstrated, but more clearly than ever before, that the only forces that can win Democratic success are adherence to recognized Democratic principles and reliance upon Democratic councils and leadership.

"Why should we not return to these and in their name achieve victories no less glorious and renowned than were ours in the days of courageous advocacy of our time-honored faith? Are our principles so shop-worn or antiquated as to require renovation, or their displacement by others more fashionable? There is not an honest Democrat in this broad land that will concede these things, nor is there one who would not hail the proclamation of the old faith with that fighting enthusiasm that foretokens Democratic triumph.

"As new conditions arise our principles must be applied to them, but in the creed that has guided us through a century of party existence we shall find the key to every such application, nor shall we need the lexicon of Populism to aid us in interpreting this creed."

Mr. Cleveland touches in turn on free silver and the Federal courts, and believes that true Democrats are against condemning "the general Government for protecting itself in the exercise of its functions against violent obstruction within a State."

Further on he says: "I believe no Democrat will have the hardihood to deny that we have fought our last two campaigns in alliance with undemocratic forces, and that this alliance was immensely costly in defeat. Is there not good reason to suppose that even in success such an alliance would have proved unprofitable and dangerous?"

He preaches the return of Democracy to its old faith, saying: "Sincere Democrats of every condition and in every part of the land realize that the situation of the party needs repair. Reorganization is not necessary, but a return from our wandering is absolutely essential. Let us be frank with ourselves and candidly acknowledge the futility of attempting to gain Democratic victories except in the Democratic cause and through Democratic methods.

"Recrimination is worse than useless, and the arrogation of superior party virtue will breed only mischief. This is a time for sober thought, tolerant language, and fraternal counsels. We are dealing with the conditions of a party that cannot be destroyed by external foes, and, since its ruin can be wrought only from within, it should be imperishable. Above all things, there should be a manly renunciation and avoidance of undue sectional control. Democracy will not operate efficiently on sectional lines.

"There is much for us to do, and the future is full of Democratic duty and opportunity. Our fighting forces will respond listlessly and falteringly if summoned to a third defeat in a strange cause, but if they hear the rallying call of true Democracy they will gather for battle with old-time Democratic enthusiasm and courage.

"If I should attempt to epitomize what I have written by suggesting a plan for the rehabilitation and restoration of true Democracy I should embody it in these words: 'Give the rank and file a chance.'"

AHEARN MAY SUCCEED ENGEL.

His Assembly Candidate's Defeat in the Eighth Displeases Tammany.

Senator John F. Ahearn is slated to be the district leader of the Eighth Assembly District, if the leaders at the Democratic Club adhere to their purpose. The defeat of Councilman Martin Engel's candidate for the Assembly at the last election has upset the Tammany Hall leaders. They say that Engel, the district leader, ought to be able to carry this rock-ribbed Democratic district every year.

Senator Ahearn is now a resident of the Fourth District. He will only have to move a few blocks to become a resident of the Eighth District. The meeting of the election district leaders will be held next month.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—The one hundred and twenty-third anniversary of the entry of the continental army under Gen. George Washington into Winter quarters at Valley Forge was commemorated to-night with a mass meeting at the Academy of Music. To-night's gathering gave the Valley Forge National Park Association an opportunity to formally place before the public the project for the preservation of Valley Forge as a National park. Among the speakers were Senator Penrose, George Edward Reed, President of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Penn., and William H. Marine of Baltimore. Senator Penrose pledged his support to further the object of the association.

BOSTON SUICIDE MYSTERY.

Man Found with Pistol Wound in Hotel Touraine Said to Have Been E. B. Bruce of Baltimore.

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—The Globe this evening says:

"From a reliable source The Globe learns that the Hotel Touraine suicide, 'Edward Blake of New York,' about whom there has been so much mystery on the part of the hotel people, the Board of Health, the Medical Examiner, and the undertaker who prepared the body for shipment, was none other than Edward Blake Bruce of Loudon Park, Baltimore, Md.

"Mr. Bruce was a well-known whisky dealer, with a Boston agency at 114 State Street.

"So far as the official record is concerned, however, the public is still in the dark, for the return made by the Board of Health and the Medical Examiner to the Registrar of Births, Marriages, and Deaths gives the name as Edward B. Blake.

"So faulty was the entire return when it was received at the City Registrar's office this forenoon, that it was returned to the Board of Health for correction.

"The return bears the stamp of the Board of Health, with the date of Dec. 18. First it declares that the date of death was Dec. 12. In another place it sets forth that the man was received at the Massachusetts General Hospital Dec. 14, and in another place the medical examiner says that he died Dec. 15 of a pistol wound in the brain and that he was a suicide.

"The place of birth is given as Brookline, Mass., and his age fifty years, four months, and four days, all of which tallies with the record of Edward Blake Bruce.

"A Baltimore dispatch scouts the suicide idea, but after the Medical Examiner's return there is little room for doubt."

HOWGATE TO BE RELEASED.

Former Chief of Weather Bureau to Leave Prison Next Week.

ALBANY, Dec. 19.—Henry W. Howgate, who has been confined in the Albany County Penitentiary since Nov. 22, 1895, will leave the institution a free man on Saturday, Dec. 29. He will go immediately to Washington, where he will live with his daughter.

Howgate is now an old man, past the threescore and ten milepost, and not a vestige is there in his appearance to remind one of the smart, active, and exceedingly cunning man that bore his name when he defrauded the United States out of several large sums of money. At the time the crime was committed he was at the head of the Weather Bureau in Washington.

Howgate was sentenced for eight years, but good behavior on his part reduced it to five.

DREYFUS TROUBLES NOT ENDED.

Major Cuignet a New Storm Centre of Litigation and Dispute.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—That the troubles incidental to the Dreyfus affair are not yet over, in spite of the passage of the Amnesty bill, is evident from a letter from Major Cuignet in the morning papers asking the assistance of the Minister of War in an action for libel against the Siecle, which has charged him with forgery.

Apart from this, Major Cuignet and Gen. Chamoine have been summoned to the Ministry of War in connection with the confidential statement read in the Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday night by Joseph Lasies, (anti-Semite, Deputy for Condon.) M. Lasies asserted, on the authority of a letter written by Major Cuignet, that M. Delcassé, Minister of Foreign Affairs, had told the Chamber an untruth when he said that Major Cuignet had approved the interpretation officially placed upon the famous Pannizzardi telegram.

The burial was in the Evarts family lot, in the Ascutney Cemetery.

The Beaman family were all present, with the exception of the eldest daughter, Mrs. Homes, who has just arrived in Italy. Among others present were Allen W. Evarts, Sherman Evarts, Mrs. Tweed, Judge Howland, and Mr. Knights of New York.

Immense Apple Crop Up State.

ALBION, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Orleans County harvested this year the biggest apple crop in its history, a full million barrels being put up. In addition to great quantities of bulk fruit shipped early in the season, the largest growers contracted for orchards at $1 per barrel for the fruit, but later prices advanced until $2.50 was finally paid. No fruit was wasted, even windfalls being barreled at $1 and $1.50 and shipped to cities for immediate consumption. The crop is estimated to have yielded $1,500,000 to the farmers. A new company was organized this week, headed by C. H. Baurenburg of New York, to build a cold storage plant with a capacity of 75,000 barrels of apples and 2,000 tons of cabbage, the latter having also become a great money-making crop.

An appeal has resulted in subscriptions aggregating $58,000, and it is believed the rest will come easily.

Over $100,000 in Gifts to Wellesley.

Peter Sells, Circus Man, Divorced.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 19.—Peter Sells, the circus man, was to-day granted a divorce from his wife on the ground of gross neglect of duty. The amount of alimony agreed upon was kept secret by the parties interested, but from an authoritative source it was learned that the amount is $30,000, of which $20,000 is in real estate. All other suits which were pending as a result of the divorce case were dismissed.

RIGID INQUIRY INTO BELLEVUE METHODS

Patients of the Insane and Alcoholic Wards to be Examined.

Dr. Charles L. Dana Says There Has Been Steady Improvement in the Care of the Insane at That Hospital.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller announced yesterday that he would investigate thoroughly the allegations of Dr. Lent and Thomas D. Wright that patients in the insane and alcoholic wards of Bellevue Hospital are inhumanly and brutally treated. The Commissioner yesterday sent four deputies to interview, as far as possible, all the patients who were inmates of the wards during the time that Wright was a patient there. In all about 300 witnesses will be questioned, and it is hoped to obtain sufficient testimony to judge whether the accusations of Wright are well founded.

Commissioner Keller said yesterday: "There are about 300 persons who will be seen regarding the affair. Of course, if two-thirds of these persons say they have been well treated and well taken care of in the hospital, their testimony must necessarily have a great deal of weight. Should there be some who will make statements to the effect that they have been cruelly treated, or have seen others kicked and cuffed, then there will be a rigid investigation, in order to determine just who is guilty."

The Commissioner gave this reason for the discharge of Nurses Davis, Dean, and Marshall: "These men were nurses in the ward where Hilliard died, and were unable to explain how the man received the broken hyoid bone and the broken ribs, and they were discharged for not coming up to the requirements in their duty."

Dr. Charles L. Dana, President of the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital, said last night: "Without any doubt, the reports as to the management of the Insane Pavilion have been exaggerated. I know nothing about the present case of Hilliard and the nurses. It is a separate affair. I have watched the progress of the care of the insane for twenty years, and there has been a steady improvement. There are trained nurses, and a pretty good service.

"Of course, when the nurses have to handle 3,000 or 4,000 cases of acute insanity each year, many of the patients being violent and raging, you can hardly expect them to avoid accident any more than you can expect a railroad to be free from accidents. The women's side of the pavilion is in splendid condition, with excellent nurses. The male side is not so satisfactory.

"I believe that the best plan for conducting the pavilion would be to have a regular house physician to look after the insane patients, a man who would visit the pavilion three or four times a day and look after the insane. At present one of the young physicians attached to the hospital is detailed to the pavilion for a certain time and then another takes his place. The plan of having a regular house physician has been recommended, but it has not been carried out on account of lack of funds.

"In a general way the situation at the hospital suggests the fact that Bellevue would be better out of politics. It ought to be put in charge of a Board of Governors, as is recommended by the Charter Revision Commission.

"I want to say that no criticism can rest on Commissioner Keller for the way he has conducted the hospital. His work has been most efficient and he has done more for the institution than any other Commissioner I ever knew."

Suit Against the Starch Trust.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 19.—A summons was issued from the Supreme Court this morning commanding the Sheriff of Otoe County to notify the Argo Manufacturing Company, the United Starch Company, and the National Starch Company to file their answer with the Supreme Court by Jan. 14 in the suit of the State against these companies for alleged violations of the trust laws. If answers shall not be filed by that time the motion of the Attorney General will be granted and an order issued nullifying the transfer of property. The action to-day is the second step in the suit begun in September by Attorney Ben Smyth against the defendant companies to annul an alleged combine.

Landfall Buries Three Men.

CHADRON, Neb., Dec. 19.—Three men were this afternoon buried beneath thirty-five feet of earth in an irrigation canal four miles east of this city. The names of the men are T. C. Burns of Montana, Staunch Burns, his son, and Woody Litchfield, a hired hand. T. C. Burns is a wealthy ranch and sheep owner, who came here recently and invested heavily in irrigable lands. Half the male population of this city has started for the scene of the accident with teams and shovels, hoping to rescue the men. It is thought, however, that the men cannot survive until released, the ground being a sandy loam in which they have probably been smothered.

Secretary Long to Build in Colorado.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Dec. 19.—John D. Long, Secretary of the Navy, to-day purchased a site for a residence which he will immediately erect in this city. Mr. Long's daughters, who have been here for the past year for their health, will make this their permanent home.

BROTHERS SHOT BY DEPUTIES.

Both the Huffines Mortally Wounded in North Carolina.

WINSTON, N. C., Dec. 19.—Frank Huffines and his brother, whose Christian name was not learned, were shot and both mortally wounded at the home of their father, near Oakridge, Guilford County, about 6 o'clock this morning. The shooting was done by Deputy Sheriff J. W. Mooney and J. W. Waller of Kernersville. They were ordered to arrest the brothers on warrants charging them with being two of the parties who broke into and robbed a barroom near Kernersville on Sunday night.

When the officers went to the Huffines's home they were fired upon by the brothers. A number of shots were exchanged, but the deputies escaped injury. One of the wounded men died this afternoon, and the last report from the scene of the shooting was that the other one was dying.

MRS. BATHGATE FORGAVE.

Generous to Her Husband, Who Sued for Divorce—All Charges Denied.

Vice Chancellor Emery at Jersey City has reserved decision in the divorce suit brought by James Bathgate of the Park National Bank, Manhattan, against his wife, Grace, which was concluded yesterday.

Dr. C. F. Adams, whose name was mentioned by Mrs. Barbara Bathgate, the complainant's mother, testified that he had never visited Mrs. Grace Bathgate except professionally. When he sent in his bill Bathgate said: "If you do not stop dunning me I will drag your name into my divorce suit."

"What did you reply?" asked counsel.

"I told him that if he uttered another threat like that I would strangle him." Bathgate gave him a note for $28.25, which comes due on Dec. 24.

Miss Frances Seitz, who was a dressmaker at the Bathgate home, testified that Atwood, the corespondent, never came to the house except in the evening and in Mr. Bathgate's company.

Mrs. Lucy Atwood testified that Bathgate frequently called at her house and took her son to his own home.

Leland M. Atwood denied all the charges made against him.

He told of an incident at the Bathgate house when Mr. and Mrs. Bathgate and himself were going to witness the fireworks display for Admiral Dewey's return. Just as they were about to leave Mr. and Mrs. Bathgate had some words. Mrs. Bathgate suddenly ran from the porch to the lawn, where she fell in a faint. Mr. Bathgate made no move to help his wife, so Atwood went to her assistance. He lifted her up and carried her to the porch, and left her there, he going into the house for some brandy. When he returned with the brandy he found Mr. Bathgate rubbing his wife's temples. Witness said he remained in the house until 8 A. M., helping Mr. Bathgate to look after his wife.

Mrs. Bathgate, in her own defense, denied all of her husband's charges. She said that once she had found her husband and Miss Avis Carter, one of the plaintiff's witnesses, in a room together, but admitted that she allowed the girl to remain in the house, and even to share her bed, and that she also took Miss Carter to New York and bought for her a cloak, the bill for which was sent to Mr. Bathgate.

Her husband in a jealous rage once threatened to kill her. Two years ago she went to New York and bought shaving utensils to give to her husband at Christmas. That evening they were out of coal. She borrowed some and paid a boy 10 cents for carrying the coal to her house. At the supper table Bathgate asked why she had paid the boy 10 cents, and in a rage he threw at her the platter that held the turkey. The plate went close by her face. Her husband walked around and struck her on the face, knocking her against the wall and making a mark on her face. She had no affection for her husband now, she said. She had lost affection for him after Avis Carter came to her house. Mrs. Bathgate fainted after leaving the witness stand.

RUNAWAY WIFE IS BACK.

Mrs. Duncan Forgiven by Her Husband and Welcomed Home.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 19.—The wife of John Duncan of Dayton, who ran away with George Matthews, her husband's farmhand, has returned, divorce proceedings have been stopped, and the couple have kissed and made up. It all came about through the good offices of Justice John M. Lucas of Prospect Plains. Mrs. Duncan drew $300 of her husband's money to defray the expenses of her trip and also contracted several bills.

Yesterday afternoon Justice Lucas and Mr. Duncan met the slopers on the road near Jamesburg and followed them in a carriage nearly to Helmetta, where they overtook the couple. The Justice had a long conference with the woman, and she finally made up her mind to return to her home. She and her husband kissed there and then and made up.

TELEGRAPH LINES AT AUCTION.

Three Miles Western Union and Postal Company's Equipment May Be Sold for Taxes.

Writs of attachment will be posted on three miles of telegraph and telephone poles in Union Hill, N. J., to-day, and unless the companies pay their tax bills their entire property will be put up at public auction on Saturday. The corporations are the Western Union Telegraph Company, the Postal Telegraph Company, and the Hudson Telegraph Company.

Collector Knox says they are all in arrears for three years' taxes. The local officers of the companies claim that the taxes for this period have been exorbitant. The Collector has no right to attach their property, they say, and if he does they intend to appeal to the court for protection.

"All three companies have been taxed at the same rate as private property holders," said Collector Knox last night, "and the officials of the town have instructed me to proceed against them as I am doing. The property will find ready purchasers at the auction we are assured. The corporations know this, and the threats they are making against me are nothing else but bluff."

SMALLPOX IN JERSEY CITY.

Public School Closed and About 200 Pupils Vaccinated.

Public School No. 6, at St. Paul and Central Avenues, Jersey City, was closed yesterday and fumigated because one of the pupils was taken with smallpox. He is Cuno Woerner, fourteen years old, of 535 Newark Avenue.

About 200 of the 1,600 children in the school were vaccinated.

Albert Mansfield, twenty-six years old, of 595 Pavonia Avenue, was also prostrated by the disease, and he and Woerner were removed to the Hospital for Contagious Diseases at Snake Hill.

RECTOR JUDD RESIGNS.

Has Succeeded in Rehabilitating St. Matthew's Church, Jersey City.

The Rev. Archibald M. Judd, rector of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, Jersey City, has sent his resignation to Bishop Starkey. Mr. Judd said yesterday that he should not leave for two months. His only reason for resigning, he said, was that he had completed the work of reorganizing the church, and other work of the same kind awaited him in other fields.

Matthew's is the oldest church in Jersey City. It was organized Aug. 21, 1808. It was at one time the most fashionable church in the city, but the old members have moved to the Heights, and the parish was not prosperous until Mr. Judd's methods were effective.

Young Mother Kills Herself.

Christina Wild, twenty-two years old, wife of Morris Wild, 39 Bowers Street, Jersey City, committed suicide last night by taking carbolic acid. Before killing herself she tried to kill her fifteen-months-old baby, Mabel, by forcing some of the acid down the child's throat, but only succeeded in burning its mouth. The child was sent to Christ Hospital, and will recover.

Minister Pleads for Brooklyn Boys.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 19.—The Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, appeared in the Union County Court of Common Pleas to-day before Judge Vail and made a plea for leniency on behalf of John King and Louis Mahoney, both of Brooklyn. They pleaded guilty to stealing silverware from the rectory, after receiving financial aid. Dr. Glazebrook asked that they be released under suspension of sentence. King, he said, had once been a cadet at West Point. Judge Vail sentenced them to two years in prison, though he had intended to make the sentence ten years.

Another Case at Perth Amboy.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Dec. 19.—Sarah Koch, sister of Henry Koch, developed smallpox to-day. Her brother was stricken some days ago. She had been quarantined in the same house as her brother.

ENGLAND AND THE CANAL.

It is fortunate that nobody on either side of the Atlantic is in the dark as to the motives of the Senatorial enemies of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. If the English believed that the mangling of the treaty was prompted by old-fashioned American hostility to everything British, a sentiment fostered for more than half a century in the schoolbooks of this Nation, they might take offense, and they would be only human if they retaliated by making all sorts of trouble for us in relation to the canal. But no American is excited and every Englishman is calm, for it is plain that the love of that once popular pastime known as twisting the British lion's tail enters only in the smallest degree if at all as a factor in the not very pleasant exhibition which the Senate is now making of itself before the world. The British Government will continue to be friendly, whatever the Senate may do with the treaty, for where no offense is meant none will be taken.

Great Britain may, indeed, be forced to reject the amended treaty, but that is precisely what the amenders want. They would be disappointed and disgusted if she should good-naturedly accept the Davis amendment and the Foraker amendments, to say nothing of further and worse changes that may be made before the Senate's revision of the treaty is sent to the President. They are conspiring to kill the treaty and the canal with it. That is the motive and intent of the Senatorial representatives of the Panama Canal interest and of the transcontinental railroad interests. The minor factor in the opposition is the rampant "Americanism" of a few bombastic ignoramuses, who take the same view of the canal that Mr. BRYAN takes of the free coinage of silver—that we must go about it without the aid or consent of any other nation. They want a canal, but they want it to be walled by American forts and covered by American cannon. But it is the enemies of the canal that are chiefly responsible for the mischief wrought upon the treaty. This is, of course, as well understood in official circles in England as it is by the general public here. The matter thus becomes a National and purely domestic scandal, about which the English have little or nothing to say.

It is indecent, however, for the other hostiles to describe Senator TILLMAN'S obstructive Panama resolution as a "strike." There ought to be honor enough among the foes of the interoceanic canal project to restrain them from exposing each other in this way. It is expected that the treaty will be ratified to-day, with the unnecessary and muddled Davis amendment, with the amendment declaring the Clayton-Bulwer treaty to be "superseded" by this convention, and with the other Foraker amendment striking out the provision that the treaty shall be offered to other nations for their assent. It remains to be seen whether the enemies of the canal consider this a stiff enough dose to insure rejection by England. If they fear that even with these changes she might accept the convention, they will show their hand by loading it down with further amendments that will leave no doubt either about England's action or their motives.

THE TERMS WITH CHINA.

If Great Britain had not so many troubles of her own, mainly connected with South Africa, more attention would doubtless have been given, during the present session of Parliament, to the condition of things in China. The full reports of the debates on the address to the throne are interesting and instructive, but they do not shed much light on this particular topic. Lord SALISBURY talked about it, literally "about it," in a mystifying and oracular way, winding up his remarks with a plump refusal to tell the House of Lords what the Government was "up to," for fear of endangering pending negotiations. He said that to give his programme would not only be to give away the secrets of the Government, which was objectionable, but also to betray the secrets of others, "which would be still more condemnable." But that Englishmen who have paid attention to the subject recognize that the United States has gained and maintained the leadership on this question, in spite of the declarations of part of the London press, is sufficiently shown. In the debate in the House of Commons Mr. JOSEPH WALTON proposed an amendment which paid the President's message the unusual compliment of adopting its sentiments, and almost its language:

> And we further humbly submit that no demand should be made on the Chinese Government for the punishment of Chinese officials which would not be equally imposed in the case of a European Power; and also that reparation should be sought in increased facilities to trade rather than by a money indemnity.

In his remarks in support of his amendment Mr. WALTON observed that "on the part of the United States we had a clear and definite declaration, of the most satisfactory character, representing exactly what Great Britain desired in China."

While the representative of the Government who replied cavilled at the statement that no demand should be made upon China which would not be made in the case of a European Power, and put his objection on the ground that no European Power had ever behaved as China had behaved, no objection was made to the adoption of the declared policy of the United States as the policy of Great Britain. It is, indeed, so obvious that British and American interests in this matter are the same that it would be astonishing to the point of inconceivableness to find that the two Governments were seriously disagreed as to the proper treatment of the Chinese situation.

CLEARING THE AIR IN FRANCE.

The passage of the Amnesty bill by the French Chamber early yesterday morning is in many respects the most important piece of legislation performed under the auspices of the Waldeck-Rousseau administration. It was a Government measure created by the "Cabinet of Republican Defense" for the sole purpose of promoting tranquillity in political, civil, and military life, of discouraging through absolute prohibition further indulgence in the personal, factional, and race hatreds which for a time had obscured all that was worthy and admirable in French public life. The first paragraph in the bill, which particularly pertains to the Dreyfus case, has already been fully explained. All criminal prosecutions which have been the outcome of the cause célèbre must cease, but the individual rights of DREYFUS as established by the pardon are in no wise impaired. He may, should he possess the proper evidence "unknown at the time of the trial," again seek complete justice at the hands of the Supreme Court of Appeal. But for his supporters as for his enemies the incident is closed.

In accordance with the plan of the Government the bill was very comprehensive. Its benefits apparently embrace every phase of sedition, riot, and personal crime which can in any way be attributed to the peculiar state of government and social conditions which prevailed in France prior to the present administration. It extends to offenses connected with strikes and even reaches the anti-Semitic riots inspired by MAX REGIS in Algiers. There is one point, however, which the measure could not reasonably be expected to cover, and that was the direct acts of treason committed against the republic, even though the men committing them denied any treasonable intent. But had the friends of MM. DEROULEDE, GUERIN, and MARCEL-HABERT been less demonstrative they might have caused an indulgent Government to modify the verdict of the Senatorial High Court of Justice and to have interpreted "treason" into merely "breaking the peace." In fact, the Government has intimated that it was quite ready to take this lenient view of a very serious matter, if only the Royalists, the Jew-baiters, the Nationalists, glorying under the self-applied term of "Patriots," would hold their tongues. But they would not, and the same motives which caused the Government to put an end to the Dreyfus business as a disturber of public peace also caused it to refuse the High Court cases admittance to the amnesty. The "Cabinet of Republican Defense" has solved a very difficult problem, and solved it in a way that must satisfy all but the insincere and the unreasonable.

THE MOROCCAN INDEMNITY.

The comparative promptness with which Morocco has paid the $5,000 indemnity for the murder of a United States citizen calls for some explanation. Incidentally it should serve as an example worthy of emulation by the Sultan of Turkey. The facts are as follows: On Thursday, June 28, MARCUS ESZAGUI, a native Jew of Fez, who had obtained American citizenship by residing in the United States, was proceeding on horseback from his store to his home in the Mellah, or Ghetto, when he met a Tafilet Arab who disputed the right of way with him. The Arab struck Mr. ESZAGUI a blow with a stick which felled him from his horse. While lying on the ground and fearing violence from the crowd which the cries of the Arab had assembled, ESZAGUI drew his revolver and fired twice at his assailant. The second shot took effect in the leg of a bystander. The crowd then fell upon him and beat and stoned him to death. When later they discovered that the wounded man was a holy Shereef, an attempt was made to burn the body of ESZAGUI then and there. At that moment, however, the authorities arrived upon the scene and the crowd was dispersed. The identity of the murdered man was soon after revealed, but, in spite of repeated representations made by the United States Consul in Tangier, no attempt was made to bring the guilty to justice.

It is doubtless true that the Moroccan Government made no effort to trace the crime for the reason that the attempt, if successful, would have been followed by a general outbreak of fanaticism, which would still further have complicated matters, and might have given the French Army in Algeria a sufficient excuse to invade the territory merely as a "protective measure." The occupation of the Algerian-Moroccan hinterland by the French had already caused the Sultan of Morocco to protest to the Powers—protests which so far have, we believe, brought forth no replies. About the middle of November Ambassador PORTER left Paris for Tangier on a "pleasure trip," which, however, produced some uneasiness among the popular French press. The new Sultan of Morocco is a young man of considerable ability, it is said. Possibly he realized that while he might gain little by settling the Eszagui affair at once, he had everything to lose by delaying a settlement. So he paid up, hoping, it may be, that he has thus created some claim to the good-will of the United States which may be exaggerated into moral support in the crisis that is rapidly approaching.

LOOTING IN CHINA.

The announcement that the French Government has refused to receive its share of the loot of Peking, obtained for it by the care of the French soldiers and marines, is a gratifying result of a just sense of shame. The announcement coincides, with almost comic accuracy, with the announcement that the Emperor of Germany has been cheering his returning braves at Berlin, and informing them that their heroic valor had attracted the admiring attention of the "great" Emperor, his esteemed grandfather.

What makes this coincidence comic is the fact that in such fighting as there has been in China the German contingent had no part. That was not at all their fault. It was due simply to their absence from the scene of hostilities. Had they been on the spot they would doubtless have comported themselves in the most valorous manner. But it is nevertheless the fact that they were not in at the fighting, but only at the looting. It is even understood that that letter, at once celebrated and obscure, in which Gen. CHAFFEE protested against their proceedings, and which was returned to the writer by Count VON WALDERSEE, "on account of its tone," pointed this contrast, and intimated that the men who had done the looting had not done the fighting, and that the participation of the later comers in the "punitive expeditions" had been confined to acts of arson, burglary, and murder committed upon helpless and unresisting Chinamen. If it be true that it was in this strain that the American General protested, it is no wonder that his protest should have been received with pain and anger by the German Field Marshal.

The dispatches about the French refusal to receive the loot attribute that refusal to Gen. CHAFFEE'S protest. It is more courteous as well as more probable to assume that it was the spontaneous recognition, on the part of the French Government, of the essential barbarism of the proceedings by which the loot had been acquired, and of the absurdity of any pretension to superior civilization on the part of the despoiler over the despoiled. Certainly it cannot be said that the French did not take part in such fighting as was needed for the rescue of the legations, in which, in fact, their gallantry and efficiency were conspicuous.

It is quite true that the so-called "Chinese Museum" in the château of Fontainebleau consists exclusively of France's "share" of the loot of the Summer Palace in Peking, obtained forty years ago. But the cases are different. All that loot was public property, and, according to the old notions, fair prize of war. And, in the second place, there was a war. We are not at war with China. All this arson, burglary, and murder belong to private and unauthorized war, which is only another name for crime. No foreigner has any more claim, internationally speaking, to the astronomical instruments of the Peking observatory, or to the furniture of the Imperial Palace, than he has to any private possession of any Chinaman who has the misfortune to possess anything that strikes his fancy. The sacking of the Summer Palace forty years ago was an act of belligerent vandalism, like the British burning of the Capitol at Washington in 1814, and less excusable only because it was half a century later. But the looting in China, from which the United States alone have kept themselves quite free, and against which Gen. CHAFFEE has protested, is not merely barbarous, but criminal; and it is gratifying to find it so emphatically rebuked by the Government of the French Republic.

A RED LIGHT SENATE.

The United States Senate Chamber will in future be known as the "Red Light District" of the National Capitol. Over its main entrance the Sergeant at Arms has erected three red lights, which will blush appropriately when the Senate is in executive session. The Sergeant at Arms does not, we believe, enjoy a popular reputation as a humorist, and we doubt if it occurred to him that he was perpetrating a grim joke on the august body of which he is an officer in thus illuminating its front door. Whether the symbol has in fact any part of the significance which it will have in the fancy of the initiated, we shall be better able to judge as the session develops.

To the bucolic mind, unfamiliar with the police slang of the large cities, the expedient of the Sergeant at Arms for signaling members of the House will have another significance. From time immemorial the red light has been a danger signal, and has flashed where danger existed. There have been times within recent years when the Senate has seemed to be a very unsafe arbiter of the National destinies, but it has never appeared necessary to hang a red lantern on a stake beside it to warn the public to shun it. If country visitors put this interpretation upon the red lights over the Senate Chamber door, we confidently hope they will have no better reason for doing so than is found in association of ideas.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Though The Marine Journal of this city regards the Ship Subsidy bill with enthusiastic favor, it draws the line at the proposition to place Representative BOUTELLE of Maine on the retired list of the navy with a Captain's rank and pay. It cordially admits that Mr. BOUTELLE has served his country long and faithfully, and that there is much in his case to excite sympathy, but it declares that, though some provision might properly be made for such a man so sadly afflicted, to put him on the navy list will establish a dangerous precedent, opening the door to many possible abuses. There is something in this view, ungracious as it is and slight as is the inclination in any quarter to make any serious opposition to the carrying out of the purpose upon which Congress has determined. The Marine Journal suggests that as Mr. BOUTELLE is a veteran of the civil war, having been present at the blockade of Charleston and the engagement with the Albemarle, and having an honorable discharge, there would be no impropriety in giving him a pension sufficient to meet his needs. But this, too, is open to some, though less, objection. There is no claim that the Congressman's ill-health is the result of his wartime service, and therefore, strictly speaking, he has no more right to a pension than to the rank and pay of a Captain. Mr. BOUTELLE has been long in public life. He has innumerable acquaintances, and almost as many friends. His State is noted for its appreciation of those who represent it faithfully in the National Legislature. In these circumstances it seems as if there should be no necessity for the present action—action that can be justly criticised for several sound reasons. Maine is not as rich as some of her neighbors, but she is not too poor to take care of her own, and she should not expect the Government to violate a sound principle in her behalf.

—Any professor of rhetoric who wants for use as an illustration or warning the very finest specimen of anti-climax that can be imagined, should promptly seize and carefully preserve the resolution in regard to the close of the nineteenth century which President GUGGENHEIMER presented in the Municipal Assembly on Tuesday. The author of the document gave freest rein to his fancy and his vocabulary in describing what has happened in the last hundred years and in prophesying the achievements of the hundred to come, and the result was eloquence of the good, old-fashioned sort that our grandsires liked so well and for which even the grandchildren of those grandsires still have a lurking admiration, despite their cynical refusals to take it seriously on any day except the Fourth of July. But what a descent was there from the towering flights of the "Whereases" to the "Resolved" upon which the writer had to settle at last! The triumphs of art and science had been detailed in glittering sequence, the future had been pictured in resplendent hues, and then—oh, it was really tragical!—Mr. GUGGENHEIMER had to close with a "Therefore, be it resolved" that a joint committee of the Council and the Board of Aldermen arrange for a proper celebration of the momentous and significant date so near at hand! The wild incongruity of exordium and peroration was not less obvious than lamentable, but, of course, the ever-ready Mr. BRIDGES had to remove the last faint chance that it would escape attention by rising in his place and solemnly asking, "Where does the Board of Aldermen come in?" Where, indeed! The inquiry which Mr. BRIDGES made for one reason will be made by everybody else for another, and that other—well, there is no need of going into that. Nothing would more surely tend to chill the emotions suitable for this season of the year than a disquisition on the qualities and abilities of New York's City Fathers, their relations to and their influence upon the progress and improvement of things in general. No such disquisition shall be attempted here, therefore, but instead we will repeat our admonition to the professor of rhetoric interested in anti-climaxes.

—Whatever The London Times says must, of course, be heard with the respect due to that paper's position in journalism, but it is permissible, nevertheless, to wonder what on earth it means when it suggests that if President MCKINLEY, in the matter of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, would appeal boldly from the Senate to the people, the latter would certainly support him. Over here we know how and why an English Premier "appeals to the people" after an important measure in which he is interested has been rejected by Parliament, but the advice of The London Times is almost enough to warrant the suspicion that a similar knowledge of American legislative methods is lacking there. Mr. MCKINLEY has just made our form of an appeal to the people, and the appeal was answered with an emphasis entirely satisfactory to him. At the same time the people utilized such opportunity as they had for changing the Senate to suit their notions of wisdom and propriety. That is the end of the matter, and the President, with such authority as he has, and the Senate, of such composition as it is, must do the best they can between them with the treaty. But presumably The London Times knows all this, and its curious phrase can hardly indicate anything more than an involuntary resort to familiar turns of expression, with a consequent inaccuracy that is rather one of form than of idea. Congress, so far as the President is concerned, is the people, and to it his appeals of one sort and another will be addressed. His present term of office is his last, whether it meets with popular approval or not, and nothing he could possibly do would give him more power than he now possesses.

—Until very recently the ideas associated with the mosquito were mostly humorous, not that the "little fly" was regarded by anybody as intrinsically amusing, but the harm done by his attacks was supposed to be so slight, as compared with the amount of mental irritation they produced, that the temptation to laugh at his victims, and therefore at himself, was a strong one. It is now more than suspected—by those best qualified to judge it is considered something more than highly probable—that the mosquito ought to be taken very seriously, indeed, as the habitual conveyor of malarial and possibly of other fevers from man to man, and yet the old inclination to make fun of him and his doings still persists. Surprising evidence of this is to be found in a story, printed by several of the medical journals, of a plan for driving malaria out of a big stretch of Italian territory. It is said that one Prof. GRASSI is to conduct the operations on a large scale, on the coast south of Naples. In a region covering some 30,000 square miles, we are gravely told, every house is to be provided with wire screens to the doors and windows, and all the inmates of these screened houses are to be kept indoors between sunset and sunrise. Those who, in spite of these precautions, are attacked by malaria will be isolated in mosquito-proof quarters and will be supplied with quinine free of cost. This tale looks very much like an attempt to make the mosquito-malaria theory ridiculous, which it is far from being. The equipment of any number of houses with wire screens would, of course, be a mere matter of expense, but how are the owners of the houses to be kept indoors between sunset and sunrise? To do so would require the posting of an army of guards, and the guards themselves would be without protection from the mosquitoes! Success in the banishment of malaria, if the new theory is correct, will be attained, not by imprisoning the inhabitants of malarial regions, but by extermination of the mosquitoes in those regions—a task, according to the experts, which is neither difficult nor expensive.

—This Brush will case is important, not so much because of the light it throws on the "Christian Science" method of separating the faithful—and their relatives—from money which the professional healers feel a capability for utilizing, as because of the confession forced from several of the professionals on the witness stand that, though they treat for hire cases of the most dangerous of contagious diseases, they make no reports to the health authorities of these diseases and take no precautions to prevent their spread. That is a phase of the subject in which the public has a vital interest, and the present revelations ought to inspire the action that has been so long and so mysteriously delayed.

Harlem Y. W. C. A. Defended.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement as to the "Equality of the Sexes" found in the "Heard About Town" column for Dec. 17, brings a quiet smile to the face. There seems to be work for each, and room for improvement in each. Possibly the "complaining" is a confession of weakness on the one side.

Any one who has received the impression that the Harlem Young Women's Christian Association is going to rapid decay is invited to call and investigate. The association is young (organzed in 1891) and is not growing rich on the tuitions received, which, in fact, do not cover all expenses. In the four years the new building has been in use steady improvements have been made, and evidences of decay will hardly be found. As to the "penny wise and pound foolish" policy, the available penny has not been despised.

It is proverbial that those who pay the least and work the least for an object are the ones who find the most fault. Any one wishing to know the amount paid by the dissatisfied one for membership, tuition, locker, shower baths, &c., may have a surprise in store by calling at the Harlem Young Women's Christian Association. We invite comparison with other gymnasiums in the city as to expenses and advantages, actual as well as on paper.

In regard to the gymnasium being the chief attraction of the place—the membership of the association is 1,020; there are 293 in the gymnasium classes, the majority coming twice a week; 305 in the educational classes, coming two, three, and four times per week; 50 in the boarding department, several of whom have made it their home since the building was first opened; a noon lunch and rest room, patronized by from 50 to 100 each working day, and an employment bureau doing very active work.

If there are tired ones at the helm, it is not a constitutional condition, but the result of much work accomplished as well as projected which in some places is done by the investment of the pound instead of the penny.

It is always easier to criticise than to do. A criticism made to the public in general instead of to the parties responsible does not show a spirit of helpfulness. The business woman is not a finished product, but one in process of evolution. Give her a little time; her education is progressing. In the meantime, investigation and criticisms direct are invited. The Check Becomes a Memorandum.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to labor, time, stationery, and expense attending the return receipts for payments received, I beg to suggest through you to the merchants of the United States the use of a method employed by one of my customers, namely, printing on the back of each check, "The amount of this check is in payment of —," and about seven lines thereunder for writing, "Bill, 12-4, 1900, $1,300, less — per cent.," &c.

NUGGETS.

So Much Is Sure.

It is claimed on excellent authority that, at all events, the candles used by the Bishop of Fon du Lac at the late much-criticised ceremonials were not Roman.—Boston Transcript.

Unreturned.

"I'd have had a fine library by this time if I hadn't been so sentimental."

"What do you mean?"

"I have lent nearly all my books to girls who never returned them."—Chicago Record.

Unattainable Fields.

"Have you ever thought of the people who might be inhabiting the planets in distant space?"

"No," answered Mr. Cumrox. "What's the use? We couldn't get at them to sell them goods or civilize them."—Washington Star.

An Impressionist Effect.

"They gave Briggs the job of hanging the pictures at the club, and he hung an impressionist painting upside down."

"Well?"

"Nobody detected the blunder until the artist visited the club."

"What did he say?"

"He said it was all right."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Censored.

"Wait!" exclaimed the first Londoner, stopping before The London Times's office, "let's read these bulletins about the situation in South Africa."

"No," replied the other, much disgruntled; "I want to know nothing at all about it."

THE CHRISTMAS DOLL.

Folger McKinsey in Baltimore News.

They have clothed my figure in silk and lace;
In a window, where all may see,
They have stood me up in my dainty grace
For the throngs to look at me.
I watch the thousands that hurry by,
The wistful faces that peer
With longing glances—Ah! hear them sigh,
And whisper, "How sweet!" "How dear!"

There are drums and toys and a hundred lights,
Spangles and blocks and books,
But what does she care for the other sights,
The sad little girl who looks
At the snowy lace of my dainty dress
And the wax of my crimson cheek,
At the careful curl of each golden tress
And my lips that seem to speak?

I like her better than all the rest,
Who stand and stare each day;
I long to lie with my head on her breast
And hear what her heart would say;
I trust that the fates have seen her, too,
Her story of longing read,
And will carry me upto her arms so true
Some night in her pauper bed!

I know she will look with a glad surprise
In the morn when she awakes,
That the joy of her heart will glow in her eyes
For a thousand children's sakes,
And the sun will shine in her sunless home
As it never has shone before,
While her dream of the fairy, the elf and gnome
Will sing to her o'er and o'er!

You may fancy it dull for a doll to be Dressed up in a window fine,
With laces and silk and a smile of glee
In her eyes with their glassy shine;
You may think it a bore for a doll to pose
Where thousands of faces peer—
Some with the cheek of the damask rose,
And some with the stain of a tear.

But, oh! it is sweet for the thought it brings
Of the happiness I may bear
Some morn to a little sad bundle of things
Asleep in an attic bare;
Of the joy and the bliss and the love and light
The giver who gives me may
Send forth in the beautiful dreams of the night
To banish her sorrow away!

VARIOUS DRAMATIC TOPICS

Clyde Fitch a Busy Man These Days—Are We to Have Still More "Book Plays"?

In the rural retreat of Marguerite Gautier and Armand Duval, as it is represented at the Garden Theatre, there are two doors at the back opening abruptly on a garden. Beyond is exhibited that same English country lane which also does duty as the back cloth in two scenes of "La Tosca." Between the doors is a fireplace with a mantel surmounted by a mirror, and in the mirror, or through it, (for one's vision, in this case, goes like Alice in the story, through the looking glass,) that same country lane is observed. In other words, the mirror is merely a gauze-covered opening in the scene, and there is no "backing." The effect is peculiar and disconcerting, and acting quite as powerful and graphic as Mme. Bernhardt's and M. Coquelin's is required to hold the attention of the spectator in the circumstances.

It is curious that the only dramatic performances given in any centrally situated theatre in Manhattan in which such inadequate pictorial accessories would be tolerated are these, for which the tickets cost $5. The only really well-mounted and wholly well-acted play in the series, thus far, has been "L'Aiglon." When Scarpia was stabbed by Floria, in the performance of "La Tosca" the other night, he fell partly upon a sofa which broke down under the weight of his body. When the curtain fell on that thrilling episode, after Tosca had crawled away from the room in which her victim was lying, it was raised again on the instant, discovering M. Coquelin and his distinguished associate in art bowing, hand-in-hand, with the crucifix, which had been reverently put on Scarpia's breast, lying on the floor in front of them. Before the third recall the crucifix had been lifted from the floor, but the incongruity of its presence there had already produced a sort of uncanny effect.

There are few first-rate or even second-rate actors in the supporting company. Mme. Patry, who came here first with Coquelin and Jane Hading in 1888, and was strikingly successful in many plays, especially "Les Surprises du Divorce," is a wholly competent performer, of course, but her Prudence is an exceedingly pale bit of acting these days, under Bernhardt's new rule of repressing her associates. She is permitted no characteristic note in her dress now, and much of the old "business" has been suppressed.

Deneubourg, who was here with Mme. Bernhardt five years ago, is a generally wooden juvenile. Perhaps in one could say Christian in "Cyrano" with more fervor. Certainly no one ever has acted Armand Duval with less. Desjardins is a good actor, who is excellent as Metternich and de Guiche. Deschamps, the low comedy man, who has recovered from his illness, is a conventional actor much given to mugging and extravagant gesticulation. Mme. Mea is an agreeable and skillful actress.

Clyde Fitch is a hard-worked man these days. He is rehearsing two companies in new plays, both of which will have their first performances early in January. "The Climbers," to be produced by Amelia Bingham at the Bijou Theatre, with a cast including Miss Bingham herself, Frank Worthing, Robert Edeson, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Annie Irish, Clara Bloodgood, and Minnie Dupree, is a four-act comedy of modern life, said to be entirely original in plot, characterization and development, and to be akin to the "problem play," at which the old-fashioned critic always rears and shy. But "problem play" is only a term, like "dude" and "strenuous life," which means nothing at all. Any good play contains some sort of a problem and its solution.

The other piece, "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines," is a three-act comedy, which takes its title from William Horace Lingard's old song. The action passes in this city in the year when that song was new, and the Academy of Music on Fourteenth Street, rebuilt after the fire of 1866, was the splendid home of Italian opera and was still called "new." The heroine is an American girl who has studied music abroad and returns to her native land to sing in opera. The trend of the piece is mirthful, with always a hint of sentiment. The principal part was designed for Ethel Barrymore, who will act it in Philadelphia Jan. 7, and a fortnight later, probably, in this city.

The hearty and prodigiously amiable personality of Burr McIntosh is again put to good account in "Janice Meredith" at Wallack's. He represents Philemon Hennion, the country gawk with a good heart, of countless plays and books; the son of a Tory and a British officer all through the piece, with no end of folly and grotesquery, but his heart distinctly and immovably in the right place. He is drugged by the villain and carried out just before the last curtain, and his departure in such an unpleasant predicament is a cause for regret.

The part is not quite so flamboyant as the utterly impossible cowboy in Mr. Fitch's burlesque of ranch life, "The Cowboy and the Lady," but it does very well. Mr. McIntosh has an egg broken in his pocket in Act I., wears a new helmet which makes him look like a jovial chanticleer in Act II., refuses to shoot the hero with his property pistol in Act III., and is finally exhibited as a sentimental and self-sacrificing friend of innocence and virtue.

Is it possible, after all, that dramatizations of novels fresh from the presses are not shortly to grow in disfavor and the dramatist who makes plays out of his own materials, artistically, is not to soon get the encouragement he deserves? So shrewd an observer of the commercial side of theatricals as Elisabeth Marbury seems to think so. This energetic lady has long been the agent here of the society of French dramatic authors, of some of the English men and women who write plays, and of a few American playwrights. She has now, temporarily let us hope, enlarged her trade by establishing a "book play" department, in the conduct of which she will be helped by Jeannette L. Gilder. Miss Marbury announces that she will now be able to get books for quick dramatization fresh from the griddle, and that she has made arrangements to work in the swiftest fashion with all the publishers of note in the country. This is somewhat alarming.

The plays made from novels, however, are generally very poor plays, and while the same objection does not hold against the quick dramatization of contemporary ephemeral publications as it does against the ruthless subjection of literary masterworks to the hands of hack playwrights, still the signs surely are that the multitude is getting rather tired of dramatizations of books.

The work has been encouraged by the publishers, of course, quite as much as by the theatre managers. Both trades share in the profits, and while the play indirectly advertises the book, the publishers are now going further and getting out new editions of their books which directly advertise the play. A Mary Mannering edition of "Janice Meredith" and a Maude Adams edition of "The Little Minister," illustrated with photographs of the actresses in character, are amusing signs of the times, but a theatrical edition of "Vanity Fair" with pictures of a stage player in the character of Rebecca, fairly makes one shudder, as Lamb shuddered at the epitaph ranking Garrick with Shakespeare in Westminster Abbey.

Sir Henry Irving said some wise things the other day in regard to fashions in plays and the rivalry of the artistic and the commercial drama. He declared that purely commercial theatricals failed to pay as often, in proportion, as artistic ventures.

"The dramatic tide," he said, "has its flow, like other tides, and you cannot be sure that a particular policy, although it may enjoy an enormous success for a considerable period, will always be an advancing and never a receding wave. Nobody has found the philosopher's stone. No theatrical manager has discovered a type of play that he can go on repeating with a positive certainty that it will always please the public. But to say that this is a total discouragement of artistic conditions on the stage is to draw a very hasty conclusion from the mutability of human affairs."

THE OPERA SEASON.

"Tannhaeuser" Performed at the Metropolitan Opera House.

For the second night of the season of opera in several foreign tongues at the Metropolitan Opera House, Mr. Maurice Grau offered "Tannhäuser und die Saengerkrieg auf Wartburg," grand romantic opera in three acts, the book and the music by Wilhelm Richard Wagner, first performed at the Royal Court Theatre in Dresden on Oct. 19, 1845. This very old work has been heard in this city many times, and is now familiar to all operagoers. There was considerable controversy about it at one time, but since a certain Mr. Rowbotham, an English commentator, announced that the Wagner bubble had burst, the publics of most of the large cities in the world have decided that there really was no cause for excitement. "Tannhäuser," accordingly, comes along every season in its place in the scheme of performances, and seems not to have lost its attractions. The world looks on without serious questionings, except in the final scene, which is yet too tragic to be received with ease in polite society.

It cannot be said that there were any revolutionary features in last night's performance. The principal roles were in the hands of persons whose intepretations have not now to be made known to New York operagoers. With M. Ernst van Dyck as the wandering hero, Mme. Ternina as the saintly Elizabeth, the courtly M. Plançon as Hermann of Thuringia, the patron of song, and Mr. Theodore Bertram as Wolfram, the high-minded singer of mediaeval epics, things unheard-of were not at all likely to happen. Last night M. van Dyck was in uncommonly good voice, and the results were most delectable. His Tannhäuser is a noble conception, a genuinely tragic figure, and needs only the medium of a finished vocal art to make it imposing. When the singing is better than usual the gods must be praised, for M. van Dyck is a dramatic personality.

It would be easy to rhapsodize about Mme. Ternina's Elizabeth, but rhapsody is not criticism. Suffice it to say that she fulfilled every requirement of the part. In tenderness and womaniness she was most convincing, while her delivery of the music was distinguished by the utmost refinement and detail of style. Mme. Ternina is a great artist. As Venus Miss Susan Strong lacked the requisite beauty of tone, but she gave an intelligent impersonation, and was especially successful in showing the real feeling of the goddess toward Tannhäuser. M. Plançon repeated his dignified and effective performance of the Landgrave, and Mr. Bertram sang the music of Wolfram beautifully. If last night was a fair sample of what he is going to give us this season, we may be very glad that he has returned.

Mr. Walter Damrosch conducted the performance. He was cordially received by the audience, and read the score with satisfying knowledge, with understanding, and genuine warmth. He deserves the heartiest praise for his work, and the orchestra responded to his demands with skill. Taking it all in all, the performance of "Tannhäuser" last night was one of uncommon beauty and eloquence. Those who gave it and those who received it are alike to be congratulated.

MME. SEMBRICH'S RECITAL.

A song recital by Mme. Sembrich for the benefit of the George Junior Republic will be given at Carnegie Hall next Saturday afternoon. The George Junior Republic at Freeville, N. Y., was founded by Mr. William R. George, and through his efforts has accomplished a great success in making useful citizens out of boys and girls.

The government of the republic is by the citizens themselves. The constitution is modeled after that of the United States, and the laws are those of the State of New York. All the executive offices are filled by the youthful citizens, who take great pride in their positions. A police force is one of the features. Improvements have been made in the accommodations at Freeville in the last three years, but the facilities are not equal to the demand. There are 1,000 applicants on the waiting list, and it is to extend the benefits of the little republic that aid is sought. Tickets are on sale at Schuberth's, 23 Union Square. Reserved seats, $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50, and boxes, $15 and $25.

Mme. Sembrich will render a selection of classical German and international folksongs, with Mr. Isidore Luckstone at the piano.

MR. KREISLER'S VIOLIN RECITAL.

When Moritz Rosenthal, the Roumanian piano whirlwind, made his first appearance before the connoisseurs of Gotham in the Fall of 1888 he was assisted in his concerts by a boy, who played the violin. This boy was an awkward youth, and the long Hessian boots which he wore did not add to the grace of his bearing, for they seemed to make him heavy-footed. But it was conceded that the boy had a talent for playing on the violin. The boy has come back. He is no longer a boy, but a man, a big, broad-shouldered fellow, with pointed moustachios and a pair of intense, flashing dark eyes that tell of a world of passion. He made his reappearance here at the recent concert of the Philharmonic Society, but at that time the interst of those who make public their impressions of musical performances was absorbed by a weird and powerful and disturbing composition by the wild man of Munich, Richard Strauss; and so the violinist, Fritz Kreisler, was passed by with the slightest mention.

Yesterday afternoon, however, Mr. Kreisler gave a recital at Mendelssohn Hall and there was ample opportunity to take the measure of the grown artist. His programme was well suited to a full revelation of his powers. It comprised a suite by Bach, Vieuxtemps's second concerto, short pieces by Mozart, Nardini, Corelli, and Chaminade, (the last arranged by Mr. Kreisler,) and the violinist's own transcription of Paganini's "No Piu Mesta," itself a transcription. The fact that this composition in its original form was not hard enough to satisfy this young man might lead to a suspicion that technical agility constituted the extent of his claim to consideration. But this would be a false assumption. It is true that Kreisler is a technical wonder worker. He plays with great dash and assurance and attacks alarming difficulties with a boldness that must astonish more cautious players. He shows uncommon recklessness in rushing up the finger board to the high positions, but his seemingly wild shots at harmonics only rarely miss their mark.

He plays a very fast and clear staccato, and his double stopping is clean and generally accurate. It must be admitted, however, that his intonation is not always impeccable. It has uncomfortable moments. His tone is big, but neither noble nor melting. It is a metallic tone, and its badness is well paired with the performer's general style of playing. The suave and serene do not appear to lie comfortably within the grasp of this violinist. He is happiest when he is storming the heights, when he can declaim in rhapsodical passages or flash along in chromatic trickeries and hazardous leaps. But behind all his work there is a warmth of temperament which prevents his playing from descending to the level of a mere technical display. His warmth is communicative, and he should always be heard with interest, albeit the mature hearer will surely long for more of the repose and finish and authoritative poise of a refined art.

NEW THEATRE FOR NEW YORK.

Pabst Brewing Company Agrees to Build One on "The Circle."

DETROIT, Dec. 19.—A contract was signed here to-day by E. D. Stair, part owner of the Stair Circuit of Theatrical Enterprises, in which the Pabst Brewing Company of Milwaukee agrees to erect a hotel and theatre on "The Circle," in New York City, at a cost of $700,000. The contract embraces a lease of the theatre to E. D. Stair, who will operate the same as a popular priced family theatre.

The building will be 100 by 140 feet in size, the longest side fronting on Fifty-ninth Street. The entrance to the theatre will be opposite the Columbus Monument on "The Circle." The hotel will be operated on the European plan. It is said that C. J. Whitney of this city may be associated with Mr. Stair in the management of the theatre.

The representatives of the Pabst Brewing Company in this city confirmed the report that their company would construct a hotel and theatre on the above property. Deeds have been signed, and the erection of the theatre will begin early in January, and it is expected to have the building completed and ready for occupancy about Oct. 1 next.

MYSTERY OF MUDDLE IN PEKING EXPLAINED

Word "Irrevocable" Was Reinserted in the Joint Note.

Mr. Conger Declared State Department Had Changed Its Mind—Says Cable Error Caused Him to Do So.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The whole story of the bungle at Peking is now known, and it is apparent that there have been some very queer doings in that capital.

The mystery of why Great Britain believed that the word "irrevocable" was not in the protocol when she intimated that she would sign it is solved. The word had been stricken out of the protocol, not on the demand of Great Britain, but on the demand of the United States, and the word was not in the copy of the treaty received at the British Foreign Office, nor in that received at Washington. Both nations intimated their willingness to sign the protocol and then the word was reinserted at Peking.

Furthermore, it was not Great Britain who first protested against the word "irrevocable." It was the United States, and the United States has been protesting against that word all along, and has from the first refused to sign any treaty in which the word appeared. The impression has gone forth that Great Britain protested against the word and that the United States fell in line and backed her up. The fact is that the United States made a vigorous protest and Great Britain has followed her lead. The other powers are united in demanding the retention of the word.

When the protocol was drawn up and submitted to the United States Government the latter was not satisfied with all its provisions, but decided to accept them for the sake of harmony. There was one word, however, which the State Department felt that it could not accept even for that reason. It was the word "irrevocable." The United States means to stand by the demands, but it objected to being bound to go to war with China if a single clause of the protocol should be rejected. This was the obvious meaning of "irrevocable."

The protest of the United States met with stubborn opposition from all the powers except Great Britain. The powers indicated their belief in the importance of the word by the vigor with which they insisted upon its retention. There was ground for suspecting that some of them were anxious for its retention for the very contingency which the United States dreaded, and that there was a desire in some quarters to commit all the powers to war in case any of the demands were rejected.

The position of the United States was made known to Great Britain, and that power heartily approved of it. Sir Ernest Mason Satow was instructed to demand the erasure of the dangerous word. There was a hard and bitter fight at Peking, but at last the inflexible opposition of the United States and Great Britain proved successful. They resolutely refused to sign any protocol which contained the word "irrevocable," and, finding that they could not be moved, the other powers reluctantly surrendered and assented, with great unwillingness, to the excision of the word. The protocol, with this word left out, was then sent to the United States by Minister Conger and to Great Britain by Minister Satow. The United States announced that it would sign the agreement, and Great Britain indicated that she would order Minister Satow to do the same.

Then came the surprising delay in Great Britain's signature. It was not understood at the time, and was attributed to simple slowness, but the truth was that Great Britain was in receipt of information of which the United States was ignorant. Minister Satow had communicated the news to his Government, but Minister Conger had not.

What had happened was this: Just as the Ministers were preparing to sign the agreement the word "irrevocable" was reinserted. Minister Conger appeared at the meeting of the envoys and announced that the United States had changed its attitude; that it was now willing to have the word reinserted, and that he had received instructions to that effect and would join with the other envoys.

The envoys of all the other powers but one were delighted at this unexpected acquisition. Minister Satow vigorously protested, and declared that the Government would under no circumstances consent. This did not weigh with the other envoys. It is a singular and significant fact that, although the combined opposition of the United States and Great Britain had seemed to the other powers important enough to make them reluctantly surrender their position, they were ready to pay no attention to Great Britain when the United States was on their side. Apparently they were willing to get along without Great Britain's signature if the United States was on their side. Sir Ernest made it perfectly plain that they would not get the British signature. They overrode his objections and prepared to sign the agreement.

Sir Ernest telegraphed the news to his Government, where it produced absolute stupefaction. The news was presently communicated to the State Department by Great Britain. At the State Department it was regarded as incredible. It was not considered possible that Minister Conger should have deliberately disobeyed his instructions, although he was known to favor making the protocol as vigorous and mandatory as possible. Great Britain was assured that the State Department had nothing to do with Mr. Conger's behavior, and some strong telegrams were sent to the American Minister by his superiors at Washington. He was asked to explain the story of Minister Satow, and was reminded that his instructions positively required him to dissent from any protocol containing the word "irrevocable."

It was not until yesterday that Minister Conger's explanation was received. He declared that there had been an error in the transmission through the cable of one of the State Department's dispatches. It was a dispatch reminding him that he must insist on the exclusion of the word, and as he heard the wa to insist on the retention of the word.

This was explained to the British Foreign Office yesterday by Ambassador Choate, and renewed instructions have been sent to Minister Conger. It is believed that when the other powers understand that Great Britain and the United States are united they will again yield, although they will naturally be displeased.

BRITISH DEMANDS AGREED TO.

The Main Points of the Joint Note as Now Decided On, So Far as Can Be Gathered.

PEKING, Dec. 19.—At a meeting of the foreign Ministers late this evening everything in regard to the terms of the joint note was agreed to, including the British modifications.

The Ministers refuse to disclose anything in connection with the matter, believing that the home Governments should give the particulars to the public.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—While nothing had been heard from Mr. Conger up to a late hour to-night, regarding the agreement said to have been reached in Peking as to the terms of the joint China note, the officials confidently hope that the statements are correct, and that the way is now paved for its formal presentation to the Chinese plenipotentiaries. The officials here are unable to say just what the "British modifications" referred to are, but it is believed they rested upon the exclusion of the word "irrevocable."

The Chinese peace envoys will receive a reasonable time within which to consider the demands made, and then will follow the formal negotiations for the settlement of the peace terms.

Officials here still decline to make public the text of the note agreed on, but it is believed that the following points cover the essential features of the agreement:

The payment of indemnity for the wrongs inflicted by the Boxers to the persons, corporations, and societies which have suffered.

The revision of commercial treaties.

Some reform in the Tsung-li-Yamen, so that the Ministers having business with the Foreign Office may transact it more expeditiously and with a responsible head.

A monument to Baron von Ketteler, the German Minister who was killed in Peking, and the appointment of a Prince of the blood to proceed to Germany to make formal apology to the Emperor for the crime.

The exclusion of candidates for examinations for offices for a certain number of years in the case of those who may be guilty of anti-foreign activity.

An interdiction of importation of arms into China and of material to be used exclusively in the manufacture of arms.

The taking of measures to prevent future troubles.

Some modification, it is believed, was made to the proposed clause calling for the dismantling of forts, so that hereafter there will be nothing that will prevent ready access to the legations in Peking.

WALDERSEE DECLARED BRUTAL

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 19.—The Novoe Vremya declares that there are evidences of discontent on account of Field Marshal von Waldersee's brutality in all the armies in China, including the German force.

The paper supports the demand that each army act henceforth on its own responsibility.

Germans Get Venezuelan Coal Land.

Mr. Choate Not to Resign.

HONOR FOR LIEUT. W. S. SIMS.

French Government Denies Truth of "Disclosures" by Offering Cross of Legion of Honor to Him.

PARIS, Dec. 19.—The French Government has given the most emphatic denial to the statements in those French papers which tried to involve the American Embassy in the disclosures in connection with the United States War Department's knowledge of French gun secrets by offering the Cross of the Legion of Honor to Lieut. William S. Sims, the former United States Naval Attaché at Paris.

It was Lieut. Sims whom La Presse described as the person guilty of disclosing the gun secrets. When the news was first published here the anti-Governmental press attempted to use it as a weapon against the Ministry, and La Presse accused, anonymously, the ex-Naval Attaché of the United States Embassy, making the description to distinct that diplomatic circles knew Lieut. Sims was intended. The paper said, among other things, that "he [Sims] acted almost openly as a spy for several powers."

The news became public to-day that M. Delcassé, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, had offered the Cross of the Legion of Honor to Lieut. Sims, who is now on board the battleship Kentucky. As the Lieutenant is a Government official, he is unable to accept the honor without the consent of Congress.

Colombian Rebels Badly Defeated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The State Department has received a cablegram from United States Chargé d'Affaires Beaupré, at Bogota, stating that a great battle has been fought at Girardet Point, Magdalena River, Colombia. It lasted two days and resulted in a decisive victory for the Government. It is reported that 600 were killed and many hundreds wounded. Other victories by the Government forces of the utmost importance have been announced. The Government is celebrating the victories and considers itself greatly strengthened by the success of its arms.

German Census Returns.

BERLIN, Dec. 19.—The census shows 33 cities with populations exceeding 100,000 each, whose aggregate is 9,077,034, or an increase of 1,151,882 since 1895. The rapidity of the returns is due to the use of electrical tabulating machines invented by Dr. Herman Hollerith of Washington.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 19.—The Earl of Hopetoun, Governor General of the Commonwealth of Australia, has requested William John Lyne, the Premier of New South Wales, to form the first Federal Ministry. Mr. Lyne is considering the proposition.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENT DELAYED

Law Governing Bedford Avenue Extension Declared to be Defective.

The plan to extend Bedford Avenue, in the Borough of Brooklyn, was considered at the meeting of the Board of Public Improvements yesterday. A large delegation of property owners was present to speak in favor of the plan.

Corporation Counsel Whalen, however, sent an opinion to President Holahan which will delay this improvement for some time, and may prevent the work being done except by an act of the Legislature. A resolution was passed by the Board of Public Improvements directing Corporation Counsel Whalen to proceed to acquire property through condemnation proceedings. By an act of the Legislature, which was passed over Mayor Van Wyck's veto, it was declared that the city shall bear two-thirds of the cost of the improvements and the property owners one-third. In this bill no power is cited under which assessments are to be levied, and Corporation Counsel Whalen holds that this is a serious defect in the law.

The property owners from Brooklyn were surprised at the turn affairs took yesterday. They protested against further delay, but it was finally decided to rescind the resolution directing Corporation Counsel Whalen to begin proceedings.

A resolution was passed authorizing the construction of a sewer from the East River to William Street and adjacent streets in Queens, at an estimated cost of $486,976.

The board voted to spend the sum of $107,200 for regulating and grading East One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street from Summit to Anderson Avenue, in the Bronx.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 19.—The funeral of George Craig Ludlow, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and former Governor of New Jersey, will be public. It will take place from the First Presbyterian Church here on Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Rev. Voorhees, at Trenton, issued a proclamation ordering flags on public buildings at half-mast until after the funeral. Public buildings will be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Canada Subsidizes a Steamship Line.

MONTREAL, Dec. 19.—It is announced to-day that the Government has decided to grant the Franco-Canadian Steamship Line, which runs from Montreal to Havre, a yearly subsidy of $50,000 for five years, provided it runs a bi-weekly service in Summer and a monthly service in Winter. The general manager has gone to France to arrange for the building of four new boats.

PURSUIT OF DE WET MAY BE ABANDONED

War Office Admits Knox's Troops May Be Needed in Cape Colony.

PITCHED BATTLE EXPECTED

Dispatch, Dated Sunday, Says Another Fight Between Clements and Delarey Was Imminent.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The War Office last evening would give no information regarding the reports of a Boer invasion of Cape Colony. The officials expressed the opinion, however, that the newspaper accounts were exaggerated, but at the same time admitted that probably the troops which have been employed in chasing Gen. De Wet would be diverted to deal with the invaders. Having regard to the customary methods of the War Office, this can only be interpreted as confirming the reports.

It was unofficially reported yesterday that Gen. Knox had been forced to abandon the pursuit of Gen. De Wet owing to the situation created in Cape Colony by the Boers having crossed the Orange River.

It is said that 3,000 Republicans have entered Cape Colony, and that a considerable number have reached Philipstown.

De Wet, with about 4,500 men, is reported northeast of Ladybrand, and an attack on Winburg is momentarily expected.

Lord Kitchener, in the meantime, keeps a tight rein over the news, which increases the public disquietude. There is a persistent rumor that he has demanded heavy reinforcements.

According to The Daily Mail, private telegrams received in London yesterday depict the situation in Cape Colony as somewhat ominous. It seems that the invading Boers are receiving considerable assistance from the local Dutch, and that the troops at the disposal of the British authorities are not sufficient to cope with any serious spread of the military operations.

It is believed that the Government has at last awakened to the seriousness of the situation and is making the greatest efforts to provide Lord Kitchener with horses and mules.

The British losses at Nooitgedacht, according to the official accounts, were eighty-two killed and wounded, with forty-four of the missing still unaccounted for.

KRUGERSDORP, Transvaal, Dec. 16.—A pitched battle is imminent between the British under Gen. Clements, who has been reinforced, and the Boers under Gen. Delarey

MR. KRUEGER AT AMSTERDAM.

Cheered by Big Crowds—Says British Employ Women and Children Against the Boers.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 19.—Mr. Krüger arrived here to-day. He was met at the railroad station by the municipal and communal authorities. Speeches were exchanged in the royal waiting room. A bouquet was presented to Mr. Krüger, whose every appearance was the signal for rounds of applause.

Very large crowds lined the route to the Town Hall, where the Burgomaster made a speech in which he said he hoped Mr. Krüger would succeed in his efforts to secure honorable peace. Mr. Krüger, in the course of his reply, said:

"In 1884 we obtained our independence, but that honorable action has been obliterated. The invaders are ten against one, but we await the day when God will make known His will. We rely on His help more than on Emperors and Princes. I have not come as a fugitive, but by order of my Government, with the object of terminating a war in which the British employ women and children against us."

A luncheon followed. Mr. Krüger subsequently visited the headquarters of the South African refugees.

A DUTCH-BRITISH CLASH?

THE HAGUE, Dec. 19.—Baron van Goltstein van Oldenaller, Minister of the Netherlands in London, has notified the British Government that, as the Netherlands was not a party to the frontier dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela, the Government of the Netherlands cannot consider itself bound by the Paris Arbitration award demarcating the Anglo-Dutch frontier.

Premier's Son Welcomed Home.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Lord Edward Cecil, fourth son of the Marquis of Salisbury, returned to Hatfield House last evening from South Africa. He was received with picturesque rejoicings. His carriage was encircled with a ring of flame by torch-bearers. The family group, headed by Lord Salisbury, together with Lord and Lady Lansdowne, the Right Hon Arthur J. Balfour, George Wyndham, and Lord Selborne, stood upon the steps of the Elizabethan mansion to bid Lord Edward welcome. All were surrounded by tenantry of the estate bearing torches.

"FAUST" IN PHILADELPHIA.

Grand Opera Company Leaves New York for That City To-day.

The Maurice Grau Opera Company will early this morning take its departure for Philadelphia, where the opera season in that city will be opened to-night at the Academy of Music, with a performance of "Faust," with Signor Cremonini in the title rôle, Mme. Melba as Marguerite, Signor Campanari as Valentine, and M. Edouard de Reszke as Mephistopheles. A special train has been chartered on the Pennsylvania Railroad to convey the entire organization, which will number more than two hundred people.

The late arrival of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse last night disappointed many friends of Jean de Reszke, who were prepared to go down the bay and welcome the tenor. The ship will come up to her wharf early this morning, and immediately upon landing M. de Reszke will be driven to the Gilsey House. His first appearance has not been definitely decided upon.

Street, Peter Marié for Mrs. John W. Mackay, and Capt. Warren C. Beach and Mrs. Beach, the last in honor of Miss Elisa Strong and her fiancé, William V. B. Kip; a luncheon, to be given by Miss Pansy Roosevelt; a euchre party, to be given this afternoon by Mrs. Charles Berryman, and in the evening the first of Les Cendrillons, or the Cinderella dances, at Sherry's. The Rubinstein Club, composed of seventy-five women, will give this evening, under the direction of William R. Chapman, its first concert of the season in the Astoria ballroom, when a programme of part songs will be rendered.

***

Ex-Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry and Mrs. Gerry will give a ball at their residence on the evening of Jan. 24. Cards for this ball have already been issued. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's dance, on Jan. 2, will take place at Sherry's. It will be a dinner dance, and the guests will number about 100.

***

Most of those well-known people who have remained out of town until now will keep their country houses open until after the new year. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer are still at their house at Roslyn, L. I., but will come in after Christmas and occupy the Glover house, at Madison Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, which they have leased for the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Sydney J. Smith will close their house on Saturday at Westbury, L. I., and come to town. They will occupy the New York residence of Mr. Smith's sister, Lady Strafford, this Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarkson will remain all Winter at their country house, Midwood, at Tivoli-on-Hudson.

***

The annual Christmas ball, which it is the custom of each succeeding class at Columbia University to give at this time in aid of the university athletics, will take place in the large ball room at Sherry's on Friday evening. The decorations will be, as usual, palms, ferns, and college flags and trophies. The entertainment is one of interest to the younger members of New York society, and especially to those who have brothers, or relatives, students at Columbia. The ball is, therefore, always sure of a large clientele and a good financial return. The patronesses this year are a long list of women prominent in New York fashionable society, who have real, or supposed, affiliations with the university.

***

The wedding of Charles Edward McElroy and Miss Harriet Langdon Parker, daughter of Amasa J. Parker, will take place at All Saints' Cathedral, Albany, on Saturday, Jan. 5. There will be a breakfast to follow the ceremony at the residence of the bride's father, 143 Washington Avenue, Albany. A number of New Yorkers will go to Albany to attend this wedding.

***

Senator George Peabody Wetmore and Mrs. Wetmore (Miss Edith Keteltas) are to give, at their residence in Washington, on Saturday, a large reception, which is to celebrate the thirty-first anniversary of their marriage.

***

The first of the series of concerts by the Morgan String Quartet, organized by Mrs. Jacob W. Miller and Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Roosevelt. Emil Paur was the soloist. A quintet from Schumann and Mozart's quintet in B flat were the features of the programme. These concerts begin promptly at 4:45 P. M. Among the subscribers, most of whom were present, are Mesdames Prescott Hall Butler, Emlen Roosevelt, Mrs. J. W. Miller, Lindley Hoffman Chapin, C. F. McKim, William Street, Stanley Mortimer, James W. Markoe, Goodhue, Charles Fairchild, Stanford White, Henry Marquand, and the Misses Sarah E. Thompson, Eleanor Thomas, Schuyler, and Terry, and Francis E. Ward, D. W. Taylor, and Charles W. Gould.

***

The first meeting of the Amusement Club, organized by the Misses Gillet of 13 East Twenty-fourth Street, was had last evening. There was a cotillion, led by George W. Hodges, dancing alone. The favors were chiefly toys, whips, drums, bells, and metal fish. The cotillion began about 10 o'clock, and supper was served after it was over. The club numbers some forty members, and its membership includes Misses Johnston Drake, Edith Mills, Angelica S. Church, Mabel Stebbins, Leonie Lentilhon, Rita Burgess, Amy Mills, and Messrs. Wilson Drake, Conrad Wurtz, Mr. Coles of Virginia, Paul Adenaw, William Austin, William Church, W. A. Evans, and Bache Bleecker. The next entertainment, on Jan. 3, will be a theatre party at the Lyceum.

***

Mrs. Alfred Ely gave the second of two coming-out receptions for her daughter, Miss Helena Rutherfurd Ely, yesterday afternoon at her residence, 175 Second Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Ely are to give at Sherry's on Friday evening a dance in honor of Miss Ely, at which most of the season's débutantes will be present. It is to be a large affair, and the guests will include representatives from all the old New York families, as Miss Ely, through her mother, is related to the Livingston, Beekman, Rutherfurd, Alexander, and other prominent New York families, and through her father to the old New England families of Edwards and Brewster.

***

Sailing yesterday for Liverpool, among others, on the Majestic, were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Abel, Capt. G. S. Cartwright, John M. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred S. Laflin, Archdeacon Lofthouse, Capt. Montague and Mrs. Montague, the Hon. Horace Plunkett, Mrs. Horace Porter, and Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson. The Majestic's passenger list was a small one, due to the fact that her passengers will spend Christmas at sea.

***

A family intending to sail some time during the next four or five weeks for Europe, and who are not good ocean travelers, and therefore anxious to make a speedy voyage, were decidedly disturbed yesterday to find that after the sailing of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, on Jan. 3, there will be no swift ocean liner for nearly a month sailing from this port. The New York and St. Louis of the American Line will be taken off after the sailing of the New York on Jan. 2. All the swift boats on the Hamburg Line between this port and Southampton have been withdrawn, the Cunard service during January will be performed by the old Etruria, Servia, and Umbria, and the White Star Line will depend upon the Cymric and Germanic, until the sailing on Jan. 23 of the Majestic. The withdrawal of all the swift boats in midwinter disorganizes the mail service between the Continent and the United States, and the matter is being discussed in the clubs and counting rooms.

***

The day after the opera's opening is devoted to the discussion of the event at teatables and receptions. It was generally admitted yesterday that the house on Tuesday evening was not as brilliant as a spectacle as on the opening night of last year or that of 1898. This fact was attributed to the comparative absence of any great display of jewels. Mrs. Astor and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Goelet; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and one or two others were exceptionally handsome gems, but there were fewer diamonds and more pearls worn in the boxes. The latter gem does not light a house to the same extent as diamonds, and the prevailing fashion is to wear pearls.

A glance at the house when the boxes finally were filled on Tuesday evening shows to what an extent New York society is divided into cliques and clans. These stick to one another, and the visiting was among the individual boxes of the particulars sets. The second tier boxes have fewer fashionable holders and occupants than last year, and it is very evident that the opera aristocracy has chosen for its field the parterre row. There were fewer notable absentees on Tuesday evening than on the first night of last year, although it seemed odd not to see such prominent women as Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, Mrs. Townsend Burden, Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg, Mrs. George B. De Forest, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mrs. Pembroke Jones, and Mrs. George Gould present. Some of these, and notably Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mrs. De Forest, and Mrs. Joseph Stickney were present last evening.

A public hearing will be held to-morrow evening in the City Hall in relation to the leasing of Easton's Beach. There is considerable interest in the matter, and a large gathering of citizens will be in attendance to see that the future rental of the beach will be made a paying investment instead of a loss to the city.

VANDERBILT-FRENCH WEDDING.

Active Preparations for the Event Begun at Newport.

NEWPORT, Dec. 19.—Active preparations have begun for the Vanderbilt-French wedding next month, and a large number of workmen from New York are engaged at The Breakers at Ochre Point, which will be thrown open for the first time since the death of Cornelius Vanderbilt. Mrs. Vanderbilt expects to entertain a large number of friends besides members of the family. Oatlands, Harbor View, the Summer home of Mrs. S. O. French, which early in the season was transformed into a beautiful Winter residence, a number of decorators from New York are at work.

The early plans for a rather small wedding have been considerably modified, and it is now believed that the affair will be one of the most elaborate ever held in this city. The number of invitations will reach 1,500 or 2,000.

WEDDINGS OF A DAY.

Peters—Whitin.

The wedding of Thomas Entwistle Peters of Gloucestershire, England, and Miss Gladys Whitin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Whitin, (Miss Lucy A. Morgan,) was celebrated at Grace Church yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington officiated. The bride, who entered the church on her father's arm, wore a gown of cream satin, the skirt severely plain, with a long train, the bodice of satin with lace trimmings. Lace also formed the under sleeves, the upper sleeves being of satin bands; her veil was of rich lace, arranged over the face in a manner sugesting a Spanish mantilla. She wore a necklace of diamonds and a diamond brooch, and carried a bouquet of white orchids.

The maid of honor, Miss Caroline Nichols, of Worcester, Mass., and the bridesmaids, who were the Misses Cecil Boardman, Charlotte Stillman, and Juliette Hubbell of New York; Angelica Thompson of Troy, Louise Weightman of Philadelphia, and Susan Franklin of Baltimore, were gowned alike in pale blue silk crepe over silk, the bodices and skirts tucked and trimmed with insertions and frills of lace of the same shade, and all wore black tulle hats with large bows on the top and front of the brims and white roses under the brim. They carried shower bouquets of white roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Peters's best man was Harry M. Ward, and the ushers were Templeton Johnson, Dwight Taylor, Stowe Phelps, C. Morton Whitman, Edwin Sands, and W. Forbes Morgan, Jr.; a cousin of the bride. The church, which was well filled with guests, was decorated with palms, and there were roses in the chancel. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the house of the bride's parents in West Fifty-sixth Street. The young couple received in the drawing room in a bower formed of garlands of white roses and green leaves. The mantel of this room was draped with violet orchids and delicate pinks, and the decorations of the dining room were entirely yellow. Mr. and Mrs. Peters will sail for India shortly, where they will spend the Winter, and later will go to England, where they will reside.

Brickner—Cordova.

Edwin Solis Brickner and Miss Myra Lucile de Cordova, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eustace de Cordova, were married at Sherry's last evening. The Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her father. She wore a white satin gown trimmed with lace and a tulle veil. Miss Ethel de Cordova, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and the Misses Vera de Cordova and Ziorah Solomon of Charleston, S. C., were the bridesmaids. Their frocks were of white silk and lace, and they carried roses. Dr. Walter Brickner was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Louis Wiley and Cyrile de Cordova, a brother of the bride. The ceremony was followed by a reception, and later by a dinner.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Mr. Melcher was a descendant of an old Huguenot family and was born at Portsmouth, N. H., in May, 1823. Graduating at Exeter, he became a clerk in the dry goods firm of Stanfield, Wentworth & Co. of Boston. He was rapidly promoted, and when the house established a branch in New York he was placed in charge of it.

In this city he made the acquaintance of the Paran Stevens family and married Ellen M. Stevens, the daughter of Paran Stevens by his first wife, who survives him. At the time of the marriage Mr. Stevens was interested in many business ventures and one of these was the management of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, which was then run under the name of Darling, Griswold & Co. When Mr. Stevens died, Mr. Melcher was his executor and until seventeen years ago represented his interest in the hotel property.

MYSTERY AROUND THE SHOPS

Sails Being Prepared and Other Details Being Pushed with Quiet Persistence for the New Yacht.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, Dec. 19.—Yesterday afternoon a glimpse of the new wooden mold just finished for the lead keel of the new Herreschoff boat was obtained as the doors were ajar for a couple of minutes. It was not intended that any extended view would be afforded to the public of this wooden structure, in fact, the object is to keep such things in the darkest corner of the shop until such time as it is completely buried in yellow loam, a sure preventive of any one ascertaining the exact outline as well as keeping the sides of the mold rigid, so as to preserve the original shape as much as possible. From the view obtained there is no question now as to the big flask being entirely completed. It was later banked with clay not only on the sides, but also on the ends.

It was only a part of the wooden structure that was observed, owing to obstructions in the way of blocks of wood and tiers of boat forms being scattered about promiscuously, but enough of the form was presentable to show that the mold had a shape similar to that of the Columbia's, with fine lines, the planking reaching from top to bottom instead of fore and aft, as the planks of a boat are set. One of the party witnessing the scene suggested that the structure resembled a small-sized yacht, which on the whole is true, as the ends rake at angles of something like 45 degrees. A number of workmen were busy banking the dirt in place, but aside from that there was little being done in the south shop. Everybody worked in silence, and, although the time of the melting of the lead is now very near, not a word was heard about the particular day on which the lead casting is to be made. It is doubtful if any one outside of the designer is aware of the time the job is to be begun.

In all other sections of the Bristol boat shops business is at high pressure, preparing sails, molds, and patterns necessary for the important job on hand.

There is a small quantity of lead in the boat shops left over from the keels of the forty-six-footers and seventy-footers, but not enough to go ahead with the casting. The lead ordered from the West has not yet made its appearance, yet it is said that the boat builders are perfectly aware of its location.

Yesterday forenoon a brick pier 9 feet in height was finished off in the south shop in a close position to the bed of the mold. This column of brick, 4 feet in width, will be the resting place for the kettle in which the lead is to be melted, with an opening on the floor for a furnace by which the heat will be obtained. There are to be two melting kettles—the brick one, located on the north side of the tracks, and a portable one hung on an iron frame swinging on the opposite side of the marine rails.

Quantities of hemp rigging in large coils and of proportions large enough for the lower rigging of a deep-water ship are being shipped to the Bristol builders at intervals. Whatever purpose it is intended for, it is known that the best results have been obtained in standing rigging of steel wire.

VARDON SAILS FOR HOME.

The Foreign Golfer Likes This Country and May Return Permanently.

Harry Vardon sailed for England yesterday on the steamship Majestic. A number of professionals gathered at the pier to bid the champion adieu, for since coming to this country Vardon has captured the open championship of the United States. The former champion of Great Britain has played seventy-three regular matches while in this country, most of them being against the best ball of two opponents. He was defeated in eleven matches, nine of them being against the best ball, while in only two was he defeated single-handed, Bernard Nicholls being his vanquisher on each occasion, once in Florida and again, last September at the Brae-Burn Club, near Boston. Nicholls recently left for a visit to England, and a match may be arranged between the two on the other side. Judging from Vardon's remarks, he expects to return to America in the near future, and possibly will become a permanent resident of the country.

"I like the country, the golfers, and their links," said Vardon just before sailing. "I have traveled all over the East, through the South, and as far west as Denver, and I can safely say that I have been surprised at the widespread popularity of the game. Atlantic City I consider one of the best courses in the country, and it would make an admirable site for the next amateur championship. Newport and Apawamis come close to Atlantic City in excellence. The best amateurs here have a good master of the game, and I am frank to say that they are not yet up to the class of the leading amateurs in England and Scotland."

C. S. Cox, who has acted as Vardon's manager during the year, said that no definite plans have been made regarding Vardon's return. If Vardon does come back, it will probably be in the Spring.

Shooting at Inter-State Park.

The first shoot in the second series of the Inter-State Park Handicap was won yesterday afternoon by T. W. Morfey, who killed 24 of his 25 birds at 30 yards. J. S. Fanning and S. M. Van Allen tied for second place with 23 each. Two sweepstakes matches were also shot.

The shoot-off between Van Allen, Daniels, Fanning, and Welch in the first series will be decided as soon as the four men can be gotten together, probably next Wednesday. The scores of yesterday's matches follow:

Gymnastics at New York University.

The New York University gymnastic team gave its annual exhibition in the gymnasium at University Heights last night. As in the past, the exhibition opened the gymnastic season for the year. The most prominent work of the evening was that of F. J. Belcher, '01, who two years ago won second place in the all-round intercollegiate championship. He appeared on the horizontal and parallel bars and side horse events.

During the afternoon the members of the athletic teams held a joint meeting with the members of the Executive Committee and elected the following managers for 1900-1901:

Gymnastic—Harry C. Magnus, '01.
Track—Tristram Metcalfe, '01.
Baseball—William A. Young, '01.
Football—Charles L. Thorne, '02.

The Nonpareil Rowing Club has elected the following officers for the coming year: President—J. W. Alexander; Vice President—E. Nicola; Treasurer—James F. Fay; Financial Secretary—W. F. La Forge; Recording Secretary—A. Kroll; Captain—Frederick Gaisel; Lieutenants—M. Norton, C. C. Hoffmann; Trustee for three years—Frank Dornbecker.

No More Fights for Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Mayor Harrison today revoked all permits for prizefights issued prior to the passage of the anti-fight ordinance by the City Council Monday night.

REGIMENT TROPHY SHOOT.

Company Teams Start Contest for the Abeel Prize.

Competition for the Abeel Trophy was begun last night at the Seventh Regiment Armory, teams from Companies A, C, E, H, and K shooting. Company K, with a total score of 626, led by a comfortable margin among the fourteen teams competing last night, but thirteen teams from Companies B, D, F, G, and I have yet to shoot. The contest will close to-night.

The Abeel Trophy matches are open to teams of ten men, all of whom must be from the same company. The number of teams from each company, however, is unlimited. It therefore frequently happens, as in the case of Company C last night, that fully half the men from some of the hard shooting companies are engaged in the matches. The contests are accordingly among the most popular of the events of the Seventh Regiment Rifle Club. All competitions for the trophy must take place between Nov. 1 and April 1, and the winning team is allowed to retain the trophy thirty days subject to a challenge any time after twenty days of undisturbed possession. Since the Abeel Trophy was founded it has been won by Company B 26 times, by Company H, 7 times, Company F, 7 times; Company G, 5 times, Company A, 4 times; Company C, 4 times; Company I, 2 times, and by Companies K and D once each. The individual scores made last night by the Company K team, which leads so far in the present match, follow, seven shots being fired standing and seven prone by each man:

SPORT ON THE SPEEDWAY.

The Monk and Alves Led in Several Fast Brushes.

The mild, pleasant weather of yesterday attracted a large number of light-harness horsemen to the Harlem River Speedway.

The roan pacer Moth Miller, 2:07, driven by Dr. David Randall, made things very lively for a while and won about every brush that he was started in. Moth Miller's first encounter was with the pacer Annie Wilkes, 2:18, driven by James Murphy of Chicago. Annie Wilkes, who gets away like a flash, took the lead on the start and set a furious pace to the quarter, closely followed by Moth Miller. From the quarter post into the head of the stretch Moth Miller gradually closed up the gap, and on being touched with the whip made a spurt and won by almost a length. In a second heat Moth Miller took the lead and was never headed.

The Monk, (2:07¼) recently purchased by Fred Gerken, did some fast work and beat Coxey, driven by Capt. McDonald, several lengths.

One of the prettiest brushes of the afternoon was between Alves, (2:09¼,) with Nathan Straus handling the reins, and Azota, (2:04½,) driven by David Lamar. Both animals got away on fairly even terms and came down the stretch under the whip nose and nose. It was either horse's race up to a point within fifty feet of the line, when Alves made a spurt that landed him a winner.

David Lamar's crack pacing team, Nettie B., 2:10¼, and Edward D., 2:17½, driven by Trainer J. C. Curry, covered a very fast quarter and beat several single horses. The gray gelding Glenmere Boy, 2:14¼, driven by J. Doniey, found himself in fast company in being turned with Honor Bright, driven by John F. Cockerill, and was not equal to the occasion, although he gave his opponent a hard race. Alice Barnes, 2:11¾, led the way home in a very lively brush with the pacer Sandy Boy, 2:12, driven by J. J. Timmons.

Brighton Beach Stakes to Close.

The stake programme for the Brighton Beach Racing Association for the Summer meeting of 1901, announced by Secretary Ralph Bayard, includes eleven events which will close on Wednesday, Jan. 2. Three other races for three-year-olds and upward are the Islip Handicap, one mile and a furlong; the Jamaica, selling, one mile and a sixteenth, and the Test Handicap, six furlongs. Two stakes for three-year-olds are the Seagate, one mile and a furlong, and the Glen Cove, Handicap, six furlongs. For two-year-olds three events are opened, in the Montauk, five and a half furlongs; the Atlantic, selling, five furlongs, and the Winged Foot Handicap, five and a half furlongs. The stakes for jumpers include two entirely new races, the Leopardstown Steeplechase, over the short course, and the Anteuil, one mile and three-quarters, over hurdles. The other races for jumpers are the Punchtown Steeplechase and Chantilly Hurdle Stakes. One other important Brighton Beach stake is the Second Produce, for two-year-olds, to be run in 1903, with a guaranteed value of $15,000. This will close for mares whose produce shall be eligible to run on Dec. 31.

Jockey's Injuries Result Fatally.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 19.—Jockey Talley, who was injured by a fall at the Newport track in 1898 and who has suffered periodically from the injury, died at 5 o'clock this evening in the Charity Hospital. A peculiarly pathetic incident in connection with the jockey's fate was that only a few minutes before the end came, a telegram was received here authorizing his engagement for the coming season as jockey for one of the most prominent of Eastern stables.

Princeton's Captain Wants Penn Game

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 19.—The reports that Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania will meet on the diamond next Spring caused considerable comment among the undergraduates to-day.

The break with Harvard has given brighter color to the prospects of resuming athletic relations with the Quaker City men, but it seems that there is no sure indication that games with Penn will be scheduled for next Spring.

A member of the faculty Committee on Outdoor Sports, when interviewed on the question to-day, declined to discuss the matter, and simply said: "We have nothing to say about it." When pilled with further questions he admitted that Princeton would surely not meet Harvard next Spring, but would not state whether any games would be substituted for that series.

It has been learned, however, that Capt. Breen will present a petition to the faculty committee and urge that the baseball team be allowed to play Penn.

Harvard's Baseball Schedule.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 19.—The Harvard University baseball schedule for next Spring has been practically completed. Twenty-four games will be played, one more than last year. The schedule is as follows:

April 10—Wesleyan at Cambridge; April 13—Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.; April 17—Trinity at Durham, N. C.; April 20—Annapolis at Annapolis, Md; April 26—Dartmouth at Cambridge; April 27—Dartmouth at Cambridge; April 30—Colby at Cambridge; May 2—Andover at Andover; May 4—Williams at Cambridge; May 8—Amherst at Cambridge; May 11—Bowdoin at Cambridge; May 14—Lafayette at Cambridge; May 18—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; May 22—Exeter at Exeter; May 25—Michigan at Cambridge; May 29—Brown at Cambridge; May 30—Cornell at Cambridge; June 5—University of Chicago at Cambridge; June 8—Pennsylvania at Cambridge; June 12—Brown at Providence; June 15—Carlisle Indians at Cambridge; June 20—Yale at Cambridge; June 25—Yale at New Haven; June 29—Yale at New York, (in case of a tie.)

Yacht Pawnee Changes Hands.

Theodore C. Zerega of the New York Yacht Club has sold his yawl Pawnee through the agency of Frank Bowne Jones to John E. Wayland of this city. The Pawnee is a centreboard boat, designed by H. J. Gielow and built by George W. Byles at City Island four years ago. Her principal dimensions are: Length over all, 53 feet; on the water line, 37.38 feet; extreme beam, 13.7 feet; depth of hold, 7 feet; draught, 6 feet. The yacht will continue enrolled in the fleet of the New York Yacht Club, of which her new owner is a member.

Instructing Yachting Lecture.

Nearly forty members of the Yachtsmen's Club gathered at the clubrooms, in West Forty-third Street, last night to hear Capt. Howard Patterson give an interesting "Talk on Navigation." Capt. Patterson spoke for nearly two hours, devoting particular care to the explanation of the proper use of nautical instruments. The talk was clearly illustrated by stereopticon views. On next Wednesday evening Prof. C. C. Thomas will talk on "Marine Engineering."

Buffalo Wants Yacht Races.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—A proposition to sail the Canadian races off Buffalo at the time of the Pan-American Exposition has been received from F. B. Hower, Commodore of the Buffalo Yacht Club.

The Buffalo yachtsmen are already making preparations on a large scale for a regatta the last week of July.

Sarony Won Skating Race.

A. Y Sarony of the New York Athletic Club won the one-mile handicap amateur skating race at the Clermont Skating Rink, Brooklyn, last night, covering the distance from scratch in 3:14 4-5 and defeating his nearest competitor, P. Kearney, by a good five yards. Sarony and Kearney, the two scratch men, soon gained the lead in a field of eight starters, and then paced each other alternately until the last three laps, when Kearney's wind began to fail. From this point, Sarony, who was also somewhat winded, managed to keep a slight lead over his rival, and on the last lap W. Claflin, a ninety-yard man, also passed Kearney. The skaters finished in this order: A. Y. Sarony, scratch; W. Claflin, 90 yards; P. Kearney, scratch; F. Cowper, 120 yards; C. Weston, 120 yards; A. E. Davis, 120 yards; W. Mullgin, 120 yards.

Prizes for Columbia's Drop Kickers.

Dr. Reginald H. Sayre, President of the American Revolver Association, has written a letter to the football managers of Columbia University, offering prizes for contests in drop kicking in football. Dr. Sayre says in part: "It seems to me clear that in one thing the Columbia team is very deficient, and that is in drop kicking, though in this respect it is by no means unique. Believing that this style of kicking has been too much neglected, I will give prizes to be competed for in the Spring for length and accuracy in dropping goals from the field."

Dr. Sayre is an alumnus of Columbia and has always been active in the athletic affairs of the university.

Hamilton's Football Captain.

Meeting of Automobilists.

A meeting of the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club of America was held yesterday in the office of President Albert R. Shattuck, 11 Broadway. The most important matters for discussion were the proposed moving to permanent club quarters and the effort about to be made for a test case regarding the presence of gasoline automobiles on ferryboats. George F. Chamberlin, Chairman of the Law Committee, read a report on the latter subject, but as a few details remain to be perfected in the action about to be taken by the club, the plan was not made public.

The committee on new club quarters reported progress, but as the new property has not been definitely secured, no statement was given out as to where the new quarters would be.

Among those present were President Shattuck, Albert C. Bostwick, J. M. Ceballos, Sidney Dillon Ripley, Winslow E. Buzby, George F. Chamberlin, and Daniel H. Morris. The following new members were elected: J. D. F. Lanier, C. G. Wridgeway, W. V. Brokaw, John A. Hill, R. L. Coleman, and William C. Demorest.

No immediate runs are scheduled, the chief interest in that respect now being centred in the proposed test case of all varieties of automobiles, which will be held early in the Spring.

Wrestling at Grand Central Palace.

Three or four hundred enthusiasts of the art of wrestling assembled in the Grand Central Palace, Lexington Avenue and Forty-third Street, last night, to witness the opening bouts of what is called the International wrestling tournament. There were several good bouts, one of the most interesting to the crowd being that between John Piening and Peter Jackson. They were in the heavyweight class, and Piening is the man who stood up for over twenty minutes against Paul Pons. Piening and Jackson had a short and lively bout, but in two minutes Jackson was pinned to the mat and Piening's victory was loudly cheered.

Another heavyweight match was between August Faust and Henri Silva, the latter dubbed by his compatriots the Italian champion. He succumbed to Faust, however, but it took the latter 12 minutes and 45 seconds to get a clean fall. George Bothner, of the Pastime Athletic Club, and former champion at 135 pounds, threw Charles Endres of the Karl Abs Athletic Club in 5 minutes. Harry Pokinski and "Jack" Harvey, known among his wrestling associates as the "Brooklyn Strong Boy," had the most stubborn contest of the evening. After wrestling for 20 minutes they were allowed an intermission, and then after 10 minutes of hard work Pokinski won the bout. Harry Parker of Brockton, Mass., threw William Fracalose in 6 minutes and 40 seconds. The bouts will be continued and the tournament concluded to-morrow night. Charlie White was the referee.

"NO SMOKING" MAKES TROUBLE FOR TRAINMEN

Brooklyn Elevated Line Guards Weary Enforcing Orders.

Women Protested, Patrons Disgusted, Conductors Explained, but the Rule Was Generally Respected.

Pawing the air wildly and gibbering to themselves, many Brooklyn elevated railroad conductors, on the verge of raving lunacy, sought their homes last night, a day that had tried their souls very happily over. It was all due to the new order abolishing smoking cars on the elevated in Brooklyn. It was issued on Tuesday afternoon and went into effect yesterday morning. As a result of this short notice few of the smoking patrons of the road knew of the change yesterday morning.

One fat, jovial-looking chap climbed to the station at Tompkins Avenue, on the Lexington Avenue line, puffing away at a long black cigar and leisurely sauntered out on the station platform. He left a cloud of smoke in his wake and the alert station man scented it.

"Hey, you!" he yelled, darting after the fat man. "Yer'll have ter chuck away that butt. It's ag'in' ther rules."

The fat man turned in surprise.

"What's that?" he asked, sharply.

"I say yer'll have ter trow away that seegar. Smokin' ain't allowed no more."

"Who says so?" indignantly.

"I say so."

"Are you the President of the road?" sarcastically.

"No, I ain't ther President, but them's his orders."

"Ah, go day down; you've got the willies, man," and the fat man, still smoking, boarded an incoming train.

"Which is the smoker?" he asked of the guard.

The trainman looked at him with a strange, shifting light in his eyes.

"There ain't none," he said wearily, closing the gates with a bang.

"There ain't none what?"

"There ain't no smuker, I said." This snappishly.

"How's that?" becoming puzzled, but hanging on to the cigar.

"Say, I don't know how it is, but it is, and yer'll have ter toss away that snipe or yer can't ride."

The fat man, mystified and disgusted, threw away the "snipe" and passed into the car.

Just beyond Franklin Avenue a fussy little woman in a gray gown flounced out on the car platform and said to the conductor:

"Is this the smoking car?"

"No, Ma'am," he said; "yer can't smoke on this—"

"Sir!" drawing herself up haughtily.

"I mean, Ma'am, that there ain't no more smokin' cars."

"Well, then, there's a man in that car, where there are ladies, smoking a horrid pipe."

"Which ladies, Ma'am?" peering through the car door.

"I didn't say there were ladies smoking," indignantly; "I said there was a man in there smoking a pipe and that there were ladies in the car."

"Oh, which is him?" not enthusiastically.

"That man there with the red face and wearing a cap."

The conductor waited until another station had been passed and then walked slowly into the car and up to the red-faced man with the pipe.

"Say," the red-faced man was saying to a companion, "some er these wimmen hanker after terbacker like sailors. Those of 'em what don't git no chance ter smoke it comes later these smokin' cars so's they kin enjoy ther smell of it. Look at ther bunch o' 'em here now, sniffin' ther scent er this ol' pipe as if they wuz glad they wuz livin'. I tell yer, there's er good deal in—"

"Say, yer'll have ter put out that pipe; yer can't smoke in this car," and the conductor, with the little woman in gray watching him closely from the other end of the car, whipped squarely in front of the red-faced man.

"Put out me pipe; what fer? Ain't this ther smokin' car?"

"Took off? What for?"

"Ther wimmen don't like to ride in 'em."

"They don't have ter, do they?" with a puzzled look. "Can't they ride in the other cars?"

"Say, I ain't no bureau of information. All I knows is that the smokin' cars has been took off an' yer can't smuke on this train."

The red-faced man slowly knocked the tobacco out of his pipe and then sat with a look of disgust on his face, glowering at the women around him all the way down to the bridge.

Half a dozen men boarded a train on the Kings County line at Rockaway Avenue in the middle of the day, and all went into what before the change would have been the smoking car. Each of them lighted a cigar and all began smoking. The conductor after a while walked in and spoke to one of the men.

"Excuse me," he said, "but there's no smokin' on this train."

The man looked hard at the conductor for a moment and then said coldly:

"There's no smoking on this train, eh? Well, what do you call that?" with a sweep of his hand toward the half dozen men puffing merrily away at their cigars.

"You don't need any opera glasses to see it, do you? But what of it, anyway?"

"I mean to say," said the conductor, wearily, "that the smoking cars have been done away with, and there's to be no more smoking."

The smoker refused, however, to stop smoking, and the conductor, at the next station, telegraphed ahead for a policeman. At Franklin Avenue a fat policeman boarded the train. He didn't appear to be seeking trouble, and he entered the car reluctantly.

"Officer," said the conductor, "I want you to arrest that man. He insists upon smoking, and it's not allowed."

"I'm not smoking," interjected the passenger serenely. "My cigar went out two stations back." The policeman thought it over for a moment.

"He ain't smokin'," he decided finally. "If I don't see him smokin' I can't take him in."

Then he left the car, and the offending passenger laughed triumphantly.

WISSEL'S CHECK RETURNED.

Nassau General Committee Resents Criticism by the Queens Leader of County Democrats.

The Nassau County General Committee of the Democratic Party, resenting the claim that it did not do its full duty toward a candidate, has returned to him the original check he sent prior to election.

Charles C. Wissel, whom Richard Croker appointed leader of the Democracy in Queens Borough, was the nominee for State Senator in the Queens-Nassau District last Fall. During the campaign he sent a check for $500 to the Nassau County Committee.

At the convention at which Mr. Wissel was nominated ex-Senator James Norton was the choice of the Nassau delegates for the nomination. They stuck to him to the last and refused to put themselves on record as making the nomination of Wissel unanimous.

On election day, while one faction of the Queens Democrats cut the nominees for county officers so that the Republicans were elected, although Mr. Bryan carried the borough by about 2,200, this faction and all others in Queens stood by Mr. Wissel. His vote was the heaviest in the borough, and he not only carried Queens, but ran about 600 ahead of Mr. Bryan.

With 2,500 majority for Mr. Wissel in Queens, his friends celebrated his election only to learn early on the next morning that Nassau had not held down the majority of his Republican opponent and that apparently the election was close, as Wissel had run away behind his ticket in the Nassau end of the district. The official count showed the outing he received would not keep him at home this Winter so far as a seat in the Legislature was concerned.

Subsequent to election Mr. Wissel is credited with saying some uncomplimentary things relative to the Democrats of Nassau. Eventually these sayings reached the Nassau Committeemen and a couple of days ago John A. Miller of Baldwin journeyed to Democratic Headquarters in Queens and had a talk with Leader Wissel. Mr. Miller is Treasurer of the County Committee. What was said between the two neither will tell in detail, but when Mr. Miller started for home he left behind him Mr. Wissel's check, which had never been mailed.

SICK WOMAN DISPOSSESSED.

Now Insane and Her Husband Charges Marshal's Men with Brutal Conduct.

The arraignment yesterday of City Marshal Charles W. Pratt in the Ewen Street Police Court, Brooklyn, on a summons obtained by Nicholas Dietz, a butcher of 123 Debevoise Street, brought to light alleged brutal conduct on the part of two agents for the Marshal. As a result Dietz's wife, it is alleged, is in a critical condition. The couple have four children.

Dietz, failing to obtain steady employment, became in arrears for his rent, and on Friday last City Marshal Pratt went to the house to dispossess the family. He took with him his two agents. When they reached the apartments Mrs. Dietz was ill in bed, and it is alleged that she was removed from the bed, which was carried to the street. The remainder of the household goods, including a stove which warmed the room where the woman lay, followed the bed.

Mrs. Dietz was found lying helpless on the floor, surrounded by her weeping children, by some neighbors, who supplied her with blankets and a mattress. A call was sent to the Eastern District Hospital for an ambulance. When it arrived with a physician the woman had given birth to a child. The husband was out looking for work, and when he returned he found that his wife had become insane. On Tuesday the woman made two attempts to end her life.

Magistrate Lemon dismissed the summons and advised Dietz to bring a civil action against the landlord and lodge a complaint with the Mayor against the Marshal.

MARKET MOVEMENT.

Prices moved irregularly on the stock market yesterday in the early trading, with strength appearing in some issues, and, because of profit-taking and short selling, heaviness in others. The general tone, however, was strong, and substantial interests continued in evidence as purchasers on a large scale. To offset these purchases were heavy liquidating sales by operators who had bought earlier in the week and who reasoned that many stocks would be pressing for sale because holders would not care to carry them over the holidays. There was some selling, also, on the theory that the Bank of England will to-day advance its minimum discount rate, and that this may lead to sales from that source. London operators had little fear on that score, as yesterday fully 75,000 shares were bought for London account, while but 25,000 were sold. When this pressure ceased, as it did about a half hour before the close, the whole market became aggressively strong under the leadership of Northern Pacific and the close was actually buoyant.

The news of the day was generally favorable. The usual dividend was declared on New York Central, while a number of very favorable earnings statements were put out by important railway systems, including Louisville and Nashville, Norfolk and Western, Southern Railway, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Chicago and Eastern Illinois.

There was some selling of the Nickel Plate issues because of the statement put out by one of the news bulletins during the day that action on the dividends had been postponed until next month. The truth is, next month is the regular time for dividend action. It can be stated on semi-official authority that a dividend on the second preferred stock is assured, and that the plan of retiring the first preferred stock has not been abandoned.

Kingston and Pembroke stock, which has been little traded in for many months, has lately shown activity and strength, due to the official statement that a dividend of 2 per cent. is to be paid on the preferred stock—the first ever paid. The system runs through the mining districts around Renfrew, Sharbot Lake, and Pembroke, in Ontario, one of the richest mineral districts in Canada, which now is being rapidly developed.

Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, Chairman of the Board of Wheeling and Lake Erie, has, it is stated, been approached by Standard Oil interests in relation to some pending developments in the Ohio coal fields, in which territory the Wheeling system has large interests. An official statement on the matter will be made shortly. Standard Oil brokers were again yesterday buyers of the Wheeling securities.

The Atchison issues were sold in the early trading on the report that the train hands had struck in sympathy with the telegraph operators. Officials of the road here had no knowledge of any such strike.

There was no news to explain the sharp advance in Northern Pacific near the close. The talk continues that the stock is going much higher, but why no one will say.

The extreme decline in New York Air Brake, the stock breaking over 12 points on dealings in 600 shares, was a disappointment following dividend action on the stock, when the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. was declared. In many quarters an increase had been looked for.

The operations of a newly formed pool in Wisconsin Central were responsible for the upword movements in the common and preferred stocks of that company. The advance was purely manipulative.

Morgan brokers continue to be steady purchasers of the Erie stocks, and it was this that held the securities so strong yesterday. It is declared that announcement of the purchase of other coal tracts by Morgan interests will shortly be made.

The sharp advance in Sugar was accompanied by indefinite reports of better trade conditions.

The Illinois Central Railroad Company having advertised that the transfer books will be closed to-day at 3 P. M. for a meeting of stockholders and to vote upon a proposition to issue new stock, to be offered to stockholders of record to-day, the Committee on Securities of the New York Stock Exchange rules that a due bill representing all the rights to subscribe which may be authorized at the meeting must accompany all certificates of the stock of said company delivered for cash to-day and all deliveries thereafter. The stock will not be quoted ex-rights on the Exchange to-day.

A well-known operator who has been conspicuous on the bull side since election, was yesterday credited with being a heavy seller of stocks all around the room. As a matter of fact, it is said by interests close to the operator in question that he was a large buyer of stocks on the decline, which was forced, not so much by local as by Western selling.

London bought about 50,000 shares on balance yesterday, taking large blocks of Southern Pacific and Southern Railway, but selling most of the other stocks on the international list.

It was announced in Wall Street yesterday that a committee of prominent holders of Fort Worth and Denver City first mortgage bonds has been formed for protection of the bondholders and to rearrange the nature of the lien before the next coupon becomes due in June, 1901. When the road was reorganized without foreclosure the bonds, which are 6 per cents., were stamped at 4 per cent. until and including the December, 1900, coupon. They now again bear 6 per cent.

DELAWARE AND HUDSON.

Discussing the report that an extra or increased dividend may be paid on Delaware and Hudson, an officer of the company said yes

Gardiner had been put into the Presidency by Mr. Haggin to represent his interests, which are in full control. Mr. Haggin has recently put a large amount of capital into the company, which it is stated, is figuring on some large European contracts.

A TRUST TO BUY A RIVAL.

Smelting Company Will Acquire the Plant of M. Guggenheim's Sons.

The officers of the American Smelting and Refining Company announced yesterday that the plans to acquire the properties of M. Guggenheim's Sons, the only large competitor with which the trust has had to contend, were practically completed.

Vice President Sewell of the Smelting Company said that at a meeting of the Directors held on Tuesday it was decided to acquire the Guggenheim plants if the stockholders of the Smelting Company endorse the plan. A resolution was passed appointing a committee to examine into the business of the Guggenheims and report to the Board. This examination is now in progress.

A resolution was also passed in which the board asks authority to increase the capital stock of the company from $55,000,000 to $100,000,000. Of this amount of increase $30,000,000 of the stock is to be used to acquire the Guggenheim properties and $15,000,000 is to be turned into cash to be used for the purposes of the company.

As soon as the examination of the books of the Guggenheims is completed and the committee has made its report, the President will call a meeting of the stockholders, to be held in January, to obtain the necessary authorization for the increase of the stock.

New Offering of Bonds.

Speyer & Co. will offer to-morrow morning, reserving the right to close subscriptions without notice at any time thereafter, $5,069,000 general (now first) mortgage 3½ per cent. gold bonds of the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company. The subscription price is 109½, payable as follows: 9½ per cent. on allotment and 100 per cent. on March 1, 1901. The principal of these bonds is payable on March 1, 1951, and the principal and interest are guaranteed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The issue is made to take up the same amount of 6 per cent. bonds maturing on March 1, 1901, and they form part of a total issue limited to $20,000,000, which is secured by a first mortgage on the entire properties of the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company. This property was leased in 1871 to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for 999 years, the latter company guaranteeing 10 per cent. annual dividends on the $20,000,000 capital stock of the former company. It is stated that the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company earned, in the year ended Dec. 31, 1899, a large surplus over the guaranteed dividend. Definitive bonds, bearing interest from March 1 next will be delivered on that date. Payment in full may be made at purchaser's option on allotment under discount at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, against delivery of interim certificates to be issued by the Fidelity Insurance, Trust and Safe Deposit Company of Philadelphia. Default of payment of the subscription installment due March 1 next will render the previous payment on allotment liable to forfeiture.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Money was firm today, and discounts had a hardening tendency. There was much nervousness regarding future developments. The present rates are subject to the bank rate to-morrow, and will be relieved at midday, when it is decided.

Business on the Stock Exchange was cheerful, chiefly owing to the renewed advance in Americans. Consols were dull, due to fears of a higher bank rate. Home rails were firm. Great Easterns and Southeasterns were in good demand. Great Northerns were the feature, on the reduction in Derbyshire coal prices. The feature of Americans was the continued boom in Eries. Missouris advanced considerably. The close was irregular. Grand Trunks were firm, and Kaffirs were depressed.

Owing to no gold being withdrawn for France to-day financial circles believe the bank rate will be unchanged.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Few chnnges occurred yesterday in the market for outside securities. The stocks most prominent the previous day continued the most active issues and supplied the bulk of the day's business. Generally the list was fairly strong and some substantial advances were recorded, but here and there appeared a good deal of weakness, principally, however, among the very inactive issues.

AMERICAN BRIDGE was active and strong. Both issues sold up rather sharply, and, although the quotations reacted later, both closed substantially higher than on the previous day. Recently the trading in these stocks broadened out considerably and for the past few days the business in them has been well distributed. The common stock sold up to 40 and ended the day at 45¾ bid, a net gain of half a point. A similar net advance appeared in the preferred, which sold up to 95¾ and closed at 95¼ bid.

ELECTRIC BOAT was again active and strong. It was again said that important negotiations were practically completed which would very materially benefit the company. In some quarters it was said that important foreign contracts had been practically secured. The common stock yesterday sold up to 82 and back to 31 on transactions in 3,000 shares or more. It closed at 31 and showed a net gain of 1½ points. The preferred sold up to 52 and was traded in to the extent of about 1,000 shares.

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was fairly active, and after selling up to 13, closed at 12¾ bid, a fractional gain.

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER was the most active of the copper shares. On transactions in about 3,000 shares it sold up to 21, and closed there, with a net gain of three-eighths of a point.

UNION COPPER sold between 5¾ and 5½. About 2,000 shares were traded in.

AMERICAN BICYCLE bonds sold to the extent of $12,000 at 75 and 75¼. This was considerably above the nominal bid of the previous day. At the close 74½ was bid.

TELEPHONE, TELEGRAPH AND CABLE was traded in quite actively at 3, and was in some demand at that figure at the close.

GENERAL CARRIAGE was sold down to 4½, and was offered there at the end of the day.

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS 4s remained firm. They sold to the extent of about $40,000 at 86½ and 86.

NATIONAL CITY BANK, on light transactions, moved to a new high price. At the close it was 515 bid, an advance of 15 points.

BAY STATE GAS was active at 1, and a slight fraction above that figure. It closed at 1 bid.

It is stated that the stock of the Palmetto Company, which is traded in in Philadelphia, will soon be put on the curb here.

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

NEW ELEVATOR AT WEEHAWKEN

New York Central Will Construct Building with 2,000,000 Bushels' Capacity.

There was a meeting yesterday of the Directors of the New York Central Railroad. Senator Chauncey M. Depew presided, and most of the Directors were present. They declared the usual quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent., payable on Jan. 15, and they also authorized some extensive improvements.

Chief among these is the construction of a new grain elevator at the Weehawken terminal. This elevator will hold a little more than 2,000,000 bushels, and its cost probably will exceed $1,500,000. It will be built of steel, with wooden bins, and it will be arranged so that grain can be loaded from it directly into the ships. In order to enable sea-going vessels to dock there, extensive dredging operations will be carried on.

President Callaway said that there were so many urgent improvements required that he hardly knew where to get all the necessary millions. One of these necessary improvements was the purchase of 100 locomotives of the first class, and the Board of Directors authorized the President to order these at a cost of about $12,000 each, or a total expenditure of over $1,200,000. The board also authorized the building of a new boat for the Western Transit Company, to ply on the great lakes.

Chairman Depew introduced a memorial resolution, which was adopted, on the death of Second Vice President Horace J. Hayden.

Reading Road Orders Sea Craft.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—Contracts were awarded to-day by the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company to the Neafie & Levy Ship and Engine Building Company for the construction of one steel seagoing tug, to be named the Carlisle. She will be 170 feet in length, 29 feet beam, and 15 feet draught, loaded, and is intended for service in the Philadelphia and Reading Transportation Line, operating between Port Richmond and New England ports. A contract was also awarded to Robert Palmer, Noank, Conn., for ten seagoing steel barges for use in the same trade. The two contracts aggregate over $300,000.

Brief Railroad Items.

O. D. Ashley, President of the Wabash Railway Company, was elected a Director of the Continental Trust Company yesterday.

The Lackawanna Railroad has sent sixteen of its men to Chicago to take a month's schooling in an air brake institution. While the men pay their own tuition fees the Lackawanna has informed them that they will receive their full salaries during this time.

It is reported that at a meeting of the Northern Freight Committee in Minneapolis the representative of each line announced that he had received strict orders to maintain rates. The rates in the territory represented have been much demoralized for some time.

The agreement of Trunk line passenger agents not to make holiday rates is reported as being more strictly maintained than ever before.

It was positively denied yesterday that the first preferred stocks of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis would be exchanged for bonds guaranteed by the New York Central, and a report that there would be some change in the securities of the Big Four System was also denied.

MYSTERY OF BROKEN WINDOW.

Shattered Glass in Daily News Editorial Room Not Explained.

A pane of glass in a window on the fifth floor of the building at 22 Park Row was broken at noon yesterday. This floor is occupied by the editorial staff of The Daily News, and rumors were current that an attempt had been made to assassinate some member of the staff. The official report of the occurrence made by Policeman D. J. Ballson to the Oak Street Station reads as follows:

"At 12 noon I received a report that two shots had been fired through a window on the fifth floor of 22 Park Row. Employed in the room report they heard crashing glass. Found one pane of glass shattered. No bullets or anything else that could have shattered it."

The police say that if shots were fired they must have come from some room in the Post Office Building, but that they are inclined to believe that possibly some person in the newspaper office broke the window.

EUGENE G. CRUGER'S WILL.

Contested by Former Wife, Who Asks an Allowance.

Mrs. Blanche E. S. Tams has asked for an allowance from the estate of her three children so that she may contest the will of her former husband, Eugene G. Cruger, who died in France about two years ago. He left all his property to Olga Salomea Heltz, with whom he was living at the time, according to Mrs. Tams's statement.

Justice Leventritt has appointed William B. Putney referee in the matter. The children's property consists of a trust fund created by their father at the time he was divorced from their mother.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

UNDERTAKER HAS DIPHTHERIA.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., Dec. 19.—Another case of diphtheria is reported here. The victim is Robert S. Sharp, an undertaker, who had charge of the burial of Frank Mickowitch and Mrs. James Helm, his sister, both of whom died of diphtheria last week.

The Mickowitch house is under strict quarantine. All of the remaining members of the family, father, mother, and three children, are down with the disease. Mr. James Helm, who came here from Bayport on Monday to attend his wife's funeral, and Mrs. Patrick Kernan, who got into the Mickowitch residence last night without the knowledge of the guards, are compelled to remain in the house.

DIPHTHERIA IN WEEHAWKEN.

Black diphtheria has been discovered in Weehawken, and grave fears of a general epidemic of the disease are entertained. One child has already died of it, and two others are ill in the same family. The affliction exists in the family of John Brandt at 8 Pleasant Avenue, in the heart of the tenement district.

The child died yesterday afternoon, and the Health Board met and adopted precautions to prevent a spread of the infection. A quarantine flag been placed on the infected dwelling, and the schools in the district have been ordered closed until all danger is over.

The little breathing spell now being taken by Jack Frost gives us a chance to smooth out and strengthen any weak places in our much tumbled and tossed overcoat stock.

Results:

A medium gray frieze wool-lined overcoat is humbled in price to $12.50.

Two others have had $5 clipped off, making prices $15 and $20.

A NEW CENTURY IDEA STAGGERS MR. HIGBEE

Precious Metal Statue Originator Seeks Sovereigns' Greetings.

THE RED CROSS'S SANCTION

Hoped for Big Endowment Fund—Fatal Error in Dealing with Diplomatists —State Department Aid.

This is the story of a man and an idea. Or, perhaps, it would be better to say of an idea and a man; for the idea grew until it became so great that it overwhelmed and prostrated the man.

The man in the case is Frank D. Higbee. For many years evolving ideas has been Mr. Higbee's business. He has lived by his ideas, and now his friends fear that he may die by the one which was his latest and most striking conception. Higbee evolved the idea of having a silver statue made of Ada Rehan for exhibition at the Chicago Exposition. The silver statue of Miss Rehan was a success. Higbee made money out of it.

When the time for the Paris Exposition came Higbee improved on the Rehan silver statue idea. He suggested a gold statue of Maude Adams. The statue was cast. It was one of the attractions of the American exhibit at Paris, and is now drawing crowds to a Brooklyn dry goods store. But the silver figure of Miss Rehan and the gold figure of Miss Adams were as nothing compared to the latest idea of Mr. Higbee, which spread until it had taken root in all the civilized countries of the world.

Like most ideas of magnitude, the Higbee idea grew from a small beginning. It was conceived when numerous persons were being driven to the verge of insanity by discussion of the problem as to whether the nineteenth century ended Dec. 31, 1899, or Dec. 31, 1900. It occurred to him that the dawn of a new century would be a good time to launch a great idea. Reflecting upon America's greatness, he conceived that it would be a grand thing if greetings to the United States from all the civilized nations of the earth could be secured to mark the opening of the twentieth century, with the promise it holds forth for this country.

Having the idea, the next question with Higbee was how to utilize it. He first thought that it would be feasible for the Pan-American Exposition to get the greetings. But trade jealousies and other reasons led him to the conclusion that the idea could not come to the desired fruition under the exposition's auspices.

RED CROSS SUGGESTED.

A friend to whom Higbee elaborated his idea then made a suggestion which filled him with new hope. "The Red Cross," said Higbee's friend, "is the association to use that idea. The Red Cross is an international organization, and it is probably the one international society about which there are no jealousies. Go to Washington, see Clara Barton and other members of the Red Cross, and I have no doubt they will take up your scheme."

To Washington Higbee went. In June, just before the adjournment of Congress, a bill had been passed by the House and Senate and signed by the President giving the Red Cross Society a National charter, and making it an emergency branch of the Government. Heretofore the Red Cross Society has been without National authority. In times of National disaster and during the late war with Spain the society issued appeals for funds. The response was always generous. But the money so given was invariably for a specific purpose. The Red Cross had no fund of its own, and its running expenses for years, it is said, have come principally from the purse of Clara Barton.

In her annual address to the society, Miss Barton had said that, as the society was now a chartered organization and under the supervision of the United States Government, it ought to have an endowment fund. In putting forth the suggestion of a permanent fund Miss Barton did not encourage efforts to secure an appropriation from Congress.

"Our work," she said, "is not the Nation's work for the people's needs, but the people's work for the Nation's needs."

It was at this stage of Red Cross history that Higbee arrived in Washington with his idea. Imbued with a strong desire to raise money to start a permanent endowment fund, the members of the Board of Control of the Red Cross were inclined to listen to any one with a suggestion which might assist them in achieving this object. They listened to Higbee. And Higbee convinced them that it would be a good thing for the Red Cross to join him in his idea.

He made them a proposition to secure greetings to the United States on the dawn of the new century from as many of the rulers of civilized nations as possible, and dispose of these greetings for cash to meetings which would be arranged for the night of Dec. 31 in every city of importance in the United States. He agreed to arrange himself for big meetings in New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and Baltimore, to which an admission fee was to be charged. Meetings in the smaller cities were to be left to persons resident in them, to whom a set of the greetings would be sold for $25. Higbee agreed to bear the entire expense of carrying out the scheme upon the basis of a percentage of the total receipts. His proposition was accepted and a contract was signed.

Higbee then started with enthusiasm to bring his idea to perfection. Through the influence of Clara Barton and other members of the Red Cross, he obtained from the State Department a letter to Ambassador Choate, in which Mr. Choate was told to do what he could, informally, to help Mr. Higbee secure a greeting from Queen Victoria.

THE APPEAL TO THE QUEEN.

When Higbee reached London Ambassador Choate was out of town on a vacation. Higbee presented his letter to Henry White, the Chargé d'Affaires, who went with him to Balmoral Castle. They saw the Queen's secretary and laid the plan before him. The secretary said he would see the Queen. He saw the Queen and brought back word to Mr. White that he thought it could be arranged. The Americans went back to London feeling that the object of their visit was certain of accomplishment.

While he was waiting for the greeting of the Queen Higbee had copies made of the letter to Secretary Choate given him by the State Department, and these copies he sent to the American Ambassadors and Ministers of all the countries with which the United States has diplomatic relations. He then went to Switzerland, where the international President of the Red Cross Society resides. From this gentleman he received assurances that everything he could do to help in obtaining the desired greetings from sovereigns would be done. Returning to London Higbee expected to find the Queen's greeting awaiting him. But he was sorely disappointed. Instead he received information from Mr. White that the Queen could not give the greeting until she had first consulted Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador at Washington. This information opened up a vista of trouble to Higbee. He realized that he had made a mistake in not calling on the British Ambassador before he importuned the Queen. After consultation with Mr. White he concluded that he must hasten back to Washington to conciliate the diplomatists. So he took the first ship from Southampton.

A meeting of the Red Cross Board was called, and Higbee disclosed the embarrassment which had arisen. It was decided by the board to send a committee to visit all the diplomatists, confess the mistake, and appeal to their generosity to overlook it.

Mr. Warner, a prominent real estate agent of Washington, and a member of the Red Cross Board of Control, and Miss Ellen Spencer Mussey, the Third Vice President and counsel of the society, were intrusted with this mission. They had two especially delightful experiences. One was at the British Ambassador's and the other was at the Spanish Minister's. Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, gave them an audience of nearly an hour and assured them that he would waive every diplomatic technicality and endeavor to get the Red Cross a greeting from the Queen if it was possible to do so. At the Spanish Minister's, where they were uncertain of their reception, they were most agreeably surprised.

GRACIOUS RESPONSE FOR SPAIN.

"Spain owes a debt of gratitude to the Red Cross," said the Duke de Arcos, "which she can never repay. Had it not been for the noble work of the Red Cross Society, hundreds of Spain's brave sons would have been left to die a miserable death in Cuba. They were saved and comforted by the Red Cross workers, and whatever Spain can do to show its appreciation of the Red Cross Society will be done."

When the committee had reported, it was decided that, as the time for obtaining the greetings was growing short, an appeal must be made to the State Department for more active co-operation. Commissioner H. R. McFarland of the District of Columbia, a member of the Red Cross Board of Control, was delegated to call upon Secretary Hay and request him to send instructions to American representatives abroad to get the greetings if possible.

When Mr. McFarland called upon Secretary Hay he learned that the Secretary had already apprised Ambassador Tower at St. Petersburg of the interest of the State Department in the matter. Ambassador Tower on receiving the copy of Secretary Hay's letter introducing Mr. Higbee to Ambassador Choate did not feel disposed to take any action without more specific instructions, and so he had cabled for them. He was told to go ahead and get the greeting from the Czar, if he could.

Mr Hay was then asked if he would not send a letter to all the Ambassadors and Ministers of the United States similar to that sent to Ambassador Tower. Mr. Hay said he would. A draft of a letter was prepared, but when it went to the State Department Third Assistant Secretary Adee, not understanding that it had the sanction of Secretary Hay, pigeon-holed it. Precedents were against such a request, in Mr. Adee's opinion.

Col. William H. Michael of the State Department, who is a member of the Red Cross Board of Control, rescued the draft from its obscurity and from it a formal letter was finally drawn up and sent out by Second Assistant Secretary David J. Hill. Mr. Higbee received a letter from Assistant Secretary Hill notifying him of the action taken by the State Department.

Higbee and the Red Cros Board of Control next asked President McKinley to lend his powerful influence to any extent he felt justified in helping them to get the desired greetings. The President, it is said, authorized Secretary Hay to cable to American representatives abroad that they might say that the granting of the request for a greeting to the United States would afford the President pleasure.

A large number of greetings from the sovereigns of the nations of the world have come to Mr. Higbee and Miss Barton. Fifteen were received in one mail a few days ago. But it is acknowledged that that of Queen Victoria, and several others of those most desired have not yet been received.

MR. HIGBEE'S TROUBLES.

Getting the greetings was only one part of Higbee's contract. He had to organize the meetings in the large cities mentioned in the contract, and he had to enlist the aid of others to organize the meetings in all the other cities in the United States having over 5,000 inhabitants. He opened offices in the St. James Building, in this city, and sent out an enormous amount of correspondence. He found a general interest in the scheme, but he also found that there was a general misapprehension of the manner in which it was to be carried out. Most of his correspondents thought a Red Cross Committee would be sent to their town to organize the meeting.

When Higbee started he thought he had enough money, but the expense was much greater than he had anticipated, and he soon found himself financially swamped. He appealed to William H. Burr, manager of Luzell, Dailey & Co., to help him out. Mr. Burr gave him $1,000. This was soon exhausted, and Higbee asked for more. Before making a further loan Mr. Burr concluded that he would go to Washington and look into the scheme. He made the trip, found everything regular, became enthusiastic over Red Cross work, and gave Higbee an additional sum.

But worries crowded upon Higbee. His correspondence was filled with them, and in his efforts to get up a big meeting for Madison Square Garden he ran up against opposition which was as the last straw. He learned that the city was to have a watch-night meeting on the steps of the City Hall, with Damrosch's orchestra as the attraction. Higbee's chief attraction at Madison Square Garden is to be Sousa's Band.

As a result of all this trouble Higbee broke down. He is suffering from heart trouble, and is said to be really a very sick man, although he visited his office for an hour yesterday.

The Red Cross Board of Control asked Mr. Burr to step into the breach caused by Higbee's collapse, and he has done so. Mr. Burr went with Stephen Barton and J. Ellen Foster to the City Hall yesterday to protest to the City Council against the watch-night meeting being arranged for by the city. Mr. Burr explained the idea of the Madison Square Garden meeting, and expressed the idea that the City Government ought not to interfere with such a laudable purpose.

The Council appointed a Sub-Committee on Plan and Scope to consider the proposed City Hall celebration. This committee will confer with Mr. Higbee and will report to the main committee at the next meeting, which will be held Monday.

A number of prominent and wealthy citizens of New York, who have been asked to subscribe large amounts for the Madison Square Garden meeting, have been holding back because they did not know how much of their subscriptions would go to the Red Cross. Mr. Higbee could not be seen, but when Mr. Burr was seen and a request for a copy of the Higbee contract made he said:

"I have no interest in the Higbee contract in any way. In the interest of the Red Cross I have advanced money which it is very doubtful if I will get back. But I have no complaint on that score. I should say, however, that the Higbee contract was entirely a matter between Mr. Higbee and the Red Cross Society. It ought to be sufficient for the public to know that Mr. Higbee is the authorized agent of the Red Cross.

"If there is any prominent citizen who would like to help the Red Cross," Mr. Burr continued, "but who is afraid that if he contributes to the Madison Square Garden meeting Mr. Higbee will get too large a 'rake off,' let him send his contribution direct to William J. Flather, cashier of the Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C., who is Treasurer of the society."

Mr. Burr was asked how many greetings from sovereigns had been received. He said he could not give the number without violating confidence.

"But I will say this," he said. "We have received some beautiful letters. We have not yet got a greeting from the Queen or the Pope, but we hope to have one from each of them."

POPULAR VOTE FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS

Some misplaced lines in the table, printed yesterday, of the popular vote for Electors of President and Vice President of the United States made the result appear confusing. The figures correctly stated, which are in all cases official, are given below for the candidates of the National Union Reform Party, (Seth H. Ellis of Ohio for President and Samuel T. Nicholson of Pennsylvania for Vice President,) and in two States for the candidates of the United Christian Party, (J. F. R. Leonard of Iowa for President and John G. Woolley of Illinois for Vice President,) these votes being as follows:

National Union Reform: Arkansas, 341; Illinois, 672; Indiana, 254; Maryland, 147, and Ohio, 4,284; total, 5,698. United Christian: Illinois, 352; Iowa, 166; total, 518.

In some States, as in Louisiana and South Carolina, there were the nominations of but two parties, Republican and Democratic, upon the ballot; in other States there were three and four, and in some eight.

In the table the vote for the Elector receiving the highest number of ballots is given in all States where obtainable.

In this State the vote for the first Elector on each ballot, as officially canvassed and declared, is given.

The Electors chosen in the several States will meet in their respective State Capitols on the second Monday in January next, to cast their ballots for President and Vice President of the United States.

On the second Wednesday of February, the Senate and the House of Representatives will meet in joint convention in the hall of the House in the Capitol at Washington, the President of the Senate presiding, and then will canvass the votes of the Electors of all the States and declare the results:

OBSTRUCTION OF NEW RAPID TRANSIT PLANS

City Assembly "Holds Up" Shortened Route Application.

AN ALDERMAN'S GRAVE CHARGE

Declares the Hostile Element Sought "Boodle" from the Contractor—Fort George Interested.

The proposed change of route of the Rapid Transit Railroad from Fort George to Two Hundred and Fifteenth Street has been "held up" by the Municipal Assembly through the action of a controlling element. The time limit legally allowed upon proposed modifications of route under the Rapid Transit Act expired yesterday with the application forwarded a month ago by the Rapid Transit Board effectually pigeonholed and with no apparent chance of resurrection, it is declared, until application is made by the board for a mandamus compelling the Municipal Assembly to act.

This action will probably be taken in a short time unless the obstructing element of the houses relents, as the contractor is ready to go ahead and anxious to have the legal complications closed and out of the way of local interference.

In speaking of the attitude of the Assembly, a member of the Board of Aldermen had this to say yesterday:

"The proposed Fort George change is nothing more or less than a 'hold-up' on the part of certain members of this body for money. The Municipal Assembly as a body considers that the Rapid Transit Board is an insult to them, and that the Legislature in taking control of the tunnel road out of their hands ignored them in a manner not to be tolerated with equanimity. Losing the chance to spend the sum authorized for building the tunnel has made them ugly—that is, the 'hold-up' members—and they are seeking every chance to get even.

"They found that they could not make any headway with the board in getting money for passing the application for the new route, and Mr. McDonald was given to understand that the distribution of a portion of his supposed future profits in making the change would be not only acceptable, but expected in the regular order of business. I see nothing ahead but a resort to the courts in this Fort George matter."

In support of this Alderman's statement, it was pointed out yesterday that since notice of public hearings was given not a single voice has been raised against the shortened route from Fort George north. On the contrary, the property owners along the new route are in favor of the change. The Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners favors it unanimously, and Mr. McDonald stands with them, notwithstanding the fact that he will really lose $3,000 by the operation.

The route along this section of the road is viaduct construction, and while the ultimate completion of the road will not be delayed if construction beyond Fort George is not commenced for a few months, the sub-contractors are ready to proceed.

It has been figured erroneously that Mr. McDonald would make $75,000 by the change of route. The idea was that he will receive $35,000,000 for building the tunnel, even should certain modifications be made reducing the cost. As a matter of fact, if modifications in the line serve to reduce the cost, the contractor will get less money and his profit will correspondingly decrease.

None of the Commissioners nor Mr. McDonald last night would discuss the holding up of the application for the shortened Fort George route.

Standard Oil Cases to be Dropped.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 20.—Attorney General John M. Sheets to-day appeared before the Supreme Court of Ohio and asked that all the cases brought against the constituent companies of the Standard Oil Company in Ohio be dismissed. He stated that he had examined the evidence taken under the action of ex-Attorney General Monnett, and it was his opinion that the evidence was not sufficient to justify the continuance of the prosecution. The court asked the Attorney General to prepare such entries as he desired made, and it is generally conceded that the cases will be dropped by the court.

KUMASSI, Dec. 20.—The loyal chiefs have captured the Ashanti Queen Mother and the rebel King Kokofu, and they hope soon to capture the remaining rebel chiefs.

THE CUFIC IS ABANDONED

Hawsers of Both Tugs Towing Her Part in Irish Sea.

CREW LANDED AT HOLYHEAD

Cufic's Anchors Dropped in Seventeen Fathoms—Terrific Gale Causes Fears for Irish Packets.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The hawsers of both tugs which were towing the White Star liner Cufic parted on account of the heavy gale raging in the Irish Sea, and the steamer drifted on the Skerries, where the anchors were dropped in seventeen fathoms of water.

All the crew were landed at Holyhead by a steam lifeboat and a tug.

A severe gale, with heavy rains, is sweeping along the Irish coast. It showed a tendency to increase in violence last evening, and no vessels were able to make any headway.

Another vessel has stranded near Holyhead.

Depressions of great size and depth are spreading over Great Britain from the westward. Storms are reported on all coasts, and numbers of minor wrecks have occurred.

The White Star liner Teutonic, which sailed at noon yesterday from Queenstown, for New York, experienced the full force of the storm. The Teutonic arrived at Queenstown somewhat late, and after embarking her passengers and 1,592 sacks of mail, she had some difficulty in clearing port.

There is great uneasiness at Queenstown in regard to the cross-Channel steamers which left there Wednesday evening, so violent is the storm. All arrivals at British ports report having experienced fearful weather.

Great damage has been done to property in Dublin.

The White Star liner Cufic was towed into Queenstown on Dec. 16 by the steamer Kansas City. The Cufic left Queenstown Dec. 19, in tow, for Liverpool. She carries no passengers.

Previous to being taken in tow by the Kansas City the Cufic had experienced very heavy weather, during which she lost her propeller.

The Skerries is a small island, on which is a lighthouse, in the Irish Sea, off the northwest coast of the island of Anglesey, which is rounded by steamers on their way to and from Liverpool by way of St. George's Channel.

The Cufic is a single-screw steamer of 3,122 tons, and was built at Belfast in 1888 at the yards of Harland & Wolff. Her dimensions are as follows: Length, 480 feet 7 inches; breadth, 45 feet 2 inches; depth, 30 feet.

MONEY PANIC IN MEXICO.

Government May Let Out Silver Reserve of $40,000,000.

EL PASO, Texas, Dec. 20.—While the press of Mexico is non-committal, it is believed a serious money panic is now on there. George W. Hilseinger, manager for the El Paso and Juarez Branch of the Banco Miner, and the strongest bank in Mexico City and Chihuahua, stated to-day that the panic was becoming serious and that the Government was about to let out the silver reserve, amounting to nearly $40,000,000, to relieve the situation.

"There is plenty of money in Mexico," said Mr. Hilseinger, "but no silver dollars, which are the only circulating money. The exportation of silver to the Orient has very nearly cleared the country of silver, and a panic has resulted. The banks have asked the Government to release the silver, which they propose to replace with American and British money."

An average of $50,000 per day has gone through El Paso to the Orient every day for five months, and the demand is growing. It is believed that the Government will again put export duty on money, which was taken off a few years ago.

JOY IN THE CUDAHY HOME

Kidnapped Boy Is Restored to His Parents.

Father Pays $25,000 In Gold As Ransom—Boy Tells Story of Captivity—Gives No Clue to Abductors.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 20.—There is rejoicing in the home of Edward A. Cudahy, the wealthy packing-house owner and capitalist of this city. Edward Cudahy, Jr., who was kidnapped Tuesday evening, after being held thirty-six hours for a ransom of $25,000 in gold, which the young man's father unhesitatingly paid, has been returned to his family, and to-night the boy and his parents are receiving congratulations from relatives and friends throughout the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy feel that they have cause for relief, not only over the return of their son, but also because one or possibly more of their daughters were not included in the conspiracy which has caused them so much anxiety and grief, as a statement of the conspirators, overheard by the lad while he was in their power, indicates that they had been attempting for a month to secure possession of one of his sisters.

Before the real truth of the kidnapping, the return of the boy and the experiences of the latter had been given to the public to-day, the police were inclined to doubt the story that the boy had been spirited away. This skepticism, however, melted away when young Cudahy related the story of being overpowered, placed in a closed carriage, blindfolded and bound, and carried many miles from the city to a place, the location of which he cannot identify, and his father made known the details of a long ride into the country to deposit a bag containing $25,000 in gold in a place indicated in a letter written Wednesday to Mr. Cudahy by the outlaws, naming this condition as a surety for the return of the boy.

THE SECOND LETTER.

At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning a horseman rode past the Cudahy mansion in Thirty-eighth Street and threw a letter into the lawn. A servant noted the action, and securing the letter, found it contained the information that Eddie Cudahy had been kidnapped, was safe, and was being held for a ransom.

Three hours later Mr. Cudahy received through the mails a second communication detailing the conditions under which the lad would be surrendered to his father. This letter was as follows:

"Omaha, Neb., Dec. 18, 1900.

"Mr. Cudahy: We have kidnapped your child, and demand $25,000 (twenty-five thousand dollars) for his safe return. If you give us the money the child will be returned as safe as when you last saw him, but if you refuse we will put acid in his eyes and blind him, then we will immediately kidnap another millionaire's child that we have spotted and demand $100,000, and we will get it, for he will see the condition of your child and realize the fact that we mean business and will not be monkeyed with or captured.

"Get the money all in bills, five, ten, and twenty dollar pieces; put it in a white wheat sack, get in your buggy alone on the night of Dec. 19, at 7 o'clock P. M., and drive south from your house to Centre Street; turn west on Centre and drive back to Ruser's Park, and follow the paved road toward Fremont. When you come to a lantern that is lighted by the side of the road, place the money by the lantern and immediately turn your horse around and return home.

"You will know our lantern, for it will have two ribbons, black and white, tied on the handle. You must place a red lantern on your buggy where it can be plainly seen, so we will know you a mile away.

ROSS CASE AS A WARNING.

"This letter and every part of it must be returned with the money, and any attempt at capture will be the saddest thing you ever done. If you remember, some twenty years ago Charley Ross was kidnapped in New York City and $20,000 ransom asked. Old man Ross was willing to give up the money, but Byrnes, the great detective, with others, persuaded the old man not to give up the money, assuring him that the thieves would be captured. Ross died of a broken heart, sorry that he allowed the detectives to dictate to him.

"This letter must not be seen by any one but you. If the police or some stranger knew its contents they might attempt to capture us, although against your wish, or some one might use a lantern and represent us, thus the wrong party securing the money, and this would be as fatal to you as if you refused to give up the money. So you see the danger if you let this letter be seen.

"Mr. Cudahy, you are up against it, and there is only one way out. Give up the coin. Money we want, and money we will get. If you don't give up, the next man will, for he will see that we mean business, and you can lead your boy around blind the rest of your days, and all you will have is the ——— copper sympathy. Do the right thing by us and we will do the same by you. If you refuse you will see the saddest sight you ever seen, Wednesday, Dec. 19. This night or never. Follow these instructions and no harm will befall you or yours."

MR. CUDAHY PAYS THE MONEY.

After reading this letter Mr. Cudahy called into consultation the Chief of Police and his friends and discussed plans looking to the capture of the gang when they should make an appearance at the point of rendezvous named in the letter. The great strain on the family, however, caused Mr. Cudahy to abandon all idea of capturing the men in whose power was the life of his son, and he decided to at once comply with all of the demands of the letter. In order to do this absolute secrecy was necessary, and a trusted messenger was dispatched to the bank to secure the gold.

Mr. Cudahy held himself in readiness and shortly after supper he entered a light road buggy, and with the money started out entirely alone for the place of meeting indicated by the kidnappers. To identify himself he had attached to the dashboard of his buggy a red lantern.

Mr. Cudahy drove to a point about five miles from the city, where he found near the road a white lantern suspended from a short stake driven in the ground. This signal he had been watching for, it being named as the place for leaving the money. The location of the lantern was near the river bank, but when Mr. Cudahy arrived nobody was in sight. He at once alighted, placed the bag of gold conveniently near the stake and without waiting for developments returned to the city without hearing a sound.

THE BOY'S STORY.

That the bandits were near the spot and at once secured the valuable package cannot be doubted, for about 1 o'clock this morning the boy ran up to the door of his father's home and rang the bell. Two policemen, who in the early evening had been placed near the house, had later been sent to the stables by Mr. Cudahy, who feared that should the men on returning with the boy see the officers they would drive away without leaving him. The boy came in so suddenly that the policemen knew nothing of it until a member of the family went to the stables and informed them that the young man had returned, and that their services would be dispensed with.

When young Cudahy arose this morning, after a good rest, he was questioned concerning the circumstances of his disappearance and, in response, said that he was in front of Gen. Cowin's house, just across the street from his own home, on his way back from the Rustin residence, Tuesday evening, when two men approached him. One of them stepped up to him and said: "We are Sheriffs from Sapry County and arrest you as Eddie McGee, who escaped from the reform school."

The lad replied that he was not Eddie McGee, but his captors said that he would have to be identified. They placed him in a buggy and drove to Thirty-sixth Street and thence south to Leavenworth Street. As they approached Leavenworth Street a motor car passed them. The lad recognized the conductor and said to his captors: "There is a man who knows me; he can identify me."

The captors thereupon immediately blindfolued him and whipped up the horse. The lad thinks they crossed Leavenworth Street and then drove in a southwesterly direction. Presently they came to a house, which, in the opinion of the lad, is somewhere in the southwestern part of South Omaha. Young Cudahy was taken from the buggy and placed in a room and chained to the floor. He remained there all night and the next day.

At night for some reason unknown to young Cudahy the men released him from his chains and said: "We are going to take you home."

Then they led him to a hack. He was driven rapidly through the darkness to Thirty-seventh and Leavenworth Streets, where he was allowed to leave the carriage. From there he walked home. The bandits made no explanation to him why they gave him his freedom.

HIS EXPERIENCES.

Speaking of his experiences while in the power of the kidnappers young Edward gave the following account of his surroundings and what occurred and of the men who guarded him:

"I could tell by the way the men's footsteps resounded throughout the house that it was vacant and stripped of furniture. I observed also that they struck no light. I would have been conscious of a sense of light had they made one, for the bandage could not have excluded all its rays. The men still moved about in absolute silence exchanging no word.

"One of them found an old rickety chair in some place and pushed me down upon it. Then he removed the cords from my wrists and substituted a pair of handcuffs with chains attached and made the latter fast to the rungs of the chair. A pair of leg irons were clapped upon my ankles and the chains of these were also locked about the legs of the chair.

"In this uncomfortable position I spent most of the twenty-four hours of my imprisonment, though at one time, for a period of about five hours, I should judge, the chains from my wrists were removed and I was permitted to lie down on the floor. One of my captors kindly provided an overcoat which served as a pillow. I tried to sleep, but my nerves were too badly shattered to permit of it. During all of this time I partook of nourishment but once, though the man who was with me often asked if I wanted anything. Once I said I did, and he went and got me a cup of coffee and some crackers.

ONE BANDIT TALKS.

"As soon as I was chained to the chair one of the men went away, but he kept returning at intervals of every few minutes, when he would tap lightly upon the door and would engage my guardian in a whispered conversation. I could not catch a word of what they said. After each one of these interviews the man on the outside would go away, and after a moment or so I could hear the tinkle of a telephone bell, which sounded a long way off. I believe they were in telephonic communication with some persons in Omaha all the time.

"The man who kept watch over me was drinking heavily all the time. At first he did not talk at all, but after we had been alone together for six or seven hours he began to get garrulous. He talked about all sort of things, and his talk rambled, though whether from drink or design I could not say. Finally he became bolder. Two or three times he touched upon the subject of my abduction, and I gathered from his remarks that there were six men in the gang of which he was a member. He said one time which startled me.

"'Do you know,' he asked, 'that we have been watching that house of yours out there for the last two months? Well, we have. What we really wanted was to get one of the little girls—your sisters, but we did not get a chance. Finally we became desperate and determined to take the bull by the horns and grab you. And I guess it's all right. You've acted first class, my boy. You'll be back with your folks in a few hours.'"

WHAT CHIEF OF POLICE SAYS.

"Most people will wonder why the police did not attempt to capture the kidnappers of young Cudahy when his father took out that $25,000 Wednesday evening," said Chief of Police Donahue to-night. "We could have done so, but it was Mr. Cudahy's wish that we do nothing that would interfere with the safety of the boy. Mrs. Cudahy was nearly broken down with nervous prostration, and Mr. Cudahy was little better.

"He said to us, 'I first want the boy,' so he took the matter in his own hands and went out alone with the money. I could see that we were in his service, and would do anything he wanted of us, but he was so afraid that they might do something to the boy that would injure him.

"It certainly does seem strange that a man, especially a business man like Cudahy, should go out and drop $25,000 by a lantern in the country, not knowing who should get it, all on account of an unsigned letter, but that is most assuredly what he did. In his frame of mind, I believe that if the letter demanded $50,000 he would have carried it out as quickly. I did not like to have him go out, for, if Mr. Cudahy went out there with $25,000, or any sum of money at all, the kidnappers might not have even taken the trouble to put up a lantern, but held him up on the road, and again, after leaving the money they might have written another letter demanding $25,000 more to be left somewhere north of Florence.

"Now, I can say that no effort will be lost to bring the abductors to justice. This is for the benefit of the public, and to prevent a repetition of this most dangerous crime. We are trying to-night to locate the house in which the boy was kept. I think from the story that it is between Ruser's Park and Sarpy Mills, west of South Omaha. We expect certain parties to call on us to-night, but do not wish anything further published at this time along this line.

"About a month ago R. W. Patrick came to me and said that two men had rented a house of his father near Happy Hollow, on the western edge of the city, paying $8 a month for it, and that his father's hired hand was suspicious of them. The two men never went to the house except early in the evening, when they would stay for an hour or so and go away. The hired man tried to talk to them, and they had always turned away. Then he found that they had put locks on all of the doors and had put papers over all of the windows; so one day he broke in and found nothing in the house at all, except one room had a Yale lock on the outside and that there was a smell of gasoline in the room.

"I at once notified the Sheriff, since it was outside of the city limits, and

CANAL TREATY AS IT STANDS.

The Senate changed the Hay-Pauncefote agreement by these amendments:

The first amendment inserts the words "which convention is hereby superseded" in Article II. of the treaty after the words "the Clayton-Bulwer convention."

The second amendment, known as the "Davis amendment," adds to clause five of Article II. the provision that the preceding sections shall not apply to measures by the United States for its own defense.

The third amendment strikes out Article III., which provided for an invitation to the other powers to adhere to the convention in the following terms:

The high contracting parties will, immediately upon the exchange of the ratifications of this convention, bring it to the notice of the other powers and invite them to adhere to it.

TEXT OF THE CONVENTION.

The United States of America and Her Majesty, the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India, being desirous to facilitate the construction of a ship canal to connect the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and to that end to remove any objection which may arise out of the convention of April 19, 1850, commonly called the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, to the construction of such canal under the auspices of the Government of the United States, without impairing the "general principle" of neutralization established in Article VIII. of that convention, have for that purpose appointed as their plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States, John Hay, Secretary of State of the United States, and Her Majesty, the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, Empress of India, the Right Hon. Lord Pauncefote, G. C. B., G. C. M. G., Her Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States; who, having communicated to each other their full powers, which were found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:

"Article I.—It is agreed that the canal may be constructed under the auspices of the Government of the United States, either directly at its own cost, or by gift or loan of money to individuals or corporations, or through subscription to or purchase of stock or shares; and that, subject to the provisions of the present convention, the said Government shall have and enjoy all the rights incident to such construction, as well as all the exclusive right of providing for the regulation and management of the canal.

"Art. II.—The high contracting parties desiring to preserve and maintain the 'general principle' of neutralization established in Article VIII. of the Clayton-Bulwer convention, which convention is hereby superseded, adopt, as the basis of such neutralization, the following rules, substantially as embodied in the convention between Great Britain and certain other powers, signed at Constantinople Oct. 29, 1888, for the free navigation of the Suez Canal; that is to say:

"1. The canal shall be free and open, in time of war as in time of peace, to vessels of commerce and of war, of all nations, on terms of entire equality, so that there shall be no discrimination against any nation or its citizens or subjects in respect of the conditions or charges of traffic or otherwise.

"2. The canal shall never be blockaded, nor shall any right of war be exercised nor any act of hostility be committed within it.

"3. Vessels of war of a belligerent shall not revictual nor take any stores in the canal except so far as may be strictly necessary, and the transit of such vessels through the canal shall be effected with the least possible delay, in accordance with the regulations in force, and with only such intermission as may result from the necessities of the service. Prizes shall be in all respects subject to the same rules as vessels of war of the belligerents.

"4. No belligerent shall embark or disembark troops, munitions of war, nor warlike materials in the canal, except in case of accidental hindrance of the transit, and in such case the transit shall be resumed with all possible dispatch.

"5. The provisions of this article will apply to waters adjacent to the canal, within three marine miles of either end. Vessels of war of a belligerent shall not remain in such waters longer than twenty-four hours at any one time except in case of distress, and in such case shall depart as soon as possible, but vessels of war of one belligerent shall not depart within twenty-four hours from the departure of a vessel of war of the other belligerent.

"It is agreed, however, that none of the immediately foregoing conditions and stipulations in sections numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 of this article shall apply to measures which the United States may find it necessary to take for securing by its own forces the defense of the United States and the maintenance of public order.

"6. The plant, establishments, buildings, and all works necessary to the construction, maintenance, and operation of the canal shall be deemed to be part thereof, for the purposes of this convention, and in time of war, as in time of peace, shall enjoy complete immunity from attack or injury by belligerents and from acts calculated to impair their usefulness as part of the canal.

"7. No fortifications shall be erected commanding the canal or the waters adjacent. The United States, however, shall be at liberty to maintain such military police along the canal as may be necessary to protect it against lawlessness and disorder.

"Article IV. The present convention shall be ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the consent of the Senate thereof, and by her Britannic Majesty; and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington or at London within six months from the date hereof, or earlier, if possible."

[The original treaty was signed at Washington, Feb. 5, 1900. An agreement extending the time for the ratification and completion of the treaty to March 4, 1901, was approved by the Senate Dec. 18.]

THE FUTURE OF THE TREATY.

British Government Will Be Notified of Changes, but the Document Will Not Be Sent to It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Inquiry at the State Department as to the future of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, just ratified with amendments by the Senate, develops the fact that, contrary to the common understanding, the document does not need to be returned at this stage to the British Government, even if the President is of a mind to go on with the negotiations.

Secretary Hay will await an indication of the President's wishes in the matter, and if the latter, as has been already indicated by official statements, concludes to give the British Government an opportunity to pass upon the amendments, then the State Department will forward to that Government, not the treaty itself, but the terms of the amendments. In diplomatic parlance, the British Government will be notified of the amendments.

According to the statement of the officials of the State Department, Great Britain must be allowed a reasonable time within which to accept or reject them. As to what would constitute a "reasonable" time no direct expression was to be had, but attention was directed to the fact that the United States Government had had the treaty under consideration for a year, and that the amendments made to-day were beyond dispute vital.

BRITISH PRESS COMMENT.

London Papers Say Great Britain Cannot Accept the Treaty.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Nearly all the morning papers have editorials on the action of the United States Senate in connection with the Hay-Pauncefote Canal treaty. They express regret, rather than surprise, at the supersession of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and unanimously declare that it will be impossible for Great Britain to accept the amended treaty.

"The Senate has struck a serious blow," says The Daily News, "at the fundamental principles of good faith among nations, at its own reputation, and at the very Constitution of the great Republic."

"We are thankful," says The Daily Chronicle, "that the Senate stopped short of amendments obviously designed to wreck the whole proceedings. We believe that a compromise is still possible, as the resources of diplomacy are not yet exhausted."

There is a strongly evident desire in all the comments to do everything reasonable, as The Daily Chronicle suggests, to meet the views of the Americans. Several papers, however, consider it out of the question that the British Government should for a moment consider or discuss the amended treaty. The Standard, argues on this basis, while recognizing in the fullest manner that President McKinley has labored earnestly to "combine American aspirations with a delicate regard for international obligations." It says:

"Time is on the side of a friendly and satisfactory settlement. No harm will be done if the whole transaction is left as it is until March, when, we may hope, the new Senate may meet the question in a fresh spirit."

The Daily Telegraph, which thinks it is a matter for compromise, says:

"Our existing treaty rights cannot be superseded in the summary manner some Senators seem to imagine; but nobody in England desires to thwart the legitimate wishes of the American people by a too rigorous insistence on our claims and privileges. The mere fact that a ratification of the amended treaty is keenly desired in America would naturally lead us to review our own position and to attempt to find some middle way of amicable arrangement."

The Times makes no comment.

THE PANAMA CANAL INQUIRY.

Answer to the Tillman Resolution About Ready—Attitude of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The Ministers from Nicaragua and Costa Rica were both in consultation with Secretary Hay to-day with reference to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, but neither of them was prepared to admit a knowledge of the intentions of his Government. The protocols drawn up between them and Secretary Hay providing for the acquisition by the United States Government of such rights in Nicaragua and Costa Rica as may be necessary for the construction of the canal are broad in scope, probably purposely made so by Secretary Hay in view of the contingencies of Senatorial action. Therefore it is probable they may be sufficient in themselves and without further amendment to constitute the bases for the preparation of the treaties which must precede any canal construction by the United States.

The State Department is about to submit a comprehensive answer to the inquiries initiated by Senator Tillman and Senator Morgan respecting the exact position of the Panama Canal Company and the nature of the tenders that have been exchanged between it and the United States Government, with the purpose of supplying Congress with material for a choice between the Panama route and the Nicaraguan route. It probably will be shown among other things that the canal commission or the State Department thought that the sum of $33,000,000 was sufficient to pay for all the rights and properties which the Panama Canal Company could turn over to the United States in the event that the choice fell upon their route. The canal company regarded this sum as ridiculously inadequate.

HEARING FOR COL. GARDINER.

Governor Receives District Attorney's Answer and Will Dispose of the Charges Saturday.

ALBANY, Dec. 20.—Gov. Roosevelt will dispose of the charges preferred against Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, District Attorney of New York County, on Saturday next. Col. Gardiner on that day will be given an opportunity at a public hearing to be given at the Executive Chamber to present in person or through counsel an oral argument in refutation of the allegations made against him.

The formal answer of Col. Gardiner to the charges reached the city this afternoon and are now under consideration by the Governor. When the hearing takes place on Saturday the Governor will have acquainted himself thoroughly with the case and will be ready to render a decision at the conclusion of the hearing.

The Governor stated to-night that he would not consent, no matter what the circumstances are, to any postponement of the hearing on Saturday. It will be held rain or shine, he said. It is his desire to dispose of the case prior to his departure for Oyster Bay, where he will spend Christmas with his wife and family.

District Attorney Gardiner's answer to the charges of Deputy Attorney General Hammond, alleging interference with the Attorney General's deputies in the presentation and prosecution of election law violations, was forwarded to Gov. Roosevelt in charge of Assistant District Attorney Edwards. Col. Gardiner's answer has already been summarized in THE NEW YORK TIMES. It consists of fifty typewritten pages of affidavits from his assistants mentioned in the charges, who deny each allegation of interference with Mr. Hammond, and in defense declare that the District Attorney was as anxious to have the election cases disposed of as was the Attorney General.

Col. Gardiner states that he instructed his assistants to render aid to Mr. Hammond in every way possible, and that he believes this was done. Mr. Hammond never asked the advice, aid, or assistance of any member of the District Attorney's professional staff in the prosecution or conduct of any case, says Col. Gardiner, but, on the contrary, deliberately neglected to avail himself of the experience and professional assistance which the District Attorney's office would willingly have furnished. Regarding the refusal of Col. Gardiner to give Mr. Hammond blank Grand Jury subpoenas and certificates of attendance, Col. Gardiner says, as THE TIMES has already published, that it has never been the custom of his office to give such blank subpoenas and certificates to any person, as the practice of indiscriminately issuing such certificates would lead to frauds on the City Treasury.

Mr. Unger emphatically and specifically denies all allegations of the Deputy Attorney General relating to himself, and states that every effort of the Indictment Bureau, of which he is in charge, was in the direction of facilitating and co-operating with the representatives of the Attorney General in the prompt disposition of election cases.

Concerning his remarks about the Devery indictment, Col. Gardiner says that upon learning of the indictment which bore his signature, the legal effect of which was a certification and indorsement of the action, which, as a matter of fact, he knew nothing of, he had expressed his personal view about it in a street conversation. All other specifications are denied at length.

Lieut. Hobson Improving.

At the Presbyterian Hospital it was said last evening that Lieut. Hobson was steadily improving. Some soup was given to the patient yesterday.

AN UNDISPUTED FACT.

The gentlefolk, quite up to date,
Are dainty in their tastes, you knew!
Upon their dressers you will find Perfumes all made by Ed. Pinaud.

It is Pinaud's Eau de Quinine
That keeps their hair so soft and fine,
The blondes all use the Portugal,
'Tis a Tonique, in the same line.

They are not dyes; oh, no, my friend!
But they are tonics rich and rare;
They clean the scalp, and dandruff cure,
Restore and beautify the hair.

We would advise you, every one,
Who threatened is with a bald pate,
To try Ed. Pinaud's fine Tonique
Before you find it is too late.

GOVERNOR DISMISSES WISE FROM OFFICE

Sustains Charges Against Lunacy Commission President.

Says He Was Guilty of Malfeasance and Sought to Make Money Out of Official Position.

ALBANY, Dec. 20.—Gov. Roosevelt announced this evening that he had dismissed from office Dr. Peter M. Wise, President of the State Commission in Lunacy, on the charge of malfeasance in office. The Governor sets forth his reasons for the removal in the following memorandum:

"In making this removal, I consider nothing but the statements and admissions of Dr. Wise himself, as made in his testimony taken before me Dec. 10 and 11, and submitted in the form of Exhibit I. at the hearing on the charges Dec. 20, 1900. The accuracy of this testimony was acknowledged by Dr. Wise's counsel.

"Dr. Wise was guilty of gross impropriety in directly or indirectly, by suggestion or otherwise, soliciting subscriptions to the Copper Hill Mining Company, of which he was President, from his official subordinates of both sexes, including superintendents, doctors, stewards, and, in at least two cases, the heads of private asylums which are under the supervision of the State Commission in Lunacy. Such conduct would be improper in any public officer. It is peculiarly improper in the case of the head of the State Commission in Lunacy. This Commission has extraordinary power, controls vast sums of money, deals with a peculiarly helpless class of people; so it calls for a particularly high type of official rectitude.

"When the head of a department suggests in any way to a subordinate to take stock in any company which is under the control of the said head, the effect is twofold. In the first place, there must, in many cases, be a species of moral coercion upon the subordinate; in the second place, if he takes stock at the request of his chief the latter is to a greater or less extent under such relation to him as must inevitably impair proper discipline; they become confederates, and such a relation necessarily lowers the entire morale of the force.

"In the case of private asylums, wherein any abuses in connection with the insane are especially likely to take place, it of course is especially incumbent upon the Lunacy Commissioners to avoid any relations which might hamper their freedom of action. In this case Dr. Wise, owing to his Presidency of the copper mining company in question and his efforts to have the stock taken by subordinates, was thrown into still further unfortunate relations with them; such as having seven doctors and a steward indorse a note for $1,600 on one occasion and trying to borrow several thusand dollars on another occasion from the head of one of the private asylums.

"Seemingly the copper mining company is now in very bad financial condition, a circumstance which is sufficient to show the utter impropriety in the head of a department using the influence given by official position to persuade subordinates earning not too large salaries to embark some of their slender earnings in such a venture.

"The case of the ice house at the Flatbush Asylum I regard more serious still. Here Dr. Wise clearly sought to make money out of his official position. It was no part of his duty to have such a building erected. Nevertheless he usurped this function of one of his subordinates and himself directed the erection of the building. The foundation was piped and laid by the labor of the patients—that is, by the State. It was intended to use the ice house as an experiment in making ice under a new process, for the different State hospitals.

"Dr. Wise had such financial relations with the company that he would have benefited greatly by the success of the experiment. He claims that the experiment, if successful, would also have benefited the State; but this, of course, does not alter the utter impropriety of his using his position as a State official to secure pecuniary advantage to himself from a corporation which, through him, was to establish relations with the State. He had a financial interest in the company, while in the interest of the company he was building the ice house on State land and partly by State labor.

"He has himself admitted the impropriety of this conduct by stating that when the construction of the ice house was undertaken he gave up his interest in the company, yet it appears from his letters that he never gave it up at all—certainly not for eight months after the construction of the house was undertaken, and until it was believed that the process was a failure.

"In explanation of these letters, which were written to the officials or agents of the company, Dr. Wise asserts that he really had given up his interest, but that he was deceiving his business associates during their long correspondence, lasting for eight months. Taking into account such a letter as that partially quoted in his testimony of Dec. 11, written by him to Vaughn, it is absolutely impossible to credit this statement or to believe that he entered into such a long, complicated, and utterly purposeless deception. Moreover, if his plea is admitted, it simply makes him guilty of another type of moral turpitude.

"It is not possible to exact a high standard of public service and at the same time to condone such conduct as that of Dr. Wise, and he is accordingly removed from office."

Gov. Roosevelt will not fill the vacancy caused by this removal, but will allow Governor-elect Odell to fill it. The salary is $7,500 and $1,200 traveling expenses.

When the Wise hearing was resumed today, the doctor's counsel attempted to secure an adjournment, but the Governor flatly refused to agree to an adjournment, saying that he had had the accused before him on Dec. 11, when it was understood that the hearing was to be held to-day, when the doctor was to be examined solely on his own statements and submissions made at that time to him (the Governor.)

Counsel thereupon filed an answer, in which he raised the point that the Governor had no jurisdiction to hear the charges against Wise, nor to try him upon alleged charges of misconduct, under the Public Officers' law, Chapter 681 of the Laws of 1892, which provides that any officer appointed by the Governor may be removed by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, and may be removed by the Senate upon the recommendation of the Governor.

In the answer Dr. Wise denies that he solicited any physician in the employ of State hospitals to take stock in the Copper Hill Mining Company, and asserts that of the 169 resident officers of State institutions only 16 hold stock in the company, and that he had conversed on the subject with only 6 of these. As to the erection of the icehouse, he says that the building was constructed on the land of the Long Island State Hospital with the permission of the managers of the hospital, solely for the purpose of cheapening the cost of ice to the State.

The Governor endeavored to examine Dr. Wise, who, however, acting upon the advice of his counsel, refused to answer any questions put to him touching his transactions as President of the Copper Hill Mining Company and the alleged contracts made with the International Ice Company. The Governor thereupon declared the hearing closed.

WISE CHARGES CONSPIRACY.

ALBANY, Dec. 20.—Dr. Wise to-day issued a statement in which he severely arraigns the Governor for his action in the case, claiming that the Dr. Backus controversy of last Winter had influenced the Governor in seeking his removal.

He alleges that the Governor, Dr. S. Ira Van Gieson, Director of the State Pathological Institute, New York City; Dr. Charles F. MacDonald, and Dr. Lambert had conspired to secure his downfall for the stand he had taken in striving to secure the removal of Dr. Van Gieson as Director of the New York Institution; that a deliberate plot had been laid to steal his private letters and these had been forwarded to the Governor, and that upon these letters the Governor based his charges.

Rector Vindicated, but Must Resign.

DOUGLASTON, L. I., Dec. 20.—Bishop Littlejohn has decided that Dr. Blanchett, rector of Zion Church, must sever his connection with the parish. Dr. Blanchett had objected to the manner in which the vestry administered church trust funds and a quarrel ensued. The Bishop upholds the rector in his contention, but thinks it best that he resign in the interest of peace.

DEVERY'S CHARGE IGNORED

Mr. York Rests Upon the Dignity Due to His Office.

Corporation Counsel's Opinion on the Legality of Transfers Will Be Ready To-day.

The police situation created by the hostility between Chief William S. Devery and President Bernard J. York had no development of importance yesterday. The four Police Commissioners met as a board, but there was no discussion or action on Chief Devery's "shake up" of Saturday. It was not even alluded to. The board called for an eligible list of Sergeants from which to appoint eighteen Captains, and attended to some matters of routine.

Much interest was exhibited in yesterday's meeting because of President York's intimation on Wednesday that something would be likely to happen, and many rumors were current, including the presentation of Chief Devery's resignation by Commissioner Sexton, interpellations of and by President York, and action to be taken on Corporation Counsel Whalen's opinion as to the power of the Chief to transfer Deputy Chiefs. A story that it will be averse to Chief Devery appears to be guesswork.

The session of the board was secret, but it lasted barely an hour. When adjournment came, it was announced that Mr. Whalen's opinion would not be given to Mr. York until this morning.

After the meeting, President York was asked if he had read Chief Devery's statement of his position, indicating defiance, and his arraignment of the President of the Police Board and Deputy Chief McLaughlin.

"Some little dignity," replied Mr. York, "attaches, or should attach, to the office of President of the Board of Police, and the present incumbent will endeavor to preserve it. So I shall not notice the incident."

"But, Mr. York," persisted the reporter, "Chief Devery makes the specific charge that you and Deputy Chief McLaughlin were responsible for vicious conditions in Brooklyn which his transfers of Saturday sought to remedy."

"There are," he replied, "some things that I will not dignify by discussion. This is one of them. The people of Brooklyn are somewhat familiar with the situation, and I am thoroughly familiar with it."

Mr. York explained that an eligible list from which to appoint eighteen Captains, while there are only fifteen vacancies, was called for in order to meet any situation which a demand for recognition by candidates on the ground of being veterans might create.

"I have already told THE NEW YORK TIMES," said Commissioner Sexton, when his attention was called to a statement that last Friday morning he was in a restaurant on Sixth Avenue near Forty-third Street with Chief Devery, and considered and decided on the "shake-up," "that I had no hand in the transfers. I repeat this, and you cannot make the denial of this story too strong to meet the facts. There's not the slightest foundation for it."

Corporation Counsel Whalen was detained in the Mayor's office at a meeting of the Board of City Record until nearly 3 P. M. yesterday, and found it impossible to devote proper attention to his opinion as to the power of Chief Devery to transfer Deputy Chiefs.

"I have had my say," said Chief Devery last evening, "and will say no more for the present. I may go to my office before my leave has expired, but it is not likely to be this week."

YORK CONSULTS McLAUGHLIN.

Police Board President and the Brooklyn Leader Confer.

President York of the Police Board stopped in at the Willoughby Street headquarters in Brooklyn yesterday morning and had brief talks with Hugh McLaughlin and James Shevlin. Referring to Chief Devery's statement that he had been hampered by politics, and that he had been placed in his position by Providence, Mr. York in Mr. McLaughlin's presence said:

"It is eminently sacrilegious to hold Providence accountable for Devery, unless you credit Providence with the establishment of the insane asylum on Ward's Island."

"What do you think of his characterization of his subordinates?"

"I think he characterizes himself," was the reply.

"No sober man would make such statements as Devery," said Mr. McLaughlin. "Is it a crime to wear a black hat, or a tall hat? What does it mean to be 'cheesy'? We don't understand that jargon in Brooklyn.

"So he says that Deputy Chief McLaughlin does not go near him in Mulberry Street," continued Mr. McLaughlin. "Perhaps he doesn't recall that he had to apologize to the Deputy Chief; that he fairly got down on his knees and said he would do anything McLaughlin asked.

"He says President York is responsible for the conditions in Brooklyn. Well, who has heard any complaints since Devery has given up trying to run things in Brooklyn? When Bishop Potter asked that a decent man be sent where his friends were working, Devery sent Herlihy; I think the public can assure themselves pretty well as to what Devery is doing in New York and who is responsible.

"I once knew a woman, an Englishwoman, named Jones. I had not seen her for several years, but met her on one particular occasion. She grasped me by the arm, and pointing to the wide fields in the distance said: 'You see all that land? Well, it belongs to me. I will give you half of it if you will get me out of this.'

"'I will undertake the job,' I said.

"Where do you suppose I saw her? Well, it was in an insane asylum. I think Devery would like to have some one get him out of his present position."

ALLEGED POOLROOM RAIDED.

Gambling Paraphernalia Seized and Three Men Placed Under Arrest.

An alleged poolroom conducted on the second floor of 114-116 East Thirteenth Street was raided yesterday afternoon and three men were arrested. The raid was conducted by Superintendent Burr and Assistant Superintendent Thompson of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, assisted by the police attached to the Yorkville Court, on warrants issued by Magistrate Hogan on the complaint of Paul Leitenberger, an agent of the Society.

When the officers and police reached the hallway leading to the alleged poolroom they found the stairway barricaded. The obstruction was removed and then the room was entered. About two hundred men were found in the place. As soon as the presence of the police was announced there was a rush to get out. A large quantity of paraphernalia was secured by Superintendent Burr and his assistants.

The alleged proprietors of the place were then arrested and taken to the Fifth Street Station, where they described themselves as Thomas Martin, a marketman; John White, a theatrical agent, of 208 West Thirty-fourth Street, and Bernard Wallman, a bar goods clerk, of 226 West Twentieth Street. They were charged with maintaining a poolroom. The men were locked up and later bailed out on bonds furnished by Samuel Kahn of 50 East Ninety-fourth Street.

LECTURE AT HARVARD BY OSCAR S. STRAUS

"United States Doctrine of Citizenship and Expatriation."

NEED FOR REVISED LAWS

Mr. Straus Declares Remedy Should Be Found for the Frequent Abuse of Naturalization.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 20.—Oscar S. Straus, ex-United States Minister to Turkey, addressed the students of Harvard University in Sanders Theatre to-night on "The United States Doctrine of Citizenship and Expatriation."

Dr. Wolcott, Acting President of the university in the absence of President Eliot, in introducing Mr. Straus said: "From the very foundation of the Union down to the present day the object of our naturalization law has been to divest our foreign citizens of their allegiance to the country of their origin."

Mr. Straus presented his subject in a clear and forcible manner. He related some amusing incidents gathered while in the diplomatic service in Turkey. He was heartily applauded at the close of his lecture. He said in part:

"When the normal relations between nations were those of belligerency the principle underlying those relations was the predominance of might and self-interest. As this attitude changed and gradually developed with the advance of civilization into the desire on the part of nations to maintain peace with one another, so did the relations change from normal belligerency to normal amity and friendship.

"In the earlier stages of this development the foreigner had no rights; he was regarded as a slave; his property on the slightest pretext was plundered or confiscated; piracy was an important and legitimate branch of international commerce, the dangers of which could be avoided by paying in advance the stipulated and often-regulated tribute, which tribute, or tariff, was regarded very much in the light of marine insurance.

"As the individuals composing a nation became more enlightened and imbued with a sense of right and justice, so the nations which ultimately reflect public opinion shaped their political and executive relations toward each other by their laws, by treaties and conventions, so as to avoid international differences and prevent those double-edged controversies which arise out of the conflict of sovereignty and are the fruitful causes of war.

"Among the questions coming under this head, none are of more frequent occurrence than those growing out of the conflicting claims of sovereignty and allegiance made by nations respecting their subjects. The chief conflict arises out of the following classes of cases:

"Where a person is domiciled in a country wherein he was born, descended from a father born in the dominion of another country.

"Where a person born in one country emigrates therefrom and becomes naturalized in the country of his adoption, and afterward returns to the country of his birth.

"The evolution and revolutions which brought about the overthrow of feudalism as a State system have not entirely obliterated many of the precedents that system engendered. It has been in European countries as a prerogative of early monarchial claims the idea of perpetual allegiance transferred from the liege lord to the State, except in so far as these ideas had to yield to the conflicting claims of sovereignty, which are chiefly embodied in the reciprocal clauses of naturalization treaties. The feudal doctrines have never found root in this country.

"It has been claimed even by some of our leading jurists of former years that as we adopted the common law of England, as it existed at the time of our separation, therefore we adopted the common law doctrine of indissoluble allegiance. On this point George H. Yeaman, United States Minister to Denmark, said: 'There are two sufficient answers to this course of reasoning; the common law of England is not the international law of the world, and we have inherited and adopted the common law of England only in so far as its provisions and its reasoning are adapted to our new situation and our political institutions. Therefore the common law doctrine of indestructible allegiance is not a part of the system, by assumption, any more than it is of the international law.'

"The United States have led the way in the overthrow of the feudal doctrine of perpetual allegiance. The executive branch of the Government has from the earliest times consistently upheld the right of expatriation, and opposed the doctrine of indissoluble allegiance. Our foreign relations are replete with cases wherein we have consistently urged and generally upheld the doctrine of the inherent right of expatriation. The insistence upon this right brought us into war with England in 1812, and again in 1848 came near bringing us into hostile collision with Austria, arising out of the case of Martin Koszta.

"England, while freely allowing liberty of emigration, held to the principle of indelible allegiance until 1870. Her former attitude was neither logical nor consistent, in that she did not follow her emigrants to other countries with English protection, but claimed the right of their allegiance whenever she chose to demand it. So long as they remained in a foreign country, they were said to retain a foreign claim of allegiance, and estopped from asking British protection, yet when they returned to England, the claim of their foreign allegiance was not admitted. There could be no more striking illustration of conflict of sovereignty arising out of opposing doctrines maintained by two nations on the question of expatriation than the causes that brought on the Anglo-American war of 1812. So long as these opposing doctrines were insisted upon, all efforts to arrive at a peaceful arrangements proved futile."

Mr. Straus then went on to give various instances of diplomatic conflict with Great Britain and other countries over the question of expatriation, and perpetual allegiance. He mentioned, among other cases, those arising from the Fenian arrests, and suspension of the Habeas Corpus act in Ireland in 1866, and went on to speak of the act of Congress of July 27, 1868, which enacted: "That all naturalized citizens of the United States, while in foreign States, shall be entitled to, and shall receive from this Government the same protection of persons and property that is accorded to native-born citizens in like situations and circumstances." Mr. Straus went on to say:

"The same year this act was passed we concluded the first of our series of naturalization treaties, wherein we limited, except under exceptional circumstances, the period of protection of naturalized citizens to two years after their return to and residence in the country of their origin. And yet the United States came forward in the protection of its naturalized citizens, even under these circumstances, than other countries. Great Britain, for instance, while freely accepting naturalization, has relieved herself from protecting its foreign-born subjects on their return to the country of their origin.

"We have treaties of naturalization with the following countries: Austria-Hungary, Baden, Bavaria, Belgium, Denmark, Ecuador, Great Britain, Hesse-Darmstadt, the North German Union, Sweden, Norway, and Wirtemberg. The act of 1868, in reference to these countries with which we have treaties of naturalization, is modified by the two-year clause, but with such countries as Turkey, Russia, France, Mexico, and the other republics of this hemisphere, with which we have as yet no treaty of naturalization, continual conflicts arise, which are aggravated in times of revolution or other domestic troubles in such countries by the return of their former subjects, who come back clothed with American naturalization. A large part of the time of our State Department and our diplomatic agents is taken up with this class of cases, which often develop so as to menace our friendly relations.

"My purpose in presenting this subject has not been to merely discuss a very important question of international law, which has for many years, in its infinite varying phases, occupied and continues more and more to occupy the Executive branch of our Government, and its diplomatic agents in foreign countries, but to show the advisability, if not the imperative duty of our lawmakers, to modify our laws regarding naturalization in respect to that special class of our naturalized citizens who are a constant menace to our friendly relations with other nations. I refer to that class whose citizenship, though regular in form, in the light of intent and purpose to which it is applied, is a fraud upon two countries, our own and the country of their nativity. From my experience in Turkey I feel justified in saying that a very large proportion of American naturalized citizens of Ottoman origin, who return to their country of origin, come under this class. The same is true to a lesser extent in other countries.

"A survey of our diplomatic relations with Spain for the past fifty years will show to what extent our naturalized citizens of Cuban origin were responsible for the chronic state of insurrection fostered by filibustering expeditions from the United States which eventually brought on our recent war with Spain.

"Naturalization effected in the United States without any intent to permanently reside therein, but with a view of residing in another country, especially when such other country is the country of origin, and using such naturalization to evade duties and responsibilities that would otherwise attach to such person, should be treated by our Government as fraudulent and as imposing no obligation upon it to protect such person.

"There are several ways of reaching the desired result—either by adopting some such form respecting naturalization as obtains in Great Britain or by the passage of an amendment to the existing laws to the effect that the return of a naturalized citizen to the country of his nativity, except for a temporary stay or a brief visit, shall be presumptive evidence of the abandonment of his American citizenship. While this will not be a complete remedy, it will have the added effect of deterring the immigration of such persons as most abuse the high privileges of American citizenship, and who are a continual menace to our friendly relations with other countries."

BOY MURDERER'S DEFENSE.

Burns's Mother Testifies that He Is Subject to Fits of Insanity.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 20.—The prosecution was closed to-day in the trial of Edgar C. Burns for the murder of Herbert B. Fellows, the Scarsdale station agent and Postmaster.

The last witness called was Dr. N. F. Curtis of White Plains, who said that he had found Fellows lying on a sofa on the morning of Dec. 5 with a bullet wound in his head.

Lawyer Mills, the counsel for the defense, in opening his case, said that he would prove that his client was weak mentally and that there was insanity in his family.

Anna E. Burns, the mother of the defendant, said her son had been delicate and subject to epileptic fits ever since he had injured himself by a fall when he was five years old. He had been sunstruck twice and had been sent home after a few months' attendance at every school to which he was sent. He had been addicted to excessive smoking since he was ten years old. At one time he had fallen from the roof of a building, severely injuring himself, and since then had been subject to fits of insanity.

THE NEW INVASION OF CAPE COLONY

Martial Law Proclaimed in Many More Districts.

AFRIKANDER RISING FEARED

Government Memorandum Minimizes Danger, but Boers Are Reported to Have Captured Colesberg.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 20.—A Government memorandum, issued this evening, is as follows:

"The principal seat of action has been transferred to the northern part of Cape Colony. Early on Dec. 16 a large body of Boers crossed the Orange River, toward Burghersdorp. A British force followed, to avoid which the Boers turned westward, and occupied Venterstad on Dec. 18, but they evacuated the town the same day on the approach of the British, and marched in the direction of Steynsburg.

"The Boers, however, have been intercepted, and find difficulty in moving in any direction, as Steynsburg, Burghersdorp, Stormberg, Rosmead, and Naawpoort are all strongly held by the British, and the Orange River has risen considerably in their rear.

"Another two thousand Boers crossed at Sand Drift, making for Colesberg, but on the dispatch of a British force they diverged, and occupied Philipstown on Dec. 19, cutting the telegraph wires between Philipstown and Houtkraal. Early this morning a portion of these Boers reached Houtkraal Station and cut the line there.

"Considerable reinforcements have been sent to De Aar and Hanover, and it is expected that further invasion will now be stopped, except in the case of scouting parties which may slip through to raid cattle and to obtain much needed supplies.

"Hitherto there has been very little fighting, as the enemy in every instance have retired before the British. They took our garrison of twenty men at Venterstad prisoners, but the Magersfontein garrison repulsed their attacks, inflicting heavy loss, after some hours' fighting and a refusal of a demand to surrender.

"It is probable that, of the two invading forces, the former is a part of De Wet's commando and the latter consists of several small commandoes hitherto operating in the western part of Orange River Colony and of a number of rebels. Therefore martial law has been proclaimed in the following additional districts: Britstown, Victoria, West, Richmond, Hanover, Murraysburg, Graaf, Reinet, Aberdeen, Middleburg, Steynsburg, Cradock, Tarka, and Molteno."

In spite of the optimistic tone of the foregoing memorandum the situation is very serious. Grave fears are entertained that Dutch sympathizers will join the rebellion, and that it will spread.

It is reported that the Boers have occupied Colesberg, South of Philippolis and near the Orange River Colony frontier. The people here are much disturbed.

A mixed force of 1,000 men was dispatched north yesterday evening.

Although there is no fear as to the ultimate result, the lack of a sufficient number of mounted troops is felt by the British. The enormous waste of horses in South Africa was never fully appreciated until now.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The following dispatch was received yesterday from Gen. Kitchener, dated Pretoria, Dec. 19:

"A party of Boers, estimated at from 500 to 800, has crossed the Orange River, at Rhenoster Hoek.

"A second band is reported to have crossed near Sand Drift.

"They have been followed. I have sent a considerable body of mounted men, who are getting around them.

"The Boers from Rhenoster Hoek are being followed closely from Venterstadt, which they left at 3 o'clock yesterday evening, going in the direction of Steynsburg.

"The important points on the railway and the neighborhood are well guarded. I hope the band will soon be driven north again."

Since the foregoing dispatch, fully confirming the news of the invasion of Cape Colony, and expressing a hope, not of capture, but only of driving the Boers north again, not a word has been issued officially as to the situation in South Africa.

Considerable activity is now manifested at Aldershot. A large draft of mounted troops will be ready to start for South Africa on Jan. 6, while others have been notified to hold themselves in readiness for the same destination.

According to the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring yesterday, the Treason Court, sitting in Colesberg, was obliged hurriedly to remove to Cape Town with the records and documents, owing to the nearness of the invading Boers. "The Colesberg district," says the correspondent, "is seething with anti-British excitement. A recrudescence of rebellion is perceptible in the districts immediately south of the Orange River. Tuesday morning a fight was proceeding at Philipstown, presumably with the commando which crossed at Sand Drift."

KRUEGER LEAVES AMSTERDAM.

Has Gone to The Hague—Heasian Diet Members Demand Arbitration.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 20.—Mr. Krüger left here for The Hague this afternoon. The farewell scenes were a repetition of the enthusiasm manifested on his arrival here.

The Boer statesman attended a crowded meeting in the morning in the Nieuwe Kerk. The speakers declared that Great Britain had sold her birthright for a handful of gold, and that the Continental powers would forever bear the brand of Cain unless they intervened in South Africa.

Subsequently Mr. Krüger visited the Palace of Industry, where 5,000 schoolboys welcomed him with a choral.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—The Frankfurter Zeitung says the Czar, in his reply to Mr. Krüger's Marseilles telegram announcing his arrival in France, addressed it "To Mr. Krüger."

A number of members of the Hessian Diet have introduced an urgent motion asking the Bundesrath to call an international arbitration court to settle the South African difficulty.

DE WET'S FORCE A BIG ONE.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Dec. 18.—Gen. De Wet had 6,000 men and 18,000 horses when he captured De Wet's Dorp, according to a man who was imprisoned there. The Boer commander then declared that he was not going to surrender without a free pardon for all his men, including many Cape Dutch.

The force of 6,000 is now divided into three sections.

BATTLE NEAR KRUGERSDORP.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Johannesburg, dated Dec. 19, says that heavy cannonading was heard this morning north of Krugersdorp.

As cabled from Krugersdorp, Transvaal, under date of Dec. 16, a pitched battle was then imminent between the British, under Gen. Clements, who had been reinforced, and the Boers, under Gen. Delarey.

MORE NEW ZEALAND TROOPS.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 21.—The Government of New Zealand has decided to dispatch another contingent to South Africa.

Jones Not to Resign Chairmanship.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Senator Jones of Arkansas, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said to-day there is no foundation for the report that he contemplates resigning the Chairmanship. "I have had no correspondence on that subject with any one," he said; "and no suggestion of that nature has ever been made to me by any one, nor have I suggested it to any one. There is no occasion for a meeting of the National Committee at this time, and no meeting is liable to be called."

No Tax Legislation in Michigan.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 20.—By a vote of 45 to 29, the House to-day concurred in the resolution adopted by the Senate yesterday providing that all business should cease after to-day, and that final adjournment of the special session should be taken Saturday noon. The House then adjourned. This ends the special session without any result in the way of taxation legislation having been attained.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

Vanderbilt Holdings of Lake Erie and Western Transferred to Lake Shore.

The announcement was made yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the West Shore Railroad, held in the Grand Central Station, that all the Vanderbilt holdings of the stock of the Lake Erie and Western Railroad had been transferred to the treasury of the Lake Shore Railroad. The control of the Lake Erie and Western was secured a year ago by W. K. Vanderbilt through the purchase of 59,400 shares of the common and 59,300 shares of the preferred stock. One-half of this stock was given to the New York Central and the other half was apportioned to the Lake Shore.

Through the transfer of the New York Central's share of this stock to the Lake Shore the latter becomes charged with the total amount of the purchase money, which is about $12,942,000. Of this amount there has already been paid out of surplus earnings the sum of $5,740,000, leaving still due $7,202,000. A large share of this remaining debt the company, it is declared, will be able to pay off out of the earnings of the coming year. Should it become necessary to make a speedier payment, there may be used for this purpose some $3,500,000 3½ per cent. bonds of the Lake Shore, which are now in its treasury.

The financial statement of the company's affairs submitted at yesterday's meeting shows that the gross earnings for 1900 were $26,450,000, and the net earnings $9,133,000. Before the net earnings were computed there were charged off from the gross earnings $3,000,000 for betterments. The cash surplus is $3,101,315. Through the acquisition of 112,254 shares of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis the Lake Shore has become part owner with the New York Central in that system.

There were also meetings yesterday of the Board of Directors of the Michigan Central, the Lake Erie and Western, and the Canada Southern, at all of which the regular dividends were declared.

Southern Pacific Buys 50,000,000 Bricks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—The Southern Pacific Company has let a contract to a local firm for 50,000,000 bricks to be used in lining the tunnels of the New Bay Shore Road to run through the hills of South San Francisco. This is said to be the largest contract of the kind ever entered into in the world.

Brief Railroad Items.

W. M. Lowry, General Passenger Agent, and Arthur Street, General Freight Agent, of the Northern Steamship Company, were in the city yesterday.

The Wabash Railroad has erected a new freight house at East St. Louis, Ill., which has twice the capacity of the former one. The freight yard trackage has also been remodeled, affording better facilities for the handling of carload and less than carload shipments.

The New York Central has installed and is now operating at its yards at Niagara Falls a pneumatic interlocking switch plant which places the movement of all switches under the control of one man.

The executive officers of Western, Southwestern, and Northwestern roads will meet in St. Louis on Jan. 3, 1901, for a further discussion of the rate situation.

It is estimated that 250 veteran employes of the Pennsylvania lines will be retired at the beginning of the new year in accordance with the pension plan in force on that system.

The Burlington Route has announced its intention of making a rate of 1 cent a mile to the Grand Army encampment in Denver next Summer.

The Pennsylvania Railroad on two days this week ran a special newspaper train out of Philadelphia up the Schuylkill Valley as a preliminary trial before its permanent establishment. The train left Philadelphia at 2:10 A. M., stopping at most of the important towns along the line, and reaching Wilkesbarre at 6:45. The train was run with a view of competing with similar trains out of New York, and will probably become a fixture.

The railroads running out of Chicago have agreed to set aside two days during each month this Winter, when tickets will be sold to all points at a rate of one fare and one-fifth for the round trip. The dates are Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 5 and 19, March 5 and 19, and April 2 and 16. The tickets will not apply to local fares.

A plan for a complete readjustment of the capitalization scheme of the Northern Pacific Railway is reported to be under consideration, and this impending change is supposed to be the cause of the recent advances in this stock. No official statements could be secured yesterday regarding these various reports as to the plan to be adopted.

FELL DEAD AFTER DAY'S WORK.

James Callopy, an engineer, of 362 Sixth Street, Brooklyn, secured work at a stationary engine on the new building of the Lying-in Hospital, at Seventeenth Street and Second Avenue, yesterday morning. As he was stopping work at night he dropped dead. Heart disease was the cause, a hospital surgeon said.

The man was so glad to get a job that he overworked himself during the day, it was declared.

LINER'S PASSENGERS COMPLAIN.

The North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse arrived from Bremen and Cherbourg yesterday with 2,276 sacks of European mail, which contained 5,829 registered parcels and packages.

Many of the passengers complained on their arrival of the treatment accorded them at Cherbourg. In a petition addressed to the company they state that the officer in charge of the special train from Paris to Cherbourg was not only grossly incompetent, but also very insulting in his demeanor. At Cherbourg they remained on the dock from the evening of the 12th until 2 o'clock in the morning, when they were informed that the Kaiser would not sail that night. They were unable to get any information, and the petition stated that the women and children suffered much in consequence of the treatment received.

Gustav Schwab, New York manager of the line, said the protest would be thoroughly investigated by the company.

KILLED ON A FERRYBOAT.

George Burr Young, a printer, who lived with his father-in-law at 46A Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn, was fatally injured by a truck while going aboard a ferryboat at South Ferry slip last evening.

He reached the ferry shortly after 6 o'clock, evidently on his way home from work. Before he went on the boat he complained to one of the ferry officers of feeling ill, and the latter advised him to wait until the line of teams that crowd the ferryboats at that hour had passed.

At 6:30 he started across the gangplank, but tottered and fell as he was about to put foot on the boat. The last of the vehicles was just going aboard, and Young fell in such a way that he was struck by the forewheel of it, which passed across his neck. He died at Hudson Street Hospital within half an hour.

Patrick Rafferty, living at 35 Sullivan Street, was the driver of the truck, which was owned by the Lidgerwood Manufacturing Company. He was arrested.

DRILL 4,700 FEET FOR COPPER.

Michigan Mining Company Had Faith in Its Engineers.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 20.—For six years the Tamarack Mining Company has been at work on a shaft which is now down a depth of 4,700 feet, and which was sunk at an expense of millions of dollars through barren ground. Last night at midnight they encountered the first evidence of anything that would repay them for this outlay. A miner's drill ran into the hard copper bearing rock formation known as the Calumet & Hecla conglomerate.

The Tamarack management believed the mining engineers knew whereof they figured, and the miners found copper within a few inches of the location designed by the surveyors at a depth of nearly a mile. When hoisting from the lode commences regularly this shaft will have one of the most complete and up-to-date equipments of any in the world. The miners are stripping the lode, and not much has as yet been uncovered, so that its richness in this particular spot cannot be told for a day or two.

CONSUL GENERAL STOWE ON BOER WAR

He Attaches No Importance to Recent Burgher Successes.

Says Prisoners Are Treated Splendidly by the British, and Most of Them Want Peace.

J. G. Stowe, Consul General of the United States to South Africa, with headquarters at Cape Town, arrived here on his vacation on the new Red Star liner Vaderland yesterday. He has not been in America for three years, and leaves for his home in Kansas City, Mo., to-day in order to spend Christmas with his family, who left Cape Town in June last.

Speaking of affairs in South Africa generally and the future outlook, Mr. Stowe said he considered the war practically ended, which fact was responsible for his being able to come home at this time. He was informed of the recent Boer successes and the capture at Magalies Berg of a portion of the Northumberland Fusiliers, and asked if he thought it indicated a reorganization of the Boer forces.

"Oh, no," said he. "This can be easily explained. The Boers may be expected from time to time to win slight advantages. The war is now being fought on the guerrilla plan. The situation to me seems to be that of a lot of bands who wreck and loot trains, and commit depredations on other private property. Concerning De Wet, his record seems to prove that he is a pretty good guerrilla fighter."

In answer to a question as to the treatment accorded the Boer prisoners by the British military authorities, Mr. Stowe said:

"I have visited about 15,000 of the Boer prisoners. England treats them splendidly. They are fed on the fat of the land, and I have yet to hear the first one complain. Of all this number, 80 per cent. of them, at least, have had enough of the war and desire peace—in fact, 70 per cent. issued a statement to this effect, which they sent to the English Government."

Concerning President Krüger and the effect of his departure upon the Boers, Mr. Stowe said:

"Mr. Krüger has a considerable amount of natural ability, but he has no education. I haven't heard a single expression regarding his departure by any of his fellow-countrymen, with the exception of some minor officials of the Government, clerks in departments, &c., who intimated that he forgot to pay the money due them prior to his departure for Europe."

As he has said, my soldiers of the Boer army who have recently arrived in this country that Mr. Krüger, when Pretoria was evacuated, left six months' provisions for the women and children, which Lord Roberts confiscated for the use of his own army?"

"This cannot possibly be true," he answered, "for I was in Pretoria shortly after it fell into the hands of the British, and no such report reached my ears. If it had been true Consul Hay, who was in charge there, would most certainly have informed me of it then."

"How about the ruthless burning of Boer farms by the British troops about which so much has been written?"

"I have never heard of any farms except those where ammunition was found, or from which the British troops had been fired upon, being burned by the English military authorities. So far as wanton, willful, and malicious burning of farms is concerned, no such instance has come to my knowledge."

Mr. Stowe said that he had been strictly neutral during the crisis. "Many reports," he added, "have been sent to this country to the effect that I wore a monocle, talked like an Englishman, and acted in various absurd ways. It is needless for me to answer such reports. I did my duty as I saw it, and was absolutely impartial to both sides in my performance of it."

He said that he was much surprised to learn of the stand Webster Davis, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Interior, had taken in this country.

WOMAN TERRIBLY BURNED.

Lamp Explodes and Ignites Mrs. Christina Dunkle's Clothing.

Mrs. Christina Dunkle, thirty-two years old, wife of Henry Dunkle, a wholesale cigar manufacturer at Ninety-fifth Street and Second Avenue, and who lives at 787 Westchester Avenue, was taken to the German Hospital, Seventy-eighth Street and Park Avenue, last night suffering from severe burns of the body. It is believed she will die. Shortly after 8 o'clock Sarah Hartenz, a servant, saw that something was wrong with a kerosene lamp in the hallway. She lifted the lamp up to extinguish the flame, when she became frightened and threw it from her hands. The lamp struck Mrs. Dunkle on the head, causing it to explode, igniting her clothing.

Mr. Dunkle, who happened to be at home, rushed into the street for help and found Patrolman Cram. The woman was carried into an adjoining room and wrapped in bedclothing. When the flames had been put out it was found that she had been terribly burned about the arms, legs, face, and back. It is thought she will lose her eyesight. She was removed to the hospital in a private ambulance.

HUGO WESENDONCK DEAD.

Hugo Wesendonck, ex-President of the Germania Insurance Company, died Wednesday, at his home, 10 West Eighty-eighth Street, of meningitis, superinduced by a fall. Mr. Wesendonck was in the eighty-fourth year of his age, and for some time had been in feeble health. Wednesday a week ago he attended a meeting of the Directors of the Germania Life Insurance Company, and late that same evening he was attacked with dizziness. Rising from his bed he fell to the floor, striking on his head.

Hugo Wesendonck was born in Elberfield, Germany, April 24, 1817. Completing his education at Berlin University, he became an attorney at the Court in Elberfield. He was prominent in the revolution of 1848, with which Carl Schurz, Oswald Ottendorfer, and Dr. Johann Jacobi were also identified. Because of a sentence of death for lèse majesté, Mr. Wesendonck fled to America, and, locating in Philadelphia, entered the dry goods business. Later he came to New York and was one of the founders of the Germania Life Insurance Company, its President for many years, and a Director at the time of his death.

He was a member of the German Liederkranz, the German Club, the Century Club, Down-Town Merchants' Association, and a Director in the German-American Insurance Company, the German-American Bank, and the German Savings Bank. "Reminiscences of 1848," was a story covering the stormy period of Mr. Wesendonck's life, published by him in 1898. Two daughters and two sons survive him. The eldest, Max, is Second Vice President of the company which his father helped to establish, and the younger, Walter, is a member of the firm of Lorenz & Wesendonck.

NECESSITY OF VACCINATION.

Health Officials Urgently Advise Prompt Action by Everybody.

New cases of smallpox reported to the Board of Health yesterday show that the disease is gaining a foothold on the east side of the city. The new cases, six in all, are:

WALTHEN, MAX, 38 years old, of 796 East One Hundred and Forty-second Street.
O'CALLAHAN, WALTER, 4 years old, of 48 East One Hundred and Seventh Street.

The new cases on the east side are all in the neighborhood of the car conductor James Killoran, who reported for duty when he had the smallpox and worked all day before being removed.

The Rudolph family consists of the father, mother, a five-year-old daughter, and the second daughter, Annie, who is stricken by the disease. A squad of vaccinators was immediately sent to the Rudolph neighborhood. Another squad was sent to the De La Vergne machine shop, where Rudolph is employed.

Dr. Blauvelt, Chief Inspector of the Contagious Diseases Bureau, said yesterday:

"Many causes may prevent the vaccine from taking, but if it does not take there should be revaccination. A general impression prevails that the mere fact of the vaccine not taking proves the subject to be immune, but this idea is erroneous."

Dr. Dillingham, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent, said:

"It is absolutely necessary that every person be vaccinated. Smallpox is now in many parts of the city, because of the many persons who are suffering from the malady and who are at large. Either they do not know that they have the disease or they know it and do not give themselves up for treatment.

"In one instance, that of Albert Sanders, twenty-two years old, it was learned that he had gone the full course of the disease without any medical attention whatever, and that during all this time he had associated freely with many people."

JERSEY CITY OFFICIALS ACT.

All Public School Pupils Must Be Vaccinated at Once.

School Superintendent Henry Snyder of Jersey City yesterday issued an order that all school children not recently vaccinated must be vaccinated during the Christmas holidays, which begin on Saturday and end Jan. 3. The Health Officers say they regard the five cases thus far reported as sporadic. All the children in public school No. 6 have already been vaccinated, 1,10 pupils having submitted to the ordeal.

The County Health Beard has notified the Freeholders that the accommodations for smallpox patients at Snake Hill must be increased at once. There are only five patients in the hospital for contagious diseases, but that is all that can be accommodated at present.

BRONX BUILDER MISSING.

His Wife Says Notes Are Due—His Letter to Her.

Mrs. Thomas Morgan of 1,428 Vyse Avenue is anxious concerning the whereabouts of her husband, a well-to-do builder in the Bronx, who has been missing from home since the 12th of November last. She had an appointment to go shopping with her husband the day previous to his disappearance, which he failed to keep. The next morning she was surprised to receive the following from him:

"I will be away for a couple of weeks, and perhaps forever.

YOUR UNFORTUNATE HUSBAND."

Since that time no word has been received from him. Several notes of Mr. Morgan are due, his wife says, and she is at a loss what to do.

Before he left Mr. Morgan drew between $3,000 and $4,000 out of two banks in which he kept deposits. He is about thirty-five years of age, his wife being his senior by twenty years.

THE THREATENED KURD RISING.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Gen. Osman Pasha, who led the Kurd rising in 1878, told a representative of The Daily Mail yesterday that he would leave London to-day (Friday) to head another rising to free Kurdistan from Turkish rule.

"I hope for British sympathy," he said, "if not for more material support in the struggle against the despotic Turks, who, dominated by Russia, have compelled the brave, warlike Kurds to act the part of assassins toward their brother Armenians."

DURYEA WILL CONTEST.

Lawyer Who Drew the Instrument Testifies—Adjourned Until Wednesday.

MINEOLA, L. I., Dec. 20.—The hearing in the matter of the contest over the will of Edgar E. Duryea, the starch manufacturer of Glen Cove, was continued here to-day before Surrogate Seabury, but was adjourned before any material progress had been made in the examination of witnesses.

Before the hearing in the case was taken up Judge Seabury stated that he had dismissed the proceedings for the appointment of an appraiser to ascertain the amount of inheritance tax due the State on the Duryea estate. A feature of the day's proceedings wae the appearance for the first time in the case of Lawyer Samuel Untermyer of Manhattan, who was associated with J. Campbell Thompson, counsel for the contestants.

The first and only witness called during the day was Edward T. Payne, the lawyer who drew up the will and one of the executors of the instrument. In the course of a severe examination by Mr. Untermyer witness was asked if he could explain the difference in the amount of the value of the estate, as claimed by the contestants and the beneficiaries. He said that so far as he knew the amount of the personal property was $600,000, the estimate of the amount named in the will. Outside of that he knew nothing whatever of the personal property. The value of the real property, he declared, would not, in his opinion, exceed $100,000. Witness further said he had never seen Mr. Duryea drunk. Neither had he ever seen young Walter Duryea in a similar condition.

After considerable further questioning and wrangling among the lawyers Mr. Untermyer asked that the case be adjourned in order that he might familiarize himself with the particulars. After some objection an adjournment was ordered to next Wednesday morning.

Destructive Storm in Costa Rica.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Dec. 20.—News was received here to-day of a destructive storm which swept over the interior of Costa Rica last week. Miles of railroad were damaged, the fruit plantations were injured, and communication with Port Limon was cut off. The full extent of the destruction wrought is unknown, but it is believed to be very serious.

American Plates for Scotland.

GLASGOW, Dec. 20.—Clyde shipbuilders recently placed orders for 150,000 tons of plates in the United States, at a saving of £50,000. The depression in the Scotch steel and malleable iron trades is acute. Fourteen furnaces will be damped at the end of the year. The steel works are talking of closing indefinitely.

First reason for buying furniture at Wanamaker's is that here is the best assorted stock of most wanted Christmas pieces to be found anywhere. JOHN WANAMAKER

Superb FURS

The censorship of furs is of high importance. Deception is so frequently practiced and so hard for the inexperienced to detect that one must depend almost entirely on the store that sells the furs. Imitations are hard to place a value on; and the piecing together of odds and ends is so frequent that the most critical can be deceived.

Our expert goes direct to trustworthy sources. We take no risks, and allow you to take none with us. Our buying was planned a year ago, and the first picking from the best stocks in the world was done by our fur expert. Yet we got most favorable prices because of advance orders.

The beauty of our furs will appeal to every woman who sees them. We vouch for their being exactly as represented; and the best obtainable in the various grades. These price suggestions:

Alaska sable boas, trimmed with tails, $5; $10 and $15.
Mink cluster scarfs, trimmed with tails, $15 and $17.
Blue fox animal boas, $30.
Short electric seal coats; collar and revers of blended mink, $45.
Plain electric seal coats, $37.50 to $55.
Plain Persian lamb coats, $65 and $90.
Persian lamb coats; chinchilla collar and revers, $125.
Plain seal coats, $200, $265 and $275.

And particularly warm, soft, rich styles at $1. Others up to $2.75.

UMBRELLAS

Go right down the line here among this wide assortment and you'll find many exceptionally low-priced offerings. Bargains for men and women that just at this period are doubly attractive. At $1.25, there are men's and women's umbrellas of union taffeta, neat and durable sorts, that are fairly worth $2. Some of all silk at $2, that would be very moderately priced at $2.50. And some at $2.50—the men's of union taffeta, the women's of pure silk, that should be no less than $3.50. There are excellent $5 values in both men's and women's that are priced at $3.75 here. And splendid, stylish sorts at $5, that sell usually at $6.50.

ARGUMENT ON STATUS OF ISLANDS CLOSED

Cases Now in the Hands of the Federal Supreme Court.

Plaintiffs' Counsel Resents the Use of Jefferson's Name by Attorney General Griggs.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The closing argument in the Philippines-Porto Rico cases was made in the United States Supreme Court to-day, and the cases were submitted for the final adjudication of the court. The crowds which have filled the chamber since the cases were taken up were again on hand in re-enforced numbers, entirely occupying the quarters reserved for the bar and the outer area for the public. Many people came early in the day to secure advantageous seats. As the Government's case had been closed by the Attorney General, it remained only to hear the senior counsel in the Philippine case, Charles H. Aldrich of Chicago, ex-Solicitor General, who had one hour and a half remaining of the five hours given to the plaintiffs.

Mr. Aldrich had before him the plaintiffs' brief and a voluminous portfolio of notes, but he spoke freely, with only occasional references to them. At the outset he said he would confine himself largely to legal argument, following the Attorney General's points and seeking to meet them, although he regarded much that the Attorney General had presented as irrelevant. He spoke deliberately, and seldom with any effort for dramatic force. He first directed his attention to the circumstances under which this Government came into existence, the struggle for liberty and the American protest against England's assertion of the taxing power over the American colonies.

With this history before us, he said, it was a remarkable fact that the Attorney General of the United States, over 100 years after the great struggle which founded the American Government, should come into this court and assert a taxing power more extreme than had been asserted by the most ardent defenders of England's taxing power over the colonies.

Mr. Aldrich spoke of the decision of Justice Marshall in Loughborough vs. Blake as of decisive importance, and he summed up that decision as bearing on the present conditions, as follows:

"That the power to tax, levy duties, &c., extends to the entire United States.

"That the term 'United States' embraces our great Republic, which is composed of States and Territories.' That it is not less necessary, on the principles of our Constitution, that uniformity in the imposition of imposts, duties, and excises should be observed in the one than the other.'

"It follows from the above that the rights and obligations of the territory thus a part of the United States and the inhabitants thereof are measured and tested by the Constitution."

As to the contention that the Philippines were not a part of the United States, Mr. Aldrich said: "If the islands ceded by Spain are foreign territory, then our country would have as its commercial representatives therein Consuls, who would perform the requisite official acts prescribed by our customs laws regarding shipments of merchandise from any of these islands to any part of the United States. The Court takes judicial notice of the fact that our Government has no Consuls in the Philippines, and that when Spanish sovereignty ceased in those Islands the United States Consuls therein were withdrawn, and that the Consular agents of foreign powers thenceforth were the accredited representatives of the respective foreign Governments to the United States, and our Government signed the exequatur of such Consuls.

"What an anomaly it is to have Spain send its Consuls to the Philippines if, as contended, for the purposes of revenue, they are still foreign territory. If they are not American territory they must be still Spanish, for it is not pretended that any other nation foreign to the United States has acquired any sovereignty over them, nor is it pretended that the Philippine Islands, in the eye of international law, occupying the status of an independent nation."

Taking up the Attorney General's contention that in ordaining the Constitution the reliance of the people was in part placed upon the sense of justice of Congress, whose action is open to review at frequent elections, Mr. Aldrich said that if this meant anything it meant an assertion of power by Congress more extreme and arbitrary than was ever exercised by the British Parliament.

The Attorney General's intepretation of the word "sovereignty," Mr. Aldrich said, was that this Government had a right to do what any other nation does. This word had become most popular since we entered upon a colonial policy. But Mr. Aldrich declared that the sovereignty of the United States was one exercised under the Constitution, and that, if we are in the Philippines or Porto Rico, it is because of the powers given by the Constitution.

Justice White interposed a question when Mr. Aldrich referred to the American protest against British taxation without representation." Would this mean, the Justice asked, that Congress could not tax the new possessions until they were represented in Congress? Mr. Aldrich said it did not go that far, and was sufficiently answered in the case of Loughborough vs. Blake.

Mr. Aldrich said he entered a protest against the use of Jefferson's name in support of the proposition that the United States can acquire and hold territory indefinitely. It was settled beyond question that Jefferson himself had not regarded the Louisiana Purchase as Constitutional and believed that a Constitutional amendment was necessary.

Justice Gray asked his first question at this point, inquiring if counsel held that the Louisiana acquisition was unconstitutional. Mr. Aldrich answered that he did not so hold, but Mr. Jefferson did, and the arguments of that day showed how political influences affected final results.

Justice Brown asked if it was safe to base judicial action on the arguments of contemporary politicians.

"I think not," answered Mr. Aldrich, "and I refer to them only because they occupy three-fourths of the brief of the Attorney General."

In speaking of executive action Mr. Aldrich referred to President McKinley's first message stating that it was "our plain duty to abolish all customs tariffs between the United States and Porto Rico."

Justice Shiras asked if the President was then speaking of the duty of Congress.

Mr. Aldrich said he supposed the President meant the duty of the Nation.

Justice Harlan also asked if the treaty power could go beyond the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, to which Mr. Aldrich answered that treaties could not override the Constitution.

After citing Lord Mansfield's opinion on the limitation of the power of the King and Parliament, Mr. Aldrich said: "It is a startling proposition that a power denied to Parliament as inconsistent with liberty and consonant only with tyranny belongs to the Congress of the United States in one case and to the President thereof in another; that a power, the assertion of which justified rebellion and a prolonged and bitter war to resist, was carefully preserved in the very Government established as the result of such resistance; that our forefathers denied an omnipotent Parliament to decree an omnipotant Congress; that what was tyranny as to them in 1765-1776 is less than tyranny now. Time must be capable of untangling principles if this proposition be true."

Speaking of America's early struggles for liberty Mr. Aldrich said: "The virile remonstrances of the several colonies compare favorably with any public documents ever produced. These discussions made the writing of the Declaration of Independence easy and were a fit preparation for the long years of struggle and self-sacrifice necessary to maintain and establish the principles of that immortal production.

"We have since abolished slavery and have lived admittedly the foremost Nation in all history in all that stands for liberty, guaranteed by laws made by a free people, which is our boast and the object of our adoration. Our principles, our traditions, our liberty, our Constitution, all forbid that arbitrary power shall become our characteristic. The shaft aimed at the new colonial policy is tipped with a feather from the American Constitution."

Mr. Aldrich closed with an eloquent reference to the work of our forefathers, which was not for their day but for all time.

As soon as he finished the Court turned to other cases, after allowing counsel in the Porto Rico case ten days to file a further brief.

THE VENEZUELAN TROUBLE.

Training Ship Hartford, Now at La Guayra, Will Back Up Minister Loomis's Demands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Upon representations from interested parties the State Department has requested the Navy Department to have an American war vessel remain for a time in Venezuelan waters to give support to any representations that United States Minister Loomis may have to make to the Venezuelan Government in respect to the conflicting asphalt concessions in that country.

When Mr. Loomis was in Washington last Fall he conferred at length with the State Department officers respecting some of the American concessions, notably these asphalt concessions, and what is known as the Faribault concession, which were threatened with extinguishment on various scores by the Venezuelan Government. Where the issue was directly between the concessionaires and the Venezuelan Government the matter was not difficult of treatment; but where the contest was between rival concessionaires the problem was much complicated.

Mr. Loomis went back to Caracas with the general instruction from the Department of State to exert all proper pressure to secure American rights in that section, but the complainants were first for their part to exhaust the regular judicial methods. If they had grievances which could be brought before the Venezuelan courts for hearing, this course should be taken. The United States Government would not interfere except in cases where there was a palpable denial of justice to an American claimant.

Minister Loomis was to do all he could, on the other hand, to see that concessions were not cancelled by decree or otherwise pending action by the Venezuelan courts. Therefore the sending of a warship to his support is believed to be with the purpose of terminating some of the many vexatious delays which are often experienced in the tribunals of South American countries.

The vessel selected for this purpose is the historic old Hartford, which, under command of Capt. Hawley, has been cruising to the West Indies and in the Carribbean Sea with a training crew aboard. She now is at La Guayra, just where she is wanted to meet the Minister's demands.

Archbishop Ireland will, it is understood, make recommendations to the President in regard to the dispute over the allotment of Church properties in the island.

Bishop McGolrick of Duluth probably will accompany Archbishop Ireland.

LITTLE GIRL TERRIBLY BEATEN.

Says Her Injuries Were Inflicted by Her Elder Sister.

Trembling with terror, her slender body covered with welts and bruises, and her hands cut and blistered, eleven-year-old Bertha Lawrence of 204 East Seventy-eighth Street was a complainant before Magistrate Hogan in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday against her elder sister, Aileen Lawrence, whom she charged with being responsible for her condition.

The sister was arrested early yesterday morning at the address given, where she kept a boarding house, by Agent Moore of the Gerry Society. When he arraigned the young woman before the Magistrate Agent Moore said:

"Your Honor, this is the most shocking case of brutality I have ever witnessed."

The case was brought to the attention of the authorities on Wednesday afternoon when Bertha ran breathless and excited into the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station and told the Sergeant that she had run away from home because her sister was continually beating and kicking her. The matron at the station house examined the girl and found that her back was sore and bruised.

In the police court yesterday the girl said that she and her sister were orphans. Four months ago her sister took her from St. Cecelia's Academy, Washington, where she had been at school, and brought her to the East Seventy-eighth Street house, where she was compelled to do the coarsest drudgery. Her sister continually found fault with her and beat her time after time without provocation.

"On Tuesday," continued the girl, "my sister beat me on the back and legs with a long iron poker because I spoke to one of the lodgers. Yesterday while I was up stairs making the beds she came up and whipped me for a long time, wearing out half a dozen switches on me because one of the roomers said she had lost a dollar."

The sister denied the stories, and said she had not whipped the child. Agent Moore took the girl into a back room and there exhibited her back. The elder sister still insisted that the girl lied.

The case was finally adjourned, the elder sister being held in $1,000 bail and the younger taken to the rooms of the Gerry Society.

WANT INDIANS TO BE CITIZENS.

ALBANY, Dec. 20.—The commission appointed by Gov. Roosevelt to investigate the conditions of Indians in this State, and to report recommendations to remedy their condition and political status, has reported in favor of their full admission to citizenship, and an allotment among them of the lands constituting the State reservations. Among other things the commission says:

"Regarding these Indians from the point of view of their political status, the salient consideration is that they are living apart as separate nations—on reservations which are, in fact, a foreign country within this State."

This is considered to be detrimental to the interests of the Indians.

In conclusion the report recommends that all jurisdiction over the Indians in this State be relegated to the National Government; that steps be taken for the allotment of their lands under the Dawes act, and that they be admitted to citizenship.

DILEMMA AT THE NAVY YARD.

No Place to Store Machinery Ready for Delivery.

A peculiar situation has arisen in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Contractors who secured the awards for the machinery to be placed in the new machine shop are clamoring to deliver the goods. The big shop is not ready, and the naval officials are in a predicament.

The contractors are compelled to deliver the machinery or suffer a penalty; the officials have no place to store the heavy material, and yet dare not refuse it. Secretary Long will be asked to solve the problem.

COMMITTEE AT ODDS ON REAPPORTIONMENT

Three Reports on the Bill Submitted to the House.

One Calls for 357 Members, Another for 386—Third Deals with Disfranchisement in Southern States.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Representative Hopkins, (Rep., Ill.,) Chairman of the Committee on Census, to-day filed in the House the majority report on the Reapportionment bill reported by his committee, fixing the membership of the House for the next decade at 357, and gave notice that he would call up the bill immediately after the holiday recess. Representative Burleigh (Rep., Me.,) filed a minority report signed by six members, in favor of a House to be composed of 386 members, and Representative Crumpacker, (Rep., Ind.,) who signed the Burleigh report, also submitted an independent report in favor of reducing the representation in the Southern States to the extent of the abridgement of the suffrage. His independent report favors a House to be composed of 374 members.

Mr. Hopkins, in the majority report, cites many instances to show that the loss of seats by States under reapportionment bills was not uncommon. Massachusetts, for instance, which under the third census had twenty members, was reduced to ten under the sixth, seventh, and eighth, and Virginia, which had twenty-three under the third, had but nine under the ninth.

The report says the committee followed the plan adopted under the Sixth Census and followed continuously since. It has the sanction and approval of sixty years of National existence. The plan is to divide the Constitutional population by 357, the proposed membership. The quotient, 208,868, is the ratio of Representatives to population.

This ratio applied to the population of each State will yield in the aggregate a number somewhat less than 357, the number determined upon as the membership of the House. The difference is made up by assigning to the States having the largest major fractions additional Representatives until a sufficient number have been assigned to bring the total up to 357. A membership of more than 357, the report says, would make the House unwieldy.

The report of the minority bears the signatures of Messrs. Burleigh, Russell, (Rep., Conn.,) Heatwole, (Rep., Minn.,) Crumpacker, (Rep., Ind.,) Griffith, (Dem., Ind.,) and Wilson, (Dem., S. C.) Referring to the Hopkins apportionment, the report says:

The anomalous character of this proposed apportionment, as well as its obvious injustice, is clearly demonstrated by the fact that it is necessarily based, in part, upon majority fractions, and yet Colorado with a majority fraction of 121,367, Florida with a majority of 110,807, and North Dakota with a majority fraction of 105,580, do not receive a Representative based upon such majority fraction, while every other State with a majority fraction receives a representative for such majority fraction.

We believe that every State should be treated alike with reference to its majority fraction, as no valid reason has been or can be assigned for the discrimination between them. We also believe that in the new apportionment no State should lose a Representative. We therefore recommend a House consisting of 386 members.

In reaching this number we have adopted the method used by the committee, and have followed the precedent established by the House in 1872, when the House added to the whole number of Representatives a Representative each for the States of New Hampshire and Florida by reason of the fact that they each had almost a major fraction, after the whole number of Representatives had been apportioned.

We take the computation based upon 384 Representatives, upon a ratio of one Representative for every 194,182 of population. Nebraska, with a majority fraction of 100,540, each lose a Representative, and get no Representative for the majority fraction in either case.

These are the only States having majority fractions entitled to get a Representative there for. This seems to us an injustice. Therefore, following the precedent in the case of New Hampshire and Florida in 1872, we assign to each of these States one Representative for each majority fraction, thus adding two to the whole number, making in all under our proposed bill, 386 Representatives.

Under this the gain is as follows: Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, North Dakota, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin one Representative each; Minnesota, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania gain two; Illinois, New York, and Texas three.

We submit that this apportionment, involving an increase of twenty-nine in the membership of the House, is in line with the uniform practice of the House in increasing its size so as to keep pace, as near as may be, with the increase in population of the country. No practical inconvenience as to the seating capacity of the House can result from this increase. A plan prepared by the architect of the Capitol shows that a slight lengthening of the outer row of seats in the corridor on each side of the chamber and a rearrangement of eight seats in the body of the hall will accommodate the additional Representatives.

The independent report, of Mr. Crumpacker is a lengthy document, which goes exhaustively into the abridgement of the right of suffrage in the Southern States. In the beginning he quotes the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, providing that when the right to vote is abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the representation shall be reduced in such States in proportion to the abridgement.

"Congress in this matter," Mr. Crumpacker says, "must take cognizance of current history and of facts disclosed by official records. There is not a member of either House of Congress who does not know to a moral certainty that by direct operation of law the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, and South Carolina have disfranchised sufficient number of citizens to deprive each of them of several Representatives they would otherwise be entitled to, to say nothing of the largely increased suppression of votes caused by unfair partisan administration of the laws.

"The question is, Will Congress make an apportionment of Representatives according to the plain requirements of the Constitution, or will it ignore those requirements and act according to its arbitrary will?"

Mr. Crumpacker adduces figures to show that in Louisiana 43.74 per cent. of the citizens are disfranchised. The representation should, therefore, he urges, be reduced from 7 to 4. In North Carolina, for the same reasons he figures that the representation should be reduced from 9 to 6; in Mississippi from 7 to 4, and in South Carolina from 6 to 4. The subterfuge resorted to in the South to evade the law, he says, marks the beginning of political demoralization and social decay. He then proceeds to a severe arraignment of the South in many localities of which "the trampling under foot of laws calculated to secure the exercise of political privileges to the negro has continued for so long that it is showing its vicious fruits in the prevalence of mob law."

He denounces the frequent resort to lynch law and its unspeakable horrors. "These atrocities," says he, "bespeak a deplorable condition of political morals. Their frequent occurrence is the legitimate result of a generation of disregard of election laws." The solution of the problem this condition presents, Mr. Crumpacker says, is one of the burning questions of the hour. It is above partisanship, it involves the very life of the Government. He says in conclusion:

"The measure I propose carries no resentment toward any State, North or South. It is not designed for punishment, but it simply aims to place representation in the House upon its constitutional basis, and no State can justly complain if it be accorded its full rights. No compromise can be made with wrong."

MONTANA SENATORIAL CASE.

Investigation of Rights of W. A. Clark and Martin Maginnis Argued in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—At the conclusion of the routine business in the Senate to-day, a resolution previously offered by Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) discharging the Committee on Contingent Expenses from consideration of the resolution authorizing an investigation of the right of W. A. Clark and Martin Maginnis to a seat in the Senate, was laid before the Senate.

Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.,) declared that if the Senate should adopt the resolution discharging the committee from consideration of the resolution, it would violate the law, as the law provided that no such expenditures should be made without the authority of the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

"Does the Senator mean to say," inquired Mr. Spooner, (Rep., Wis.,) "that the Senate's hands are tied if the Committee on Contingent Expenses should never make a report?"

Mr. Hoar, (Rep., Mass.,) a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which desires the authority to make the investigation, discussed briefly the merits of the resolution authorizing the investigation, and the law bearing upon the case.

Mr. Jones (Ark.) declared, after reviewing the situation, that the resolution offered by Mr. Chandler was in the nature of a rebuke to the Committee on Contingent Expenses, that the members did not relish. The committee had held a meeting to-day, but had postponed action until to-morrow. He was of the opinion that no tangible result could be accomplished by now authorizing an investigation of a case that would be settled by the Montana Legislature on Jan. 2, when it met to elect a Senator.

Mr. Chandler asserted that no politics had entered into the consideration of the Montana Senatorial cases by the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Both of the appointees to the Senate from Montana, Mr. Clark and Mr. Maginnis, were Democrats, and the question involved the seating of one Democrat or another.

"If this is purely a political quarrel," suggested Mr. Tillman, (Dem., S. C.,) "then the Senator's interest in the matter is rather extraordinary."

Mr. Chandler retorted facetiously that there were not now enough Democrats in the Senate to properly and fully present Democratic principles and expound Democratic doctrines, and it was thought another might be given a seat.

Adverting to the question of law involving the right of the Senate to discharge the Committee on Contingent Expenses from the further consideration of the resolution, Mr. Chandler maintained that such a law could not bind the Senate, the committee being a creature of the Senate.

Referring to the presence on the committee of Mr. Jones (Sil., Nev.,) and Mr. Jones, (Dem., Ark.,) Mr. Chandler said the argument of the opponents of the resolution was that the Senate had placed itself in the hands of the Jones family, and that it could not get out even to determine which of the Democrats was entitled to a seat in the body.

In response to a statement of Mr. Chandler that the Committee on Contingent Expenses was remarkably dilatory in acting upon the resolution, Mr. Gallinger, (Rep., N. H.,) a member of the committee, said that at the meeting to-day a conclusion "for the present," had been reached. He said that the committee would have another meeting to-morrow, and desired to have some members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections before it to explain the necessity for the proposed investigation.

"I do not think," retorted Mr. Chandler, "that the extraordinary spectacle ever has been witnessed in this Senate before where the Committee on Contingent Expenses has summoned members of another committee to appear before it to give reasons why an order of the Senate should be executed."

Further along in his argument Mr. Chandler, in response to an inquiry by Mr. Tillman, said that the Montana Senatorial investigation conducted during the last session of Congress had cost between $30,000 and $40,000.

"And what benefit was derived from it?" inquired Mr. Tillman.

"Yes," responded Mr. Tillman, "but in the recent election Montana went Democratic and a Democratic Senator from that State is assured. The fruits of the investigation are not so sweet as they were expected to be."

Mr. Chandler replied that he had no desire or intention to discuss the merits of the Clark case, or the results of the Montana election. "The Senator from Montana, (Carter,) who is in his seat," said he, "doubtless would be glad to discuss the methods employed by the Democracy in the recent election in Montana, of which the Senator (Mr. Tillman) boasts."

Mr. Scott, (Rep., West Va.,) a member of the Committee on Contingent Expenses, stated that as a matter of business, he had a right to know whether the money to be expended upon a further investigation of the Montana case ought to be spent.

Pending a motion by Mr. Lodge (Rep., Mass.,) that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business, Mr. Gallinger made a statement of the case from its inception, and contended that the committee's action was justified by the facts.

An effort was made to continue the debate, but Mr. Lodge insisted upon his motion for an executive session, which was carried.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Measure Carrying $9,036,526 Is Passed by the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The House today passed the Indian Appropriation bill. Mr. Sherman, (Rep., N. Y.,) who was in charge of the Indian Appropriation bill, explained the measure, which appropriates $9,036,526, $839,286 more than the law for the current year. The main items of increase are those appropriating $1,600,000 for fulfilling treaty stipulations with the Apaches, Kiowas, and Comanches; $50,000 for the Chippewas of Minnesota, and $425,000 for the Fort Hall Indians. The principal decrease is $474,000 for the Five Civilized Tribes Commission.

The amendment of Mr. Little, (Dem., Ark.,) striking out the appropriation for the Hampton (Va.) Indian School, was disagreed to—14 to 33.

A vigorous discussion of the sectarian question developed in connection with the amendment. Mr. Cannon (Rep., Ill.,) called attention to the growing cost of educating the Indians. In 1887 it was about $1,000,000, and now about $3,000,000. Last year it cost $1,381,000 to educate the 45,000 children of the District of Columbia, and over $3,000,000 to educate 21,500 Indian children.

Mr. Curtis (Rep., Kan.,) explained that the Indian children were not only educated but boarded and clothed.

An amendment was agreed to requiring clerks in courts in the Indian Territory to account for fees, and allowing $500 per year, in addition to salary for certain extra work.

Bill for Exchange of Gold Coin.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Representative Levy of New York to-day introduced a bill designed to carry out the suggestions of the New York Chamber of Commerce as to the exchange of gold coin for other kinds of money. The bill provides that whenever any piece of money coined or issued by the United States, exceeding the denomination of one dollar, shall be presented at the Treasury and demand made for gold coin in exchange therefor, the Secretary of the Treasury shall make such exchange in gold coin. The bill also authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue two per cent. bonds in an amount sufficient to maintain the gold reserve at $150,000,000.

Army Bill in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Just before the Senate adjourned to-day Senator Hawley, (Rep., Conn.,) stated that to-morrow he would ask the Senate to take up the Army Reorganization bill, which was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs today.

FOR FILIPINO AUTONOMY

Natives Would Form Territories to Become States Later.

Plan for a Legislature to Choose Five Delegates to the United States Congress.

MANILA, Dec. 20.—The leaders of the projected Autonomy Party have again visited the Philippine Commission, and the platform proposed was discussed privately and in an informal way. The Commissioners advise the elimination of a few minor features. Personally they approve the movement as a forward step in the direction of the ultimate measure of self-government which the commission has already been instructed to endeavor to bring about.

The plan of the party is to form United States Territories, involving candidature for ultimate Statehood. The platform declares in favor of a Senate and a House of Representatives, elected from the districts of the archipelago, according to population. In preparing a bill of rights the United States Constitution is utilized, with the exception of the feature of trial by jury.

According to the plan, the Governor General, appointed by the President, would have a power of veto except in cases of a two-thirds vote of the Legislature.

The Legislature would choose five delegates to the United States Congress.

The platform opposes the sale of the Philippines without the consent of the Legislature. It contains little regarding judiciary or local affairs. In the main it repeats the features of the United States Constitution.

The most influential and honorable natives are identified with the movement.

SCOUTS PURSUE INSURGENTS.

MANILA, Dec. 20.—Every mountain trail in Gen. Young's district, north of the Abra River and between the coast and Dolores, has been followed up by the American scouts this month. A similar movement has taken place in the Provinces of Union, Benguet, Lepanto, and that part of South Ilocos which lies south of the Abra River. Fifteen insurgents have been killed and more than a hundred captured.

The villages are always abandoned before the arrival of the Americans, but many buildings that have been used as barracks have been destroyed.

Sharp Brush with Filipinos.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The following cablegram from Admiral Remey, giving an account of a sharp brush with Filipino insurgents, was received to-day at the Navy Department:

Cavite, Dec. 20.

Fifteen troopers, Fourth Cavalry, and five of the crew were landed from the gunboat Basco yesterday at Limbanes, Cavite Province. Surprised eighty insurgents, sharp skirmish half hour; thirteen insurgents killed; twelve rifles captured; large amount stores destroyed; one soldier wounded.

JUSTICE BEEKMAN BURIED.

Many Representative Men Attend the Jurist's Funeral.

Funeral services over the body of Henry Rutgers Beekman, late Justice of the Supreme Court, were held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-second Street. The gathering at the church was representative of the bar and the bench of New York. The Justices of the Supreme Court, including those of the Appellate Division, together with the Judges of the Court of General Sessions, were all present in a body.

The pallbearers were Justice Charles H. Van Brunt, David B. Ogden, Louis L. Delafield, Justice Abraham R. Lawrence, Former Mayor Abram S. Hewitt, President Seth Low, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Justice Edward Patterson, John E. Parsons, and Eugene A. Philbe.

Besides the Justices of the various courts there were also in attendance at the services the clerks of the Special and Trial Terms of the Supreme Courts, and nearly all the attendants. A committee of the New York City Bar Association occupied seats at the left of the chancel, and representatives of the Century, University, City, Manhattan, Democratic, and Reform Clubs were seated in the body of the church.

The Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Parks, rector of the church, officiated at the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. William S. Rainsford of St. George's Church. The burial, which immediately followed the services, took place at the family plot in Greenwood.

BLOW KILLED VON SCHEFFLER.

Dr. Mosher's Farmhand Said to Have Been an ex-Cavalry Officer and Son of a General.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 20.—The Coroner's jury which sat to-day at Harlington to inquire into the death of William Von Scheffler, coachman for Dr. Abraham E. Mosher of Griggstown, brought in a verdict that Von Scheffler came to his death as the result of a blow upon the head inflicted by a party or parties unknown.

Yesterday the Coroner's jury inspected the Mosher homestead and examined blood spots on the kitchen floor, the stone door step, and on rocks near a watering trough where the coachman's body was found. When the man was found dead in a hollow back of the house, Dr. Mosher made out a death certificate, giving the cause of death as alcoholism and exposure. An autopsy performed by Coroner Read showed that the coachman's skull was fractured, his head badly bruised, and that he died from hemorrhage of the brain.

Dr. Mosher to-day testified that he had last seen Von Scheffler on Friday evening. "He had been drinking heavily, said he, "and he entered my room to tell me that somebody had robbed him of a dollar. He then left, saying that he would water the horses. My brother, Lewis, found him on Saturday morning lying in a hollow near the watering trough not far from the house. He was not then dead. I did what I could for him, but the wounds and the exposure were such that I had no hope of his recovery. I gave a death certificate because it was a natural thing to do under the circumstances."

Asked as to the blood stains which were noticed on his kitchen floor the physician said they were from a dog which had been killed a few days before.

Von Scheffler, who was about sixty-five years old, was a refugee from Germany because of a duel he had fought and also because he had taken part in the revolution of 1848. His father, he had said, was Gen. Von Scheffler, and he himself had been a Prussian cavalry officer. He was a graduate of Bonn University. When he came to this country Von Scheffler was for a time Professor of Penmanship in Vassar College. He worked for a while, it is said, under Prof. Agassiz and Prof. Dana. Disappointed ambition, followed by drink, reduced him to the position of coachman and farmhand for a country physician.

WOMAN LAWYER MARRIED.

Miss Beatrice Maybaum Becomes Mrs. Emanuel Stern.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 20.—Miss Beatrice Maybaum, the second woman lawyer admitted to the bar in this State, was married to-day in the parlors of the Continental Hotel to Emanuel Stern, a well-known young manufacturer of this city, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Leucht, rabbi of the Temple Bnai Jerushun. Her sister, Miss Edna Maybaum, attended her as maid of honor. The best man was Dr. Max Stein of New York.

Mrs. Stern is a graduate of the New York University Law School, and has passed bar examinations in both New Jersey and New York. She says she will not give up her profession.

BIGAMIST GETS FIVE YEARS.

Van Duyne's Second Wife Faints When She Hears the Sentence.

James Van Duyne, a civil engineer of Jersey City, who was recently convicted of bigamy, was yesterday sent to State's prison for five years by Judge Blair.

Miss Anna V. Masden, the second wife, who made the complaint, fainted when she heard the sentence pronounced. Van Duyne tried to kiss her as he was led out of court, but was prevented by the court constables. Miss Masden had previously pleaded with Judge Blair for leniency, and she supposed Van Duyne would only be imprisoned for a year.

The first wife, who lives on Long Island, was not present.

RESCUED HER THREE CHILDREN.

Mrs. Snedeker Ran Through Fire and Was Scorched, but Shielded Them.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 20.—Mrs. W. P. Snedeker of Livingston Park, near here, saved her three children from being burned to death this morning. She was preparing breakfast when she discovered that the fireplace was ablaze. She endeavored to extinguish it, but in a few moments the flames spread with such rapidity that soon the entire house was burning.

The children were sleeping directly above the room where the flames had started. Dashing through the flames, Mrs. Snedeker reached the bedroom and carried her little ones to the street in safety. The fire singed her hair off and burned her about the face and body, but she protected the children so that they were not touched by the blaze.

The house was totally destroyed.

Prisoner Leaves Jail to Transact Legal Business and Get a Drink.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 20.—They are very easy on the prisoners at the Middlesex County Jail here. William Parker, who is half way through a six months' sentence, was sent out yesterday to clean up the jail yard. During the day he knocked off work long enough to walk down town and make a complaint before a Justice of the Peace against Elijah Nash, a fellow-prisoner, with whom he had had a quarrel. Nash was arrested.

Parker, before returning to jail, stopped in a saloon to get a drink. An acquaintance, seeing him at the bar, said: "Why, Billy, I thought you were in jail."

"I am," said Parker. "I'm in for six months, but I only have to show up at 6 o'clock."

REV. JOHN H. ROBINSON DEAD.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 20.—The Rev. John H. Robinson, best known as "Domenie" Robinson, died at his home, on Hamilton Avenue, to-day.

John H. Robinson was born near Enniskillen, Ireland, in 1826. He began to preach in Connaught. In 1852 he came to America. His intention was to settle in Canada, but he came to Paterson on a visit in the expectation of hearing a sermon by an eminent divine of the primitive Methodist connection, but the preacher did not come, and the young stranger was prevailed upon to preach. After the services the congregation gathered about him and persuaded him to come and be their pastor.

He originated the camp meeting in Redwoods, and in addition to raising, enlarging, and adding to the property of the Hamilton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, he procured property on Main Street for church purposes, and when the church failed, with only a foundation up, and this not paid for, he advanced between $6,000 and $7,000 and had it built.

Mr. Robinson was of a thrifty disposition, and as fast as he saved

TESTIMONY IN BOOZ CASE

THE BRETH CASE BROUGHT UP

Father O'Keefe Discusses the Death and Alleged Ill-Treatment of the Altoona Cadet.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 20.—The Military Court of Inquiry, composed of Gens. Brooke, Bates, and Clous, got through a mass of evidence to-day, and to-morrow the cadets of the first class, among whom are Frank Keller, who fought Booz, and some of the men who saw the contest, will be examined.

Major Charles B. Hall, Second Infantry, Treasurer of the Military Academy and Quartermaster and Commissary of Cadets, was the first witness to-day. He identified two bottles of red-colored sauces, which he said were the only kinds of pepper or tropical sauces in use in the cadets' mess hall since he took charge three years ago. Tabasco sauce was not in use in the academy. The hot sauces were not generally laid on the tables, but were served when called for.

The next witness was Cadet William H. Cowles of Kansas. He knew Booz, but was not present at the fight. He said:

"I prepared at the same school with Booz, and I did not consider him a strong fellow. We were at St. Luke's School at Bustntown, Philadelphia, in the Fall of 1897. C. H. Strout was the Principal, and when I went there again after examinations in the Spring, Mr. Strout told me, when speaking of Booz, that he did not expect Booz to pass the examination to enter here. Booz was examined by physicians and was developing lung and chest capacity."

The next witness, Herbert Z. Krumm of Ohio, told the Court that, among other things which he was made to do as a fourth-class man was to qualify in the mess hall. Capt. Dean asked:

"What does that mean?"

"I had to eat eighty-five prunes at one sitting, and at another I had to swallow a bowl of molasses and six slices of bread."

"Did you succeed in doing these things?"

"No, Sir; I was not successful on my first attempt at the molasses, but I did it all right the second time."

Cadet Charles Telford of Utah testified that he, like other fourth-class men, had to stand on his head, eat about a bowl of molasses, and eight slices of bread. He belonged to the Mormon Church, but had not been discriminated against or looked down upon on account of his religion.

Cadet F. T. Keller of New York said the worst thing he had been requested to do was to try and shave himself with a bayonet, and the work was very satisfactory.

Cadet Charles R. Jennings of Connecticut said he had seen Booz a few days before he left the academy, and in reply to Gen. Clous as to how Booz looked, replied: "He looked as well as any of us."

Cadet Benjamin F. McClellan of Mississippi said that Booz had completed of week ever and entitled of resigning, but not until after he had been transfered to the last section for deficiency in mathematics.

In the afternoon several men who had been in Booz's class, but who are now third-class men, were called to the witness chair. Cadet Carl Boyd of Georgia, in relating the hazing practiced on him, said that on one occasion he swallowed from a half to three-quarters of a teaspoonful of tropical sauce.

"Did you take it out of a spoon or was it poured on your tongue?"

"I think it was poured on my tongue."

"By whom?"

"I think it was Cadet William G. Caples, now of the first class."

"How do you gauge the quantity as half or three-quarters of a teaspoonful?"

"I judged the quantity from the bulk in my mouth."

"Did it injure you?"

"No, Sir; it was but for a time, but the feeling soon passed away. It did not hurt my throat at all, only my tongue."

The next witness called was the Rev. Charles G. O'Keefe, pastor of the Highland Falls parish, which includes the West Point Military Academy. In reply to questions put to him by the Court Father O'Keefe said;

"I knew Cadet John Breth of Altoona, Penn. He came here in 1897 and had a letter of introduction to me from a Catholic priest in Altoona. In consequence I paid a good deal of attention to him and had him visit me at my house. He never complained to me of being ill-treated, and when I jokingly asked him as to how he liked the hazing, he replied that he was receiving no more than others and seemed to treat it as mere fun. He never gave me the impression that he received any injury.

"Toward the end of November, 1897, his sister visited him, and she seemed to be very much distressed, fearing that her brother would be found at the coming examinations through deficiency.

"I made inquiries of his instructor, who told me the boy was quite low in his class matters. He left the Academy in January, 1898.

"I saw him after he had returned from camp to barracks in 1897, and asked him about his class studies and found he was in the last or second last section. I told him he would have to get out of that section or he would be dropped.

"I never was apprised of his being in the hospital, and as the senior physician and surgeon at that time was a Catholic, I am sure he would have notified me immediately. Of course, if he had only been in hospital a day or two he would have been notified. He did eighteen months ago, or about eighteen months after he left the Academy.

"In reply to Gen. Clous, the witness said that he had never heard of such a thing as a cadet being put into a straitjacket for the amusement of others. The reverend gentleman spoke highly of the general deportment of the cadets, and said that, in his opinion, the matter of religion was never a factor in the progress of a cadet.

Superintendent Mills emphatically denies that Breth was injured while here, and said to-day that the assertions to that effect were absolutely false.

Just before Father O'Keefe was called the following telegram, from Congressman P. O. Phillips of Cleveland, Ohio, was handed to the Court:

Col. A. L. Mills:

This morning's paper states that Mr. Booz testified that I visited West Point to protect my son from being hazed. This statement is wholly erroneous. I have always believed that the graphic feature of the drill, camp and plebe year in an indispensable factor in the West Point military development. Please show this to the Court.

Cadet John Franklin, Tennessee, testified that he had seen Booz "hraced" in the tent and in company. He had seen sauce given to Booz, two or three drops at a time, by Cadet McGuire, who is not now in the corps, and Cadet Fred L. Deem, who is now in the first class.

Major John M. Banister, Surgeon, United States Army, was next called, and he produced all the records of the medical department of the Academy. These showed that John E. Breth was admitted to the hospital June 24, 1897, and discharged a week later, July 1, 1897. He was treated for external hemorrhoids. He was admitted again on July 6, and discharged the following day, as he had only an attack of fever, a very simple ailment. On Dec. 17, 1897, Breth was excused from sections on account of acute indigestion, and these are the only instances on record where the Altoona cadet had been medically treated.

In regard to Cadet Booz, Major Banister said that there was only one instance on record of his being ill, and on that occasion Booz was allowed to remain away from one drill, as he was suffering from diarrhea.

HAZING DENOUNCED IN CONGRESS.

Mr. Bailey Says Academy Should Be Abolished If It Is Not Stopped.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—In the course of the discussion to-day in the House on the Military Academy Appropriation bill, which eventually was passed, several Representatives vigorously denounced hazing. The subject was introduced by Mr. Bailey, (Dem., Texas,) who asked if the practice of hazing at the West Point Academy had been broken up.

"The Academy management," replied Mr. Hull, (Rep., Iowa,) "is doing all it can to break it up. Two cadets have been expelled during the past year for indulging in the practice."

"I notice from the testimony now being taken at West Point," said Mr. Bailey, "that the cadets admit that hazing continues. I do not believe it is necessary to make a brute of a man in order to make a soldier of him. I believe the practice should cease. If it cannot be stopped the academy should be abolished." [Applause.]

"And the Naval Academy as well!" cried Mr. Hill, (Rep., Conn.,) amid renewed applause.

"I agree with all the gentleman has said regarding the brutality of hazing," observed Mr. Hull, "and I think the officers of the academy will soon stamp out the practice."

The bill passed without objection. It carried $700,151, or $25,845 more than the current law. Mr. Hull, Chairman of the Military Committee, explained that the principal item of increase was $10,000 for a centennial celebration to be held at the academy July 4, 1902.

DARING THEFT OF JEWELRY:

Man Unscrewed Door of a Case at a Store Entrance, While Boy on Guard Looked On.

A bold robbery occurred yesterday afternoon in the vestibule of Koch's department store in West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

Shortly after 5 o'clock a well-dressed young man entered the vestibule and examined a large case containing jewelry. Pulling a screwdriver from his coat pocket he removed the screws holding the door. Several hundred buyers were passing in and out of the store, and Harty Reeves, a fifteen-year-old boy, who watches the door of the store, saw the man doing the work. After removing the door the thief leisurely picked out a gold watch and chain, a bracelet, and several other pieces of jewelry and then walked into the street.

Reeves had by this time realized that the man was not an employe of the store, and hurried to the rear to notify one of the firm. When the case was examined it was found that jewelry valued at $350 had been taken. The police were notified and the man was traced to Lenox Avenue, where he was lost.

ESCAPES FROM SANITARIUM.

Wife of a City Official Tells of Her Flight from a Stamford Institution.

Mrs. Thomas Coakley, the wife of the Sergeant at Arms of the Board of Aldermen, is at present at her residence at 305 West One Hundred and Eleventh Street, recovering from the effects of a hurried trip from Stamford, Conn., to this city last Saturday. On that day she made her escape from the Stamford Hall Sanitarium, an institution under the management of Dr. Givens, where she has been confined for the past four months, while her husband paid $12 a week for her support there.

Mrs. Coakley went there voluntarily, and on going into the institution signed a commitment paper by which she agreed to stay there three years. According to the story she told last night, she soon became anxious to get back to her husband, but found that she could not get out of the sanitarium.

"I finally made my escape through the help of a nurse," she said. "On Saturday, when everybody was at dinner, I managed to get out. I had heard that another patient had made her escape in this way, and the nurse told me that I would find all the doors open at dinner time. I walked two miles to Stamford, and from there came to this city by train, arriving on Saturday night. I don't want to go back to the sanitarium, and my husband does not want me to, either. The officials of the sanitarium in writing to him did not tell him how I was or how much I wanted to get out.

"There are other patients there who are just as anxious to get out as I was. There is a Mrs. Chew there, who has been there for a long time, and whom I intend to help to get out."

FORTY-SECOND STREET ROUTE.

No Change of Rapid Transit Tunnel Plans in That Section.

Chief Engineer William Barclay Parsons announced yesterday that the section of the tunnel running through Forty-second Street will be constructed according to the original plans, to curve into Forty-second Street from Park Avenue, running to Broadway and up that thoroughfare. For several months many changes have been proposed, and the engineers have been figuring how to get around the difficulties of construction in Forty-second Street.

One proposal was to make the curve at Forty-second Street, and among the others and the one that has been most heard of recently was to run under the Grand Central Station, crossing to Broadway in such a manner as to connect it closely with the Grand Central Station, making an easy transfer fur passengers out of the city, and still avoid the vexed problem in Forty-second Street.

The difficulties to be met with in this street are chiefly in the network of underground obstructions, such as the subway trolley, sewer, water and gas pipes, and the underground conduits. Besides this, the sub-surface will need a great deal of blasting, which makes an exceedingly difficult operation, considering the artificial obstructions met with. The contract for the Forty-second Street section, it is expected, will shortly be announced.

MR. DOONER IS UNEASY.

The city authorities were again heard from by the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners at their meeting yesterday afternoon. This time it was John A. Dooner, Superintendent of Buildings, who spoke. Mr. Dooner forwarded a batch of reports from his active Inspectors, the burden of which was that the walls of a large number of buildings abutting upon the subway excavations were not properly buttressed and were in "an unsafe condition." The buildings referred to are, for the most part, or, in fact, nearly altogether in Elm Street, and the excavations are those made by the Degnon-McLean Construction Company.

The Commissioners somewhat solemnly passed the reports in blanket form up to Mr. McDonald for proper burial after Mr. Parsons had assured them that the buildings are entirely safe, and that there is no cause for alarm that one or more may collapse. The board also took into consideration that Mr. McDonald, as contractor, is entirely responsible for any damages that might arise from possible neglect in this direction.

"I suppose," commented one of the Rapid Transit officials, "that Dooner's inspectors felt that they were not earning their salaries, and to ease their consciences showed their chief that they were doing something for the good of the city."

The board has received other communications of a similar character, all of which have been well taken care of.

Among other routine business yesterday, the fourth requisition from Mr. McDonald for $350,000 for work to Dec. 1 was received and approved. This sum makes, in the aggregate, $1,147,000 as representing the contractor's requisitions to Dec. 1.

President Orr yeaterday sent a letter to Water Commissioner Dalton suggesting the building of a conduit to connect with the water main to be laid in the future along Eighth Avenue, while the subway excavation in the Circle is open. The conduit will pass under the station at the Circle, and if laid at the present time will involve an outlay not exceeding $10,000; otherwise the expense would necessarily be much greater.

Syracuse Company Gets a Contract.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 20.—The Onondaga Vitrified Brick Company of this city was to-day awarded the contract for electric duct conduits in the New York Rapid Transit tunnel, amounting to $500,000.

ELLIOT DANFORTH'S VIEWS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 20.—Elliot Danforth, ex-Chairman of the New York Democratic Committee, called on Mayor Taggart this afternoon. It is believed he came here for that purpose. Concerning politics he said:

"I have a great admiration for Mr. Bryan, but I have no hesitancy in stating that the financial plank of the Democratic platform was responsible for the defeat of the party, both in 1896 and in 1900."

"What can you say of the proposed reorganization of the Democratic Party?"

"I do not care to discuss the question. The next Democratic National Convention will not be held for some time, and in the meantime we will come to a conclusion as to what would be best to do. I will say, however, that I hardly think it politic to continue a policy which has resulted in the defeat of the party twice in succession."

"Who, in your opinion, will be the candidate for President on the Democratic ticket four years hence?"

"That is a long way off, and it will depend altogether on the section of the country from which it is decided to select the candidate. In fact, it is too early to talk about candidates yet."

"Hill is a candidate, is he not?"

"I will not say that Hill is a candidate for the nomination. He is very prominently mentioned in that connection in all parts of the country. Mr. Hill is a very able man and one of the best Democrats in the United States."

Jurymen's Present to Justice Fursman.

Justice Fursman, sitting in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, was yesterday presented with a silver ink stand by the members of the December jury panel who have served in his court. Assistant District Attorney McIntyre made the presentation. Justice Fursman, in reply, complimented the jury upon their efficiency and faithfulness.

MR. KELLER INSTITUTES REFORM IN BELLEVUE

SHOCKED AT THE REVELATIONS

Abuse of the Insane and Alcoholic Victims Rule—Accused Nurses Discharged.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller was convinced yesterday that a number of nurses in charge of Bellevue Hospital's alcoholic ward have been guilty of brutality in their treatment of patients. Mr. Keller was indignant at the revelations brought forth by his investigation, but what the actual report, which he received, really contained he declined for the present to say. The report was one submitted to him by investigators whom he sent on Wednesday to interview former inmates of the ward. As a result, the Commissioner is satisfied that rigorous action, including the discharge of many and the replacement of several heads of departments, is necessary.

Immediately after Mr. Keller's agents had reported to him, he wrote to Dr. George B. Fowler, President of the Board of Trustees of the Mills Training School for Male Nurses. Dr. Fowler was requested to call a meeting of the board as soon as possible, as the Commissioner had evidence in his possession showing that radical measures must be taken to end the abuses.

It was announced after the meeting that the following nurses were suspended pending further investigation: Edward E. Harmer, head nurse in the alcoholic ward; Joseph R. Rafferty, William I. S. Wilson, H. E. Newcomber, John D. Frederick, and E. J. McCracken.

Regarding these suspensions Commissioner Keller said:

"These nurses were in charge of the alcoholic ward during the occupancy of patients whom I have found, and who have testified to ill-treatment while in that ward. I have suspended them pending the action of the Mills Training School, which means that, for the sake of discipline of the Mills Training School, it is better that the school should first act in the matter."

After Commissioner Keller read the report of his agents, upon arriving at his office, in answer to a question he said:

"The nature of the evidence brought to me discloses a shocking condition of affairs. The nature of the abuses in the alcoholic ward and the insane pavilion disclose a sheer barbarism of heart, a brutality that is shocking, utter disregard for feelings, rough usage, abusive language to the inmates, negligence in nursing, and extreme physical violence."

Until last October, the Commissioner said, the insane pavilion was under the charge of a graduate nurse named Hodges.

"Since that time, it appears from the evidence I have gathered," continued Commissioner Keller, "that the abuses in these two wards that were carried on during Hodges's administration were far worse than the ones now existing. I shall from now on place Dr. Louis Schultz, my Medical Inspector in the Charities Department, in full charge these wards, and be my personal representative, for I am determined that these abuses shall cease.

"When I commenced this investigation it was with the determination to get all the evidence obtainable, but I never expected to get such a mass of evidence, and of such an alarming nature, as that I have already received. I am satisfied that there is a form of brutality which prevails in the alcoholic ward. I am convinced equally that unnecessary physical violence has been the custom rather than the exception.

"I shall take pains to put an end to these abuses. I will employ drastic measures. I mean now to expel every nurse in the alcoholic ward, six in number.

"As soon as my plans for reforming the abuses, they are not yet complete, but, brief, there will be a complete change in the system of control, responsibility, and inspection.

"I was not prepared to believe that there could be so much foundation for the charges made by men whom I considered prejudiced and incompetent. But when even such evidence is preponderant, no doubt can remain.

"As to the Mills Training School, I consider it an ideal institution. It is under the immediate charge of a board of eminent physicians who serve without pay. When a young man wishes to enter the school he must be provided with letters of recommendation from a physician, two reputable citizens, and a clergyman. The applicant is then taken in on probation for one month. The nurses are all seemingly respectable and intelligent, and it seemed impossible to believe the charges against them."

Dr. Louis Schultz, General Medical Inspector of the Department of Charities, took charge of the post to which he was appointed yesterday. The Commissioner also appointed as permanent head nurse to take charge of the insane pavilion, Reuben J. D. Wright, a graduate of the City Training School on Blackwell's Island. He has had long experience with the insane in the State Asylum of Iowa and at Bloomingdale.

BERLIN BANKER ARRESTED.

POTSDAM, Dec. 20.—Councilor of Commerce Sanden, recently a Director of the Prussian Hypotheken Aktien Bank, was arrested this morning and confined in the Moabit Prison.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—No surprise has been excited by the arrest of Herr Sanden. Indeed, astonishment is expressed that it was not made earlier.

Sanden has used his wealth in building churches, hoping to secure titles and decorations. The Berliner Tagebiatt asserts that he was intimate with Count von Mirbach, Court Marshal of the Empress, who has raised large sums to build churches in Berlin, and that he contributed 200,000 marks in shares of the Deutsche Grundschuld Bank, with the proviso that they were not to be sold. According to the Tageblatt their value is now about 15,000 marks. The paper adds that Count von Mirbach intended to have Sanden ennobled and created a Privy Councilor.

Since the mortgage bank troubles began, Sanden has received a Crown order for building a church. For many years he was an Alderman and Church Councilman in Potsdam.

Herr Schmidt, proprietor of the banking house of Anhalt & Wagener, which is in difficulties owing to its connection with the two embarrassed mortgage banks, is a member of the Central Committee of the Reichshank, and is expected to resign to-morrow.

MR. GAGE AT ELLIS ISLAND.

Secretary of the Treasury Lyman T. Gage, Assistant Secretary Horace A. Taylor, and Commissioner General of Immigration T. V. Powderly inspected the new Ellis Island immigration station yesterday. After the buildings had been examined by the officials, Secretary Gage, in reply to an address of welcome by Commissioner Fitchie, congratulated the department on the completion of the new station, which he declared to be a model of its kind. The destruction of the old station, he said, was a blessing.

After the speechmaking an informal luncheon was served in honor of the visitors.

New Branch for the Central.

The New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company yesterday closed a contract with the Pennsylvania Construction Company for the building of a line fifty-five miles long, which will connect Clearfield, Penn., on the New York Central, with Keating, Penn., on the Pennsylvania Railroad. The new line, on which work will be commenced within one week, is to be ready for traffic on Jan. 1, 1902.

Fruit and Flower Guild.

All through this week the rooms of the Fruit and Flower Guild, at the Seamen's Institute, at 241 West Street, will be open for the reception of Christmas contributions. Evergreen roping, ground pine, and laurel are desired for decorations, and palms and other foliage, as well as money for current expenses, are requested.

TENEMENT HOUSE FIRES

Hugh Bonner Helps to Prepare a Report on the Subject.

Figures Throw Much Light on the Causes of Fires and Manner in Which They Spread.

Tenement house fires in Greater New York have been made the subject of an exhaustive special report issued in pamphlet form by the New York Tenement House Commission. The report, consisting of twenty-five pages with tables, was prepared by ex-Chief Hugh Bonner of the New York Fire Department and Lawrence Veiller, Secretary of the Tenement House Commission. It covers a period of two and a half years from Jan. 1, 1898, to June 30 of the present year. The tables and comparisons are made up from the records of the municipal Fire Department supplements, by personal observations and investigations made by Messrs. Bonner and Veiller, and the whole report, while presenting facts and not impressions, constitutes a story of intense interest to the public-spirited reader.

The report shows, in the first place, that during the past twelve months 41 persons have been burned to death in tenement houses in this city and 34 persons have been more or less seriously injured, the number of deaths caused in this way in this one year being one-fourth of all the deaths occasioned by such cause in eleven years. According to the report, 47 per cent. of all the fires in the city occur in tenement houses, although these buildings are only 37 per cent. of all the buildings in the city.

In order to ascertain how tehement houses should be constructed, so as to minimize the danger of fires, the compilers of the report have examined over 60,000 records in the Fire Department, covering the period of two and a half years, and upon this basis have prepared a table dealing with the 7,943 fires which have occurred in tenement houses during that period, showing the origin, extent, and course of each fire. It appears from a study of these statistics that of these 7,943 tenement house fires, 7,614 were confined to the point of starting, while 329 extended through the building; that is, 4 per cent. of these fires were serious in their consequences.

Of the 329 fires which extended through the building, seventy-six, or 26 per cent., spread by means of the light shafts; twenty-nine, or 10 per cent., through the dumbwaiter and elevator shaft; fifty-nine of them, or 20 per cent., through the halls and stairs; fourteen, or 5 per cent., through the light shaft combined with the halls and stairs; seventy, or 24 per cent., through the flooring or partitions; fourteen, or 5 per cent., through the spaces around pipes; sixteen, or 5 per cent., through windows outside the building, and eighteen, or 6 per cent., in other various ways. That is, approximately speaking, one-fourth of all the fires went through the light shafts, and one-fifth through the halls and stairs, while another fourth spread by means of the partitions and floorings. It becomes evident, therefore, that the small, narrow light shaft, serving as a flue, is a source of the greatest danger in buildings of this kind, and from the point of view of fire, as well as from the sanitary point of view, the construction of such shafts in future tehement houses should be absolutely prohibited.

Another interesting table in the report is that relating to the cause of fires in tenements. The table is made up from the records of one month, during which 240 tenement fires occurred. The careless use of matches heads the list with 13 per cent. "Coal and furniture too near the stove!" comes next, with 9 per cent. Then comes the careless use of candles, with 8 per cent. Next in the order named come gas explosions, cellar rubbish igniting, kerosene lamp explosions, foul chimneys, fire crackers, gas jets, fat boiling over, and sparks from locomotives.

It appears from the study of another table in the report dealing with the origin of such fires that during the period from Jan. 1 to July 1, 1900, there occurred 1,619 tenement house fires in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, and that of this number, 869, or 52 per cent., originated in the rooms of the tenants, that 405, or 25 per cent., originated in the cellars; that only 153, or 10 per cent., originated in stores on the first floor of the building, and that but 54, or 8 per cent., originated in the hallways.

Another table is presented showing the number of fires in tenement houses and also in other classes of buildings, as compared with the actual number of buildings in Manhattan and the Bronx. From this table, which comprises the records for 1899, it appears that while 52 per cent. of all the fires in the boroughs occurred in tenement houses, yet only 37 per cent. of all the buildings in these boroughs are tenements. These facts assume special significance when it is considered that while 42 per cent. of all the buildings in the city are dwelling houses, or houses occupied by less than three families, yet only 14 per cent. of the fires occur in such buildings.

The compilers give the comparative results of some personal examinations of tenements, fire-proof and otherwise, which have been visited by fire recently, and these results speak for themselves. The report closes with the conclusion that no tenement should be erected in the future unless fire-proof throughout.

GEN. GREENE'S SUCCESSOR.

Republican County Committee Elects James W. Perry Temporary Chairman.

The problem that is disturbing the Republican Party is the selection of a successor to Gen. Francis V. Greene as President of the Republican County Committee. Gen. Greene will not accept a re-election under any circumstances.

William H. Ten Eyck, Chairman of the Executive Committee, declares he will not take the place. He says the man who occupies it should have abundant financial means and plenty of time, and he says he has neither. William Brookfield is persistently urged by many, but he declares he cannot accept it.

There is an almost unanimous demand among the members of the Executive Committee for the recall of Lemuel E. Quigg, but he is in poor health and will not accept. Others talked about are George W. Wanmaker, Abraham Gruber, ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott, Charles A. Hess, Alexander T. Mason, James Yereance, James W. Perry, and Charles H. Murray, but all of them declare they do not see their way to accepting the position.

The Republican County Committee met last night at the Murray Hill Lyceum on East Thirty-fourth Street. Gen. Greene made a few remarks, in the course of which he said:

"I regret sincerely that circumstances compel me to sever the very pleasant relations that have existed between this members of the committee and myself. But I shall always remember with a great deal of pleasure the confidence and esteem with which you regarded me."

Gen. Greene then announced that the selection of a temporary Chairman was in order, and Capt. F. Norton Goddard presented the name of James W. Perry of the Twenty-seventh District. George W. Wanmaker seconded the nomination. Mr. Perry was elected, and in taking the chair said:

"Gentlemen: The Republican County Committee of 1901 has a great duty to perform. The coming campaign will be one of the most important and eventful in the history of the party. There must be unity of action along the line outside of Tammany Hall. If we can select so good a leader as Gen. Greene, we will have reason to be thankful."

George R. Manchester was elected temporary Secretary.

Then on motion of William H. Ten Eyck a recess was taken until next Thursday.

DEATH AFTER TARANTULA BITE

William C. Gifting Has Succumbed to Blood Poisoning.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 20.—William C. Gifting of New Rochelle died on Tuesday, in his fifty-second year. Two years ago he was stung by a tarantula. He had never been a well man since. Mr. Gifting frequently told his friends that he thought the bite of the insect had ruined his health. Dr. Samuel Beyea, who attended the dying man, said to-night that death was caused by blood poisoning. The family refuse to believe that this was the real cause of death.

Mr. Gifting was the general agent of a large wholesale paint concern in New York. While traveling in the South two years ago he visited the orange groves of Florida, and in plucking fruit he was stung on the hand by a tarantula, which was concealed between the leaves.

Mr. Gifting was President of the Third Ward Republican Club and a leading member of the Presbyterian Church of New Rochelle. He leaves a wife and several children.

LEWIS A. MAY & CO. FAIL

Brokerage Firm's Liabilities Between $60,000 and $75,000.

Removal of Ticker by Stock Exchange Said to Have Led to a Run on the Concern.

Lewis A. May & Co., members of the New York Consolidated and Produce Exchanges, made an assignment yesterday for the benefit of their creditors to William King Hale of 87 Nassau Street. Liabilities are estimated at between $60,000 and $75,000, with the assets yet to be determined upon. The firm, which had two offices in this city and offices also in Boston, Hartford, Providence, Philadelphia, and Newark, was formed in August, 1898, and consisted of Lewis A. May and Eugene F. Enslen of Birmingham, Ala. Mr. Enslen, it is said, is a cashier in a National bank in that city, and is understood not to have kept in close touch with the business of the company, because of his other affairs. Mr. May was the active head of the house, and his name alone appeared on the assignment.

Announcement of the suspension came more or less as a surprise to the members of the Consolidated Exchange, by reason of the fact that the firm—advertising extensively and being bullish on the market—had been credited with doing a large and profitable business. Yesterday, in fact, after announcement of the suspension, about 1,000 shares of stock were closed out "under the rule" on the Consolidated Exchange, being about evenly divided for the long and short account.

Explanation for the failure is, according to a clerk in the establishment—for Mr. May was not to be seen—found in the fact that ever since the removal from the firm's offices, on Nov. 30, of the Stock Exchange ticker, done under order of the Stock Exchange governors, a feeling of distrust sprang up on the part of the customers of the firm, with the result that withdrawals of deposits began to be the order. As to what these totalled reports differ, one of the clerks declaring that about $75,000 had been paid out in the last three weeks, while Mr. May himself was quoted as saying that the amount was about $225,000. In any event, the "run" continued, and, in the end, so it is declared, forced the assignment.

The firm's downtown office, at 33 Broadway, occupied the entire second floor of the building and was fitted up in excellent style. Formerly a "ladies' department" was conducted there, but later it was transferred to the uptown office, at Broadway and Twenty-eighth Street.

Discussing the assignment, Assignee Hall said yesterday:

"While I have no exact information on the subject, I do not believe the liabilities will run up to more than from $60,000 to $75,000. The firm has lately paid out quite a lot of money, and thus has liquidated a large part of its indebtedness. As for the assets, I cannot say what they will be until I have had the books and examined them thoroughly. I may be able to make a statement in a few days."

Overton Paine was formerly a member of the firm, but withdrew over a year ago. Mr. May, who lives in Harlem, at 122 Manhattan Avenue, is a Southerner, having been born, it is understood, in Alabama.

Officials of the Consolidated Exchange state that, so far as they are aware, the defunct firm has always conducted a regular and perfectly conducted brokerage business, and that no complaints have ever been made against the firm.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Dec. 20.—The local office of Lewis A. May & Co. of the New York Consolidated Exchange, who assigned to-day, was closed at noon. It was in the Betz Building, on Broad Street. The local business was not large, and the liabilities in this city are believed to be small. The office here had been deprived of its ticker.

THE VADERLAND'S ROUGH TRIP.

The Vaderland, the new twin-screw liner of the Red Star service of the International Navigation Company, arrived in port at the end of her maiden passage across the Atlantic yesterday. The voyage was an extremely rough one, affording an excellent opportunity to test the sea-going qualities of the new ship. According to the officers, she stood the trial perfectly; proving, they declared, her right to be classed as one of the best vessels afloat.

The new liner is luxuriously furnished. The first-class staterooms are amidships of the saloon deck and the upper deck, the former accommodating 100 and the latter 204 persons.

The cargo capacity of the Vaderland is 11,000 tons. She is 580 feet in length, 60 feet in breadth, and 42 feet in depth, with a gross tonnage of 12,000. She was built at the yards of John Brown & Co., Limited, at Clyde Bank, Glasgow, and is a sister ship of the Zeeland, which is now nearing completion.

FAILS FOR $1,200,000.

George Campbell of Philadelphia Makes an Assignment.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—An assignment for the benefit of creditors was made to-day by George Campbell individually, and trading as George Campbell & Co., to James Pollock. It has not yet been recorded. Ex-District Attorney Graham, who represents the assignee, when questioned with reference to the assignment this afternoon said:

"This is not a failure in the ordinary sense of the word. Mr. Campbell's notes could not be renewed, and this course was adopted simply as a method of liquidation, and it is expected that dollar for dollar will be paid. This assignment does not include the Dingley mills, in which Mr. Campbell is interested."

Mr. Campbell was the proprietor of the Continental Worsted Mills and various other mills and warehouses. He was a large operator in spinning worsted yarns. His present difficulties are said to have arisen from the publication of the rejection by the Government of certain invoices of blankets, which affected his credit, and the renewal of loans made upon his own paper by banks and others. It is estimated that the assets amount to nearly $2,000,000, and the liabilities to $1,200,000.

BRYAN ON CLEVELAND'S VIEWS.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 20.—W. J. Bryan, in a telegram to-day to The Atlanta Journal, makes the following comment on ex-President Cleveland's article which appeared to-day:

"Until Mr. Cleveland sets forth definitely what he considers Democratic principles there is no necessity for comment. The rank and file of the party expressed themselves in 1896 and in 1900, and I have no doubt they will continue to express themselves on issues as they arise."

SHE KISSED A POLICEMAN.

Miss Donnelly Shocked John Dust, and the Experience Cost Her $3.

For kissing Policeman John Dust of the Oak Street Station, while the latter was patrolling his Chatham Square post Wednesday night, Jennie Donnelly, who claims to be an attendant of an actress, living at 46 East Thirty-ninth Street, paid $3 in the Centre Street Court yesterday.

Dust was standing in the New Bowery late in the evening when a trim figure, elegantly gowned, darted out of the semi-obscurity, and before the policeman could dodge, had secured a half-Nelson around his neck and implanted a fervid caress directly upon his mustache. The policeman's yell of terror was stifled by another kiss.

"Oh, Charlie, my Charlie, don't you love me any more?" gurgled the young woman.

"Ah, gwan. You're clean daf," sputtered the officer, waving his hands wildly until more kisses stopped further utterance. Chatham Square loungers who congregate at the first breath of excitement began to appreciate the scene. They gathered in number and made remarks.

"You naughty cop," said a blasé "gent" with a cigarette.

MERCY SHOWN TO MUSHER

Convicted of Forgery, He Is Sent to the Reformatory.

His Operations on the East Side—Striking Incidents in His Case—Appeals for Clemency.

Nathan Musher, note broker, whose remarkable financial career on the east side culminated in his conviction of forgery Friday, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Newburger to the Elmira Reformatory, where, by good behavior, his term of detention will reach only fourteen months. The maximum penalty for forgery in the second degree is five years in the penitentiary. Musher was charged by Isaac Blumberg with swindling him out of $70,000.

Musher's commitment to the reformatory was the latest unexpected development in a trial which for two weeks has daily produced more or less sensational testimony or occurrences. Musher was specifically charged with forging Solomon Finburg's signature and Moe Levy's indorsement to a promissory note for $2,000. During the past three years his note shaving operations have amounted, it transpired at the trial, to more than $250,000.

One of the State's principal witnesses, Isaac Blumberg, testified that he, Musher, and Finburg were associated in the note-shaving business, and that when Musher suddenly left for Europe he was $70,000 ahead of the combination. Blumberg sent his lawyer, Abraham Pincus, to London to try and effect a settlement with Musher before he was extradited, and from this moment began the unusual events which have marked the whole history of the case.

Musher was indicted on the 13th of March last. He was arrested on the same day. Detective Sullivan brought him back to New York, and Pincus, who went away as Blumberg's lawyer, appeared in General Sessions, on May 9, as Musher's counsel. He was charged with forging the Finburg note. The note was attached to the indictment papers, and after the arraignment it disappeared.

Mr. Blumberg, on the witness stand, told a story of a conversation he said he had held with Musher in the Tombs when Musher, he declared, asserted that he had given Pincus $2,000 to secure the abstraction of the note from the District Attorney's office, and that Pincus had done so by means of his friendship with Assistant District Attorney O'Reilly. Mr. O'Reilly indignantly denied the story, as did Musher. The note has never been found.

Pincus, on the stand, was closely questioned by Judge Newburger as to his license to practice law, and his answers being unsatisfactory, the Judge ordered his testimony sent to the Bar Association for action.

Blumberg also testified that Musher had said that he was in partnership with a Wall Street business man, whom Blumberg identified as A. L. Drummond, and a prominent Government official, by means of whom goods were imported into the United States free of duties. Mr. Drummond emphatically denied this story.

Judge Goldfogle, in summing up, attacked the evidence of the handwriting expert, Kinsley, who had said that Musher executed the body of two checks which Blumberg swore that he wrote. Musher was found guilty and remanded until yesterday for sentence. Judge Newburger had in the past few days received innumerable letters appealing for clemency for Musher, as an aged father, a sick wife, and two small children, utterly penniless, were dependent upon him for support. In pronouncing sentence, Judge Newburger said:

"This is one of the most remarkable cases that has ever come before me. From the evidence the verdict was correct. The remarkable thing about the case is that you, Musher, should display such knowledge as to checks and notes. Had this knowledge been properly directed, you would now be a shining light in the community. Instead you are a convicted forger. I shall send you to the Elmira Reformatory, where by observance of the rules you will be able to get out in about fourteen months and have another chance."

East siders of all ages have been constant is their attendance at the trial. They have followed the evidence attentively, and since Musher's conviction have been active in securing appeals for clemency.

SAVED WIFE AND CHILDREN.

Johnson Searched His Burning House for Them, and Carried Them to Safety.

Fire discovered in the basement of the residence of Charles S. Johnson at 482 West Twety-fourth Street early yesterday morning drove the family, clad in scanty attire, to the street and damaged the house to the extent of $500. The heroism of Johnson, who repeatedly ran into the flame and smoke, saved his wife and two children from death. Mrs. Johnson slept on the first floor with her seven-year-old daughter Florence and her four-months-old baby. Johnson and his six-year-old son occupied the bedroom on the second floor.

About 2 o'clock yesterday morning the son was awakened by the smell of smoke and aroused the father, who ran down stairs, to find the basement in flames. He ran upstairs and awakened his wife and the servant girl and told them to take the children and run to the street. He then ran to the second floor and told his son to follow him. The father and son reached the street in safety, where they found that Mrs. Johnson, in her terror, had taken her children up stairs instead of out into the street.

Johnson dashed back into the house, now filled with flame and smoke, and began a frantic search. He went through the down stairs rooms and then up stairs. H epicked his wife and infant up in his arms and started down with them. At the foot of the stairs he met two policemen, to whom he gave his wife and baby and then ran back up stairs in search of his little daughter. He reached the street finally with the child in his arms and fell to the ground, overcome by smoke.

In the meantime the firemen had arrived and had little difficulty in subduing the flames.

ASKS PERMIT TO JUMP IN RIVER.

Significance of Peddler's Request Had to be Explained to Mr. Clausen.

A delegation of thirty-seven women and about an equal number of men from the east side waited on President Clausen of the Park Department yesterday morning and asked that permits he given them to peddle wares on the sidewalks and on the grounds of the William H. Seward Park. The President told them it was impossible for him or the Park Board to grant such permits. Then a Polish peddler spoke up: "Maybe the President can give us a permit to jump into the river," he said.

"Ha, ha! Good," said the President, who took this as a bit of pleasantry. "Very good, indeed." Then, turning to Mr. Moebus, he remarked in an aside that it would be a very good thing to issue permits in the summer time for the residents of the lower east side to jump into the East River occasionally as a sanitary precaution.

It was pointed out to him, however, by friends of the man who had made the remark that he meant that if the persons were not allowed to peddle they might as well jump into the river and end their existence, as they had no other means of earning a livelihood.

On getting this construction put upon the remark, the President expressed his sympathy for those present, and explained how it was impossible for him to grant permits for peddling on the sidewalk around the park. The delegation went sorrowfully away.

Red Cross Honors Mr. Villard's Memory

At a meeting of the Women's Branch of the Red Cross Association of Bavaria, which was held in Munich on Dec. 6, the whole assembly was requested to rise in honor of the memory of Henry Villard and to give expression to the society's sorrow at his death, which occurred on Nov. 12 in this city. The Secretary General of the association, Major Gen. Speck, was ordered to transmit this part of the record to the newspapers of this city.

Ice Plant Damaged by Fire.

The building of the Long Island Hygeia and Cold Storage Company, at the corner of West Avenue and Sixth Street, Long Island City, caught fire yesterday morning. The whole building had to be flooded before the fire was extinguished. The loss is estimated at $6,500, fully insured.

THOUGHT TROUSERS TOO TIGHT

Roemer Posed in Various Attitudes Before Magistrate, Who Decided Against Him.

In the case of Buxbaum vs. Roemer, fought out yesterday in the Harlem Police Court, the attentive spectators learned through an object lesson that, after all, the fit of a pair of trousers is a matter of individual opinion.

Herman Buxbaum, the complainant, is a tailor of 1,407 Fifth Avenue. He told Magistrate Brann that a few days ago he was commissioned by Nathan Roemer, a photographer of 150 Lenox Avenue, to construct a pair of trousers. He finally sent the completed garment to Roemer's place by a boy, with a bill, to be delivered C. O. D. Roemer, he said, took the trousers and threw the boy out of the place.

Roemer, who was in court, explained to the Magistrate that the reason he did not pay was that the trousers did not fit him. He said he had ordered them made loose and flowing, and that they were so tight that after he had inserted himself into them with the greatest difficulty he could scarcely breathe. After wearing the trousers fifteen minutes he said he became afflicted with a partial paralysis of the lower limbs, caused by the obstructed circulation of the blood. He dared not move about freely in public with the Buxbaum trousers on, he maintained, as he feared that the garment could not stand the strain.

The Magistrate ordered the defendant to go into a side room and try on the trousers and appointed Lawyer Meyer S. Schloss, who before becoming a lawyer was a tailor, to pass judgment on the fit. This expert reported that the trousers were very tight, so tight in fact that Roemer appeared as if he had been melted and run into them. The Magistrate ordered Roemer to appear before him in the trousers.

The Court then, fixing a critical eye upon him, ordered him to sit down, which he did with much difficulty, while the audience stood up excitedly. Then the perspiring Roemer was ordered to bend over and pose in various attitudes to ascertain whether the trousers would stand the strain. The Magistrate finally pronounced the trousers all right and ordered Roemer to pay for them. Roemer did so and asked Buxbaum to wait for him on the sidewalk. Buxbaum refused.

A PROCESS SERVER'S NERVE.

Report that Person He Was Looking for Had Smallpox Did Not Frighten Him.

There is one young process server in New York who is not afraid of smallpox. The story of his experience with that disease is told in the papers on file in the City Court, in which Dr. Wellslake D. Morse sues Miss Marie Rose Penfield, said to be a relative of President McKinley, for a dental bill amounting to $197.85. The dentist obtained judgment by default.

The dentist placed the case in the hands of Lawyer B. W. B. Brown, and he started an action in the Municipal Court. Miss Penfield is the daughter of Frank H. Penfield of Cleveland, Ohio, who is said to be wealthy. She has been living in this city with her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Penfield Pierson, at 123 West Eighty-ninth Street. The lawyer could not get service on her in the action in the Municipal Court, so he started a new action in the City Court. All efforts failed as far as serving her with the summons and complaints were concerned. Finally Mr. Brown engaged Meyer Phillips, a young process server. In his affidavit Phillips says that the fourth time he went to the house a servant reported that Miss Penfield was ill.

"I must see her," replied Phillips.

"Well, she has the smallpox, and if you want to take the chance of getting the disease you can go to her room," said the servant.

"All right," said Phillips, and up stairs he went. He found Miss Penfield in her room, and served the papers. As yet he has not shown any signs of having smallpox, and the case of Miss Penfield has not been reported to the Health Department.

TRAMP "SASSED" THE COURT.

Wanted to Wager Keg of Beer He Could Beat the Magistrate at Swimming.

An almost oppressive atmosphere of sombre dignity and decorum pervaded the precincts of the Essex Market Police Court yesterday morning when John Fitzgerald, no home, sauntered in, accompanied by an officer of the law, and was arraigned at the bar on a charge of vagrancy. Fitzgerald's morning coat was tightly fastened by means of nails used in lieu of buttons, and glistened in the single shaft of sunlight that stabbed the mellow gloom of the courtroom through the window. Over his low-quartered congress gaiters, which were sadly the worse for wear, he wore a pair of rather dusty spats, while with a jaunty air he deftly removed a somewhat ancient and discouraged pair of gloves and bowed pleasantly to the Court.

"Six months in the workhouse," said his Honor dismally.

"Bah," said the genial Fitzgerald. "That's nothing. I'll swim from the Island."

"No fear of that," said the Court. "You are afraid of water."

"I'll bet you a keg of beer I can beat you swimming," replied Fitzgerald, while the court attendants drew back horror-stricken at this reckless familiarity with the Court.

"That is your misfortune," said the Magistrate. "You have been swimming in beer too long."

"Well, ta-ta, Judge," sang out Fitzgerald gehially, as he was led away. "Meet you next Summer at the racetrack."

TO DISBAND A BATTERY.

Col. Austen, 13th Heavy Artillery, Calls for Capt. Barker's Resignation.

Trouble in Battery M, Thirteenth Regiment, Heavy Artillery, of Brooklyn, has reached such a stage that Col. David E. Austen, commanding the organization, has asked for the resignation of Capt. Barker. The latter places the responsibility on one of his subordinates, Sergt. Roser, and has filed charges against him of disrespect to his superior officer and conduct prejudicial to discipline.

Col. Austen, it is understood, plans the disbanding of the battery, and has arranged to recruit another to take its place.

JEWELRY ROBBER CAUGHT.

John Murphy, an ex-Convict, Taken with Part of the Booty.

Central Office detectives yesterday morning arraigned in the Yorkville Court John Murphy, twenty-eight years old, of 143 Allen Street, who, it is claimed, is one of the men who brutally attacked and robbed a number of east side jewelers last week. Murphy is known to the police, and when the description of the robbers came to Capt. Titus he at once began a search for him.

The detectives found him Wednesday night on the Bowery. When arrested he had two watches in his pockets, which have been identified as having been taken from the store of Julius Risner, at 569 Second Avenue, on Dec. 14. Murphy is an ex-convict.

Local Receiver for Chosen Friends.

Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court, yesterday appointed Jaques H. Herts as receiver for the Order of Chosen Friends, the assessment insurance society which failed recently. There is already a receiver appointed in Indiana, where the headquarters of the organization are located. The appointment yesterday was on the application of Emmanuel Popper, who asserted that he had a claim of $1,000 against the organization due on a policy on the life of his wife, Henrietta, and payment had been refused. He claimed that the Indiana receiver proposed to attach all money in this State, and that at present the order had $7,000 in the National Park Bank.

Col. Cody in Town.

Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," arrived in the city yesterday from his ranch, in the Big Horn Basin, Wyoming, and is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter, who is attending school in this city. He will remain in the city for some time.

Death of Man Shot by a Detective.

James McMullen, who was shot in the head last Sunday morning by Timothy Desmond, a detective of the Fifth Avenue Precinct, Brooklyn, died early yesterday morning at the Norwegian Hospital. Desmond is in Raymond Street Jail, and will be arraigned on a charge of homicide to-day.

HE COURTED MANY WIDOWS

Twenty Women Are Looking for Man Who Deceived Them.

Made Wills in Their Favor and Then Borrowed Various Sums of Money from Them.

Nearly a score of New York widows are looking for a man who they say promised to marry them. As a guarantee of good faith he made wills in favor of each. Breach of promise suits and actions to recover money loaned threaten to swamp the courts for some time to come if he is found. The widows were not the only victims of the enterprising speculator in love and collateral, as a number of lawyers have tales to tell of hours spent in drawing up wills, marriage settlements, and other legal papers. One lawyer, H. M. Gescheidt, has six cases on hand and knows of numerous others.

The man was known variously as Saulman, Worth, Weiner, Baxter, Jacobson, and Schölmann. His method was to insert an advertisement saying that he was lonely and in ill-health and would like to have a wife to cheer him up. He stated that he was not anxious to obtain a wife who was wealthy.

It was as Anton Schölmann that Mr. Gescheidt claims to have met the man. Mrs. Matilda Kloke of 322 Stockton Street, Brooklyn, is a client of the lawyer's, and she met Schölmann. He proposed marriage, and incidentally mentioned that he would straightway draw a will in favor of his intended wife. Mrs. Kloke sent him to Mr. Gescheidt's office, and the will was drawn. In the document the testator gave $8,000 to two secret societies. Then he provided a fund of $3,000 to be held for five years in case any relatives should turn up. The two daughters of Mrs. Kloke each were to get $3,000. Mrs. Kloke was also liberally provided for, as she was to get one-half of the testator's property. He told the lawyer he was worth $69,500 in real estate and mortgages.

Mr. Gescheidt and Carl Wittmann of Henry Bischoff & Co., bankers, were named as executors of the will. Mrs. Kloke claims to have loaned him money, so her lawyer sued and got judgment by default. It was after this that other widows began to appear. Mr. Wittmann knew little of the man; in fact, he had an experience with him almost similar to that of Mr. Gescheidt.

The man had called on him at the bank one day last August, and wanted a will drawn. He had a woman with him. Instead of naming the woman with him as beneficiary under the will, he provided that the residue of his estate "shall go to my wife, if I have one." Nothing more was heard of him by Mr. Wittmann until he was visited by Mr. Gescheidt, who told him about the second will.

Meanwhile the man had been sued in a breach-of-promise action by another widow, and Lawyer Charles J. Gerlich was retained to defend him. He is still waiting for his fee. He was sickly and consumptive-looking, and told the women he met that he did not have long to live. After he had executed his wills he would begin a systematic plan of borrowing money from the widows. He would take anything, from 50 cents upon the plea that his interest was not due and he was out of cash. One woman loaned him $1,200 and others $500 or $600.

Mrs. Maria Koch loaned him $350, a Mrs. Hantz, living in East Fifth Street gave him her own and her dead husband's rings, and Mrs. Kloke loaned him a substantial sum. Mr. Gescheidt would not give out a complete list of the women who had lost money by the man.

For a long time the man had apartments in East Eighty-fourth Street and it was from there he would write to the widows and others he was arranging to marry. After the legal proceedings he removed from the Eighty-fourth Street house, and just now his whereabouts are not known.

"He promised to marry at least twenty women," said Mr. Gescheidt yesterday, "and they are all for him. I believe he has been carrying on this scheme for many years, as the descriptions of the men of the various names I have found all answer to his description, and their methods tally with his."

WITNESS ACCUSES LAWYER.

Says He Received $25 to Stay Away from Court.

Lawyer Leonard A. Snitkin of 302 Broadway was accused by Charles Kein of 9 Suffolk Street, on the witness stand yesterday, in General Sessions, with giving him $25 to stay away from the courtroom.

Kein was a witness in the case of Louis and Samuel Schwartz, indicted jointly for grand larceny. Kein is employed by Jacob Auerback of 9 Suffolk Street, who alleged that the Schwartzes had stolen $350 worth of goods from his store.

Kein, after being sworn, said that yesterday afternoon he met Snitkin in the corridor of the Criminal Court Building, and that the latter offered him $25 to stay away from the trial. He accepted the money, although he declared he had no intention of keeping away. When asked if he had the money with him, he said that he had.

The jury acquitted both defendants, and Judge Newburger directed Assistant Attorney Hermmann to have a transcript of Kein's testimony taken. Judge Newburger stated that he would have the matter thoroughly investigated, and if the facts warranted it he would bring it to the attention of the Bar Association.

MUST STAY IN THE ASYLUM.

Court Denies Louis I. Feigenbaum's Application for Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Justice Blanchard yesterday denied the application for a writ of habeas corpus made by friends of Louis I. Feigenbaum for his release from the Manhattan State Asylum for the Insane. Mr. Feigenbaum was formerly chief bookkeeper for the firm of I. & S. Wormser. For a while he was in an asylum, and then obtained his release and went to San Francisco. On his return recently his wife had him recommitted.

His release was asked for on the grounds that the insanity law was unconstitutional. Justice Blanchard held that a Justice sitting in Special Term should not declare an act of the Legislature unconstitutional unless it was in a very clear case.

Hurt by Natural Gas Explosions.

BEAVER FALLS, Penn., Dec. 20.—Three houses were wrecked and seven persons injured by two natural gas explosions here to-day. The first explosion occurred about 6 o'clock in the house of Frank Barns. The gas had accumulated in the cellar and lower part of the house. The explosion was followed by fire, which spread to the adjoining dwelling, and both were consumed, the occupants barely escaping with their lives. An hour later the residence of H. A. Moore, just across the street from Barns's, was torn to pieces by a terrific explosion. The inmates were slightly burned, but not seriously. The explosions were caused by the breaking of a valve gate of the Fort Pitt Gas Line.

Negro Murderer Lynched.

GULF PORT, Miss., Dec. 20.—Lewis, a young negro who last night shot and killed Marshal W. E. Richardson, was captured this afternoon eight miles from town. A mob which had followed the bloodhounds used to track the murderer immediately took Lewis from the officers, dragged him back to town, and hanged him to a tree near the scene of his crime. Lewis's father was also captured, but probably will not be lynched. Early last evening Marshal Richardson was expostulating with a negro who was demanding the arrest of a white boy for some trivial affair. Suddenly Lewis drew a pistol and fired at the Marshal, killing him instantly.

Fifth Avenue Crossing Dangerous.

President Guggenheimer of the Municipal Council wrote a letter to Chief Devery yesterday complaining of the traffic conditions at Thirty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. He asks Chief Devery to station policemen there to protect women and children who have to cross the thoroughfares through a maze of motor vehicles, delivery wagons, stages, and bicycles.

Convict Pardoned for Christmas.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The President has pardoned William H. Huntley, Postmaster at Pomeroy, Ohio, who was convicted and sentenced in June last to eight months in the county jail for embezzling money-order funds. The pardon will take effect Dec. 24.

JUSTUS SCHWAB MOURNED

Anarchists Forget Their Differences at His Funeral.

The Tribute of John Swinton—Most in Tears—Emma Goldman Looks Calmly On.

The disciples of extreme Socialism and Anarchy in this city were assembled in harmony yesterday under one roof. This, it is declared, is without a precedent. The occasion was the funeral of Justus Schwab.

The Anarchists gathered in a dingy hall on East Fourth Street. All differences were forgotten, and there was not a single man or woman who gave evidence of any feeling other than sorrow at the loss of the dead disciple. At times during the speeches which were made over the body almost every one there broke down and wept. Dark, bearded faces that had worn a scowl of discontent for years were softened with grief, and men who had been bitter enemies of Justus Schwab while he was alive cried like children.

Emma Goldman, the woman Anarchist leader, who had been the dead man's closest friend, was the only one present who did not give some indication of emotion. She sat calmly throughout the ceremonies, although John Most, who had been opposed to Schwab for years, gave way completely to his grief several times.

The funeral services were held in the assembly room of the Labor Lyceum at 64 East Fourth Street. The body was taken from the room over the saloon at 50 First Street, where Schwab had lived, early in the day and placed on a bier in the middle of the assembly room. The coffin was open so that the face of the dead man could be seen, and coffin and bier were draped with flags. The emblem of Anarchy was wrapped around the coffin and thrown over the lower part of it, and flags from various labor unions hung below. There was a pile of flowers that brightened up the dark hall, arranged on a table at one end. There were wreaths from Cigar Makers' Union No. 90, from an Italian Anarchist society, and from the Social Science Club.

The funeral service was marked by the absolute absence of any religious ceremonial, and consisted of speeches by various friends of the dead man. The band of the Carl Sahm Club, which was stationed at one end of the hall, played a dirge that seemed to harmonize with the sombre surroundings, and the Lieber Tafel Singing Society, which the dead Anarchist had founded, sang "Eventide." George Biederkapp, the author of a book of Socialist poems, recited an original poem eulogizing Schwab, entitled, "The Storm Has Passed," and when he had taken his seat almost every one in the room was in tears. Alexander Jonas, a Socialist leader, made a short speech in German and was followed by John Swinton, who spoke in English.

"I am entirely overcome," he said, "when I attempt to speak of our dead brother. I have never known a man so self-sacrificing, so faithful, so noble."

John Most, who had been the leader of the Anarchist faction opposed to Schwab, was the next speaker. He spoke in German and in the most dramatic manner. When he had completed his speech he was evidently exhausted, and sank into a chair as the pall-bearers lifted the coffin and carried it out to the hearse, which was waiting for it.

As the hearse started slowly down Second Avenue, followed by a few carriages, nearly 2,000 people, many of them in tears, fell in line behind it. The procession passed the little saloon where Schwab had lived and then proceeded slowly to the ferry at the foot of East Houston Street. All along the route the windows of the tenements were filled with people. At the ferry the carriages followed the hearse and the Anarchists on foot dispersed quietly. The body was taken to Fresh Pond, L. I., for cremation.

COTTON.—An advance of 12@23 points in yesterday's cotton market was due to no special efforts on the part of the bull faction. Inherent strength and legitimate new bull influences were the real causes for the general improvement in values and for a semi-scare of the bear forces. Aside from some of the old-time leaders, the bull portion of the trade took advantage of the rise to secure profits. On the first call the market was firm, with prices 6@6 points higher. These figures proved to be the lowest of the session, as after the opening persistant demand from the shorts resulted in a steady upward movement throughout the list. European interests, a number of prominent Southern houses, and several well-known floor bulls bought on the advance, chiefly January and March contracts. Private telegrams stated that Southern mills were in possession of good cloth and yarn orders at 5@6c advance; that Fall River cloth conditions were toward better things, and that Manshaping chester was doing a splendid business with the Far East and home buyers at gratifying prices. At the close the market was very steady, with prices net 6@22 points higher. Spot cotton closed quiet and steady, with quotations 1-16c higher on the basis of 10 1-16c for middling uplland and 10 5-16c for middling Gulf; sales, 23 bales. Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: New Orleans firm at 9⅝c, unchanged; Mobile quiet at 9⅛c, unchanged; Savannah firm, 1-16c higher, at 9¼c; Charleston steady, 1-16c lower, at 9 3-16c; Wilmington quiet and unchanged at 9⅜c; Norfolk steady at 9⅝c, unchanged; Baltimore nominal at 10c, unchanged; Augusta steady and 1-16c higher at 9¼c; St. Louis quiet and steady at 9¼c, unchanged.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—Speculative interest in the wheat market yesterday was a little more vigorous than on the previous day, influenced somewhat no doubt by the fact that prices had an upward tendency. At all primary points 719,000 bushels were received, compared with 529,000 bushels last year. Our market closed quite firm at ⅛@ net advances, and Northwest prices also left off near the top. At the immediate opening, and once or twice during the day, bears got the upper hand for a time, but their short selling had to be replaced in each case at a loss. THE NEXT STEPS.

There may be Senators, a few, not many, who are childish enough to believe that the ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty with three amendments that destroy its original character and pervert its purpose has cleared the way for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal. Most Senators know that that is not the case, and there are some who would feel that their time had been wasted and the just expectations of the private interests they represent disappointed if that were the case. The truth is, and it is so plain to the view that no statesman with a capacity for reasoning upon public questions above that of a Mason or a Beveridge could fail to see it, that the adoption of these amendments, instead of removing existing obstructions to the building of the canal, an end which would have been accomplished by the treaty as negotiated, brings us face to face with new difficulties quite beyond our control, and lets loose a Pandora's boxfull of complications and troubles, enough to occupy the attention of our diplomats during the coming century.

As it was received by the Senate, the Hay-Pauncefote treaty made provision for the construction, ownership, regulation, and management of the canal by the United States, including the right of our Government "to maintain such military force along the canal as may be necessary to protect it against lawlessness and disorder." It was to be completely neutral, like the Suez Canal, "free and open in time of war as in time of peace, to vessels of commerce and of war, of all nations, on terms of entire equality." There was to be no exclusion of belligerent vessels, and Senator FORAKER knows very well that they were not to be excluded. Doubtless he was misreported. Complete neutrality excludes nobody. It was to be a part of the open sea, except that there could be no fighting. Fortifications were not to be erected, and no act of war was to be committed in or along the canal, or in its ports of access. In short, the Nicaragua Canal was to be built for commerce, not for guns, forts, and war. The contracting parties agreed to secure, if possible, the adhesion of the other powers to the terms of the convention, which would have been equivalent to a universal agreement that no belligerent or aggressive act should ever be committed by anybody in or near the canal. That would have been at once the cheapest and best defense possible. The treaty preserved and maintained the general principles of neutralization established by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and abrogated only such provisions of that convention as stood in the way of exclusive construction, ownership, and control by the United States.

The Hay-Pauncefote treaty embodied a National policy half a century old, a policy maintained by every Administration, and accepted by the officers of the Government in every official utterance on the subject.

As the treaty goes back from the Senate to the President it contains, first, the Foraker amendment declaring that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty is "superseded" by this convention; that is, entirely abrogated and got out of the way of both countries. Secondly, we have the Davis amendment providing that nothing in the first five sections of the treaty shall forbid the United States to take such measures in respect to the canal "as may be necessary for the defense of the United States." A posthumous publication from the pen of Senator DAVIS says that this was intended to be a copy of Article X. of the Suez Canal neutrality treaty, which gave to Turkey, under strict limitations, the right to take such defensive measures. It is not a copy of Article X. of the Suez treaty, and is in terms and intent totally dissimilar. It was a sop to the advocates of a war canal. Senator LODGE has said that it does not confer the right to erect fortifications. Evidently not, but future Senators will have no trouble in reading, or roaring, that authority into the amendment. The third amendment, altogether vicious, strikes out the agreement to procure the adhesion of other powers to the principle of neutrality.

Now in this changed situation, what are the next steps? First of all, the President, unless he concludes to save his dignity by putting the mangled remains of the treaty in a pigeon-hole, must pass it over to the British Ambassador for his Government to accept or reject. If Great Britain accepts, we may be able to get along with her very amicably as to the building of the canal. But a flood of other questions, settled by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, will be brought at once into the domain of discussion and actuality by the abrogation of that instrument; and they are of the gravest moment.

Shall Great Britain now be free to assume and exercise dominion and plant colonies in Central America? In the Clayton-Bulwer treaty she bound herself not to do that. It is now said that the Monroe doctrine will restrain her. But, if the Monroe doctrine is of that force, why was it necessary to embody an express prohibition in the treaty of 1850? The treaty was law. The doctrine is law only for us, merely doctrine for the others. If they choose to disregard it we must stop them with fleets and armies. With the treaty in force we are free from all concern about attempts to control the destiny of Central American republics. We shall not be free from concern in the future, for at any time a straining of relations may lead to unfriendly demonstrations there. That is a complication created, a dead question made alive, by the amenders.

There is further the question of Nicaragua. We must now make a new treaty with her, and she must make a new treaty with Great Britain before we can begin the canal. In the treaty of 1867 with her "the United States agreed to extend their protection to all such routes of communication as aforesaid, [meaning the canal,] and to guarantee the neutrality and innocent use of the same. They also agree to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such neutrality and protection." All that becomes a dead letter if the amended Hay-Pauncefote treaty is accepted. A new treaty must take the place of the treaty of 1867. But Nicaragua also has a treaty with Great Britain by which she is bound not to grant to the United States or any other power any exclusive privileges in regard to the canal; and Great Britain is bound not to permit such exclusive privileges to be exercised by any power. We must ask these two powers to be good enough to oblige us with a new treaty not containing this offensive restriction upon the exercise of our preference for a war canal of exclusively American make.

There is trouble enough ahead to warrant the fullest confidence on the part of the secret enemies of the canal project, who are the real masters of the Republican Senate, that the ratification of this treaty has not brought the canal enterprise within a measurable distance of its beginning. It has probably made it quite impossible to begin. The Hepburn bill will now be pressed to enactment, but, of course, the Administration will not be so forgetful of decency as to let that brutal and shameless bill become a law.

PLAIN TALK FROM SECRETARY GAGE

The important speech which Mr. GAGE injected into the proceedings of the joyous group of bankers whose guest he was on Wednesday evening ought to influence seriously the opinion of the class to which they and he belong. It was the speech of an optimist undoubtedly, but of an optimist who understands the needless obstacles with which the tremendous energies of the American people have had to contend, and while recognizing their achievements, sees how their labors in the future can be made easier and more fruitful. The more clearly one comprehends these obstacles the more hopeful and confident he will be of the immense advance that will be made possible by their removal.

What Mr. GAGE made very plain was that our currency and banking system prevents us from making full use of the established, legitimate, and safe credit of our banks and of our commercial community. Our currency is very large in volume, but it is rigid and neither its expansion nor its contraction depends on the actual needs of business. The great mass of it consists of Government notes and silver certificates backed with silver dollars. Neither of these kinds of currency can be expanded a dollar in response to legitimate requirements, nor can they be contracted as the legitimate requirements diminish. They can be changed in volume only by the accidental payments into or out from the Treasury, and these payments are determined by the revenues and expenditures of the Government, directed by Congress with no reference whatever to ordinary business. Worse than this, the currency drawn into the Treasury by taxation may be largest in amount precisely at the time that it is most needed in circulation, and vice versa.

The remainder of the currency consists of bank notes. These are to some extent expanded or contracted in response to the needs of business, but not to any great extent. Changes are for the most part determined by the price in the market of the United States bonds which are deposited with the Treasury as security for circulation. The result is that the expansion or the contraction dictated by the conditions of business has to be made chiefly in bank credits. These are a very valuable agency, and it is the intelligent and careful use of them by our bankers generally that has enabled the country to make the great progress that it has made.

But, as Mr. GAGE demonstrated at the bankers' dinner, we certainly are depriving ourselves of substantial advantages in the wide field of financial competition on which we are entering when we neglect to adopt the features of banking which are found at once safe and serviceable by other nations, our actual or future rivals. It is the opinion of the Secretary that the Government should put the currency issued by itself firmly on the gold standard and then that it should gradually prepare and establish a system of bank circulation amply secured on assets, which would respond naturally and intimately to the actual needs of business. That is a goal that cannot be rapidly or easily reached, but it is in our judgment unquestionably one that should be steadily sought if we wish to place the business of the country in full possession of all the advantages to which it is entitled. It is the only way in which we can take our part unhampered in the world-wide competition on which we are embarking.

GEN. GREENE AND THE REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE.

The withdrawal of Gen. FRANCIS V. GREENE from the Chairmanship of the Republican County Committee is a matter for regret to all who desire the regeneration of our city and its rescue from the evil organization that was fastened upon it in 1897 by the policy of the Republican machine at that time.

We have no right to doubt the entire accuracy and sincerity of Gen. GREENE'S statement of his motives for retiring, or that his relations with Mr. PLATT are "cordial." But we recall that at the time that he undertook the arduous and not particularly agreeable duties of the office, all who knew him, or knew of him, congratulated themselves that he would be in a position to render important aid in the municipal campaign of next year. It was, indeed, assumed that that was the object for which he consented to take the office, and that its administration during the comparatively easy period of a Presidential canvass could hardly tempt him to devote his energies to it. Nor can we ignore the well-known facts in the history of the committee which have made it impracticable for gentlemen of high character and established reputation in the community long to remain in it. The experience of Mr. ELIHU ROOT and Col. CHURCH may not throw light on the particular case of Gen. GREENE, but it affords suggestive parallelism.

Certainly, the retirement of Gen. GREENE leaves the Republican organization in a situation much less encouraging to those who hoped that it would cooperate sincerely and sensibly in the effort to overthrow Tammany and CROKER without building up the rule of another boss.

THE NEW ARMY.

The Army bill, as reported from the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, is probably, upon the whole, an improvement upon the Army bill as it passed the House. And this for the reason that it probably conforms more closely to the recommendations of the Secretary of War. Mr. ROOT is, according to the testimony of all who are competent to judge his work, the most intelligent man who has, within a generation or so, occupied the place of Secretary of War. And he is, luckily for us all, the Secretary upon whom has devolved the duty of fitting the organization of the United States Army to duties which it was not in the contemplation of his predecessors should be intrusted to it. When we consider the bewildering variety and complexity of the problems that have lately been thrust upon the War Department for sudden solution, it must be a source of satisfaction to all of us, particularly including army officers, that the training of the Secretary should have been that of a civilian and a lawyer, rather than that of an even equally able and disinterested military man.

And this is very particularly the case, when the question is of reorganizing the army. We were quoting, the other day, the remark of a retired officer to one seeking his opinion upon the reorganization of the army, that there was no such thing as "the opinion of the army"; that every officer looked at a new Army bill simply to see how it would affect him personally, and, having ascertained that, delivered his opinion accordingly. And the other fact is equally to be borne in mind that, when the question is of a reorganization of the army, officers stationed in Washington have an immense advantage, in point of opportunity to impress their views upon Congress, over officers stationed elsewhere. Not only the officer, but all his female kindred, have opportunities to impress his views, not only upon the Senator or Representative whom he may happen to know, but upon all his female kindred. Add, again, that, as a rule, every officer stationed in Washington desires to continue to be stationed in Washington, and you have at once a large military lobby for or against an Army bill, composed of the very men whose opinion a conscientious Congressman would invoke, when an army question came up upon which he had the intelligence to be aware that his uninformed opinion was good for nothing. Hence the creation of a cluster of Tite Barnacles at the capital. Hence the enlargement by law of their phylacteries. Hence the staff scandals of the Spanish war, including not only the monumental inefficiency of the bureaus, but the spirit of insubordination that grew up in them and that found its highest as well as its crudest expression in the unspeakable EAGAN.

These are the difficulties with which a measure, prepared and proposed in the interest of the efficiency of the United States Army, has to contend in Congress; and from which every such measure, within the memory of man, has suffered more or less. They proceed from the necessary existence of an army "ring" in Washington, of a number of officers who add to the disability which we have already mentioned, of looking at every army measure solely from the personal point of view, the power of being able to impress Congress with that view. Hence every measure, well intended to promote the efficiency of the army that has been introduced into Congress within the memory of living man has emerged, in an enacted condition, from that body in such a mutilated shape that its author would scarcely know it.

Secretary ROOT has evidently regarded himself as the spokesman and representative of those officers who constitute the backbone of the army and who are disabled from speaking for themselves. In his own project, it is evident that nothing was kept in view but the efficiency of the army, and the country and the army are prepared to believe that this object was sought as intelligently as disinterestedly. The presumption is consequently very great against any change whatever that may be proposed in either house against the original bill, unless accompanied with notice of its acceptance by the Secretary. Especially is this the case with any interference with his curtailment of the separate powers and the separate interests of the officers who are stationed at Washington, who have come to regard themselves as a "permanent staff," and who are necessarily less professional soldiers than military politicians.

It is because the bill reported to the Senate seems to have been, upon the whole, less influenced than that passed by the House by the machinations of this body, that we consider it the more eligible measure. The single provision that the present Adjutant General of the army shall be a Major General, but that his successor shall be reduced to the rank of Brigadier, is enough to notify the whole army that it is an institution in which promotion goes by favor, and to demoralize it accordingly. The modifications in the House measure tend to intrench that very body of barnacles which the Secretary's bill so evidently purposed to dislodge and to aerate. For the most part, the Senate stands by the Secretary in his efforts to promote the efficiency of the army without respect to persons. It is true that there are some grievous anomalies in the Senate bill. One of them is the retention in the artillery of the regimental organization, which is so evidently obsolete and meaningless, for which nobody has been able to make a producible argument and which seems to have been necessarily dictated by the interests of officers now in service who fear that their importance may be diminished by the adoption of a rational system. And there are others. But upon the whole the Senate amendments seem to have been dictated by more intelligence and patriotism than the provisions which they amend. An exhibition of those qualities, on the part of the Senate, is so rare that we cannot afford to pass it over without recognition.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Fervid interest continues to be shown by the Danish West Indians in the question whether they are to retain their present status or are to become subjects of the United States. The islanders are divided into advocates and opponents of a transfer about which nobody in Denmark or this country has yet taken the trouble to ask their opinion, and the heat with which they discuss the subject is therefore distinctly amusing, or would be if the debate had not created some very bitter animosities between neighbors who have hitherto lived together in entire peace. Each faction is beginning to give all the evidences of hating the other, and though a good deal of the harsh language they are using must, of course, be taken in a Pickwickian sense, some of the wounds inflicted will be long in healing, whatever may be the outcome of the negotiations said to be in progress between the present owner and the possible purchaser of the islands. The pro-sale people are especially indignant over what they call the efforts of their antagonists to create a race problem where one has not hitherto existed. The St. Croix Avis, for instance, says: "We have all lived and worked together in the Danish Islands in a peaceful and amicable manner. Why risk the continuance of that harmony? The race question has never been a burning question in these islands. Why now import and scatter here the red-hot embers from those lands where it is a burning question?" The opponents of the sale have been industriously rehearsing to the negroes of St. Croix and St. Thomas every lynching story they could get from the United States, the desire being to create in the minds of their hearers the belief that death by fire or rope would be the inevitable fate of the Danish negroes under the new régime. This, The Avis apparently thinks, may dangerously excite the black islanders against the numerous white residents who are preaching the benefits of American rule, but it does not a little to prove the groundlessness of its own apprehensions by recalling the fact that many West Indian negroes, after making trial of life in the United States, have sent back reports that render their friends and relatives only too eager to seek the better wages and wider opportunities of the North. No American who has been in the West Indies can doubt the truth of this, or forget how often, while there, he was asked to assist ambitious young negroes whose only desire was to abandon the tropics forever.

—Did or did not Gov. ROOSEVELT'S Italian bugler, CASSI, elevate the minds and enliven the spirits of the Rough Riders at Santiago by playing for them "The Battle Hymn of the Republic"? At first thought, the fact that the Governor told the Italian school children whom he visited on Wednesday that CASSI did play that tune at that place seems to answer the question affirmatively and conclusively, for of course the Governor's veracity is beyond doubt. But how about his accuracy in this particular matter—how about his ability to distinguish between "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and one or another of the regular bugle calls? These are fair inquiries, since, in plain truth, it would have been impossible for CASSI, as an army bugler and playing on an army bugle, to play this tune or any other that required the use of more than the three natural open tones of the chord. At any rate, only five sounds are required for the various calls and signals, and these are the intermediate open notes of the tube from C below the treble stave to G above it, and though three other sounds, a high and a low G and a B flat, can be coaxed from the instrument by buglers of abnormal skill and courage, consideration for the feelings of their comrades effectually restrains them from doing it, especially while on active service in the field. So, despite the Governor's assertion and one's absolute confidence in the rectitude of his intentions toward his interesting protégés, we incline strongly to the belief that CASSI didn't, because he couldn't, play "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" in the trenches at Santiago. He may have told the Governor that he did, and the Governor must have believed that he heard what he says he heard, but there must have been a misunderstanding somewhere. Had CASSI been provided with a key bugle or a cornet, he could at least have tried to play any air his commander requested. The limitations of the instrument with which United States Army buglers are equipped make it practically certain, however, that those dear little Italian children were unintentionally deceived, and that they know less of military history than they imagine.

—Careful reading of the testimony given by the West Point cadets as to the treatment young Booz received from them is calculated to remove any doubts which the first accounts of the boy's experience may have inspired as to the standards of conduct taught and enforced in the Military Academy. The boys are evidently telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. They have confessed to some roughness and a good deal of more or less—chiefly less—amusing folly, together with not a few willful and reprehensible violations of the laws under which they live, but there is nothing in their evidence that hints at all strongly at the existence among them of anything approaching serious brutality in spirit or conduct. Whatever of reality there was in the widely advertised sufferings of young Booz seems to have been the inevitable result of a grave mistake, on the part of himself and his friends, as to his fitness for a military career. Whatever his virtues may have been, obviously nature did not intend him for a soldier. Unfortunately, his disqualifications were not such as to be revealed by the physical examination which proved his soundness of body, or by the mental tests which established his intellectual adequacy for the service. His deficiencies—for that particular profession—were such as could only be discovered by the other members of the cadet corps, such as only they could deal with effectually. They formed the conviction that he would never be a soldier, and there is nothing to indicate that they were wrong, much to hint that they were right. In considering the treatment he received, it is well to remember, before pronouncing it cruel, that he could not have entered the Academy, if he had not been a strong and healthy boy, with average power to hold his own among other boys of the same sort. His companions had no reason for showing him special consideration, or for thinking that the severities from which they had themselves felt no ill effects in mind or body would be regarded by him as ruthless and wicked persecution. With all due sympathy for his sorrowing parents, the general public can await the result of the investigation with equanimity, in perfect confidence that for any real wrongs that have been done adequate justice will be allotted, and equally sure that West Point is now what it always has been, one of the most admirable of our National institutions, a training school for patriots, for heroes, and for gentlemen.

—In commenting the other day on the mysteriously sudden realization by the writers of letters to the London papers that the operation of underground railways so shook the houses above the tunnel as to render miserable the lives of their inhabitants, we hinted at a suspicion that there was some relation between this sudden awakening to woes hitherto unnoticed and the fact that certain American capitalists have just invaded the English capital and are planning to give it—for a consideration—the transportation facilities it has needed so long. London papers of a later date than those at hand when this suspicion was expressed cast an oblique light that may assist in the determination of its justice. In them it is gravely stated that the houses over the existing tunnel vibrate, not because the running under them of swiftly moving trains necessarily shakes the ground, but—prepare for a surprise—but because the trains are pulled by American locomotives! Listen to the details of the arraignment: "They [the American locomotives] have no spring or elasticity under the axles which carry the heavy motors, and as a consequence there is at every joint of the rails a pounding action, which, besides causing excessive vibration, is rapidly wearing the ends of the rails—easily visible at every joint. The more the rails are worn the greater the jolting—hence the increasing vibration." The secret so long and well concealed is out at last! Of course there will be no more exportation of American machinery, for, with the revelation that we do not know how to build locomotives in this country, every foreign market will be instantly closed to us. But wait a moment; perhaps—consoling thought!—London's denial of our mechanical ability will be regarded as an excuse for vociferous hilarity in all the many lands that are now buying our manufactures of iron and steel in such large quantities, and perhaps even England herself, and all her colonies, will continue to show practical appreciation of American prices and American promptitude in the filling of orders. Our engines may shake the houses of London a bit, but if we should try hard enough we could think of something they shake more than they do the houses.

Lord Palmerston's Joke.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The desire of the inhabitants of Sing Sing to change the name of the town recalls a somewhat similar desire on the part of the inhabitants of the town of Rugeley, England. One Palmer had made Rugeley notorious by an atrocious murder, and a deputation of the inhabitants waited on the Home Secretary with a petition for leave to change the name. The Minister hesitated, and asked what name they proposed to substitute. They replied that they had not decided.

"What do you say," said he, "to taking my name?"

They expressed their unqualified delight, and obtained the Home Secretary's consent to this method of obliterating the memory of the obnoxious Palmer.

The Home Secretary in question was Lord Palmerston. The town is still known as Rugeley. C. B. D.

NUGGETS.

Long Prevalent.

Mrs. Forrester—Seems to me that you would set your cap for Mr. Hall. He is evidently an easy catch.

Want It Stopped.

"Do you know that mean old Postmaster of ours reads every postal card that comes through his office?" said one country girl to another.

"Yes; it's a shame. I'm in favor of gettin' a Postmaster what can't read," was the reply.—Yonkers Statesman.

No Dread of the Future.

He Was Cool.

Miss Pertie Goodwin—So you've asked Papa? It wasn't such a terrible ordeal, was it? You didn't need to get excited, you know. All you had to do was to keep perfectly cool.

PHILOSOPHY.

From The Somerville (Mass.) Journal.

It doesn't pay to fuss and fret when anything goes wrong.
Instead of wailing when you lose, just sing a merry song.
It's always better while you work to whistle than to whine,
And when luck fails, it never pays to sit down and repine.

The man who makes the best of things shows sturdy common sense.
The chances are that he will rise to fame and eminence;
But if he doesn't, none the less he'll make the most of life,
And women all will envy and congratulate his wife.

ESTERHAZY IN UTTER POVERTY.

Writes to His Divorced Wife that He Had Nothing to Eat for Two Days.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Major Count Ferdinand von Walsin Esterhazy, (who figured so prominently in the Dreyfus case, and who was denounced by Mathieu Dreyfus as being the writer of the famous bordereau which brought about the two convictions of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, on the charge of treason,) has sunk into utter misery. His divorced wife's suit against her mother, the Marquise de Betancourt, for an allowance, on the grounds that she is in profound distress and unable to support or educate her young daughters, has brought forth the following letter, written by the Major to his wife, and dated London, Nov. 1:

"I have been unable to write to my children recently, not having the money to buy a postage stamp. I am at the last extremity of strength, courage, and resources. I have not eaten for two days until this morning in the Workhouse. I have no clothes, am shivering with cold, and am compelled to warm myself by entering churches and museums.

"Every one will say this is a confession of guilt; but you can say I am killing myself because, after having struggled to the utmost of my courage, my voice is stifled by my persecutors. Without bread, home, or clothing, I shall die of privations of all kinds, unless a revolver bullet puts everything in good order. Kiss my children. Tell them I adore them, and if a frightful fatality has precipitated me into an abyss, if I die the victim of human cowardice, I never committed the crime whereof I am accused by scoundrels in order to save themselves."

Major Esterhazy claims to be a direct descendant of the noble Esterhazy family of Austria, but the head of that house has protested against this claim, and has even threatened to prosecute Major Esterhazy for bearing the name of the family.

Esterhazy has recently been living a checkered life in Paris, London, Brussels, and Holland. He has frequently admitted, according to newspaper interviews, that he wrote the bordereau by desire of his superiors, and he has just as frequently denied having made the statements referred to.

MAJOR CUIGNET ARRESTED.

He is to be Tried by Court-Martial on Two Charges.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Major Cuignet, who figured in the Dreyfus court-martial at Rennes, has been arrested and imprisoned in Fort Mont Valerien, where he is awaiting trial by court-martial on two charges.

The first charge is that of a grave offense against discipline in writing directly, without authorization, to the President of the Council, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, accusing M. Delcassé, Minister of Foreign Affairs, of having told the Chamber of Deputies an untruth when he said that Major Cuignet had approved the interpretation officially placed upon the famous Pannizardi telegram.

The second charge is of being guilty of disclosing a confidential document, namely the statement, signed by Major Cuignet and Gen Chanoine, which was read in the Chamber by M. Joseph Lasies, formulating some reservations concerning the Pannizardi dispatch.

Mr. Lasies pointed out that the document did not mention M. Delcassé, and declared the fact to be that M. Paleologue, the Foreign Office expert, had refused to countersign it.

Gen. André, Minister of War, drew Major Cuignet's attention to this conduct, and asked for an explanation, which the officer refused, declaring that he would withhold his explanation for an officer of the judicial police.

Gen. André at once ordered Cuignet to return to his home and to await orders there. A few minutes later an officer of the Military Government of Paris called upon Major Cuignet at his residence and informed him that he had been ordered to surrender himself at Fort Mont Valerien before 8 o'clock this evening. Major Cuignet obeyed.

Gen. Chanoine was also questioned by the Minister of War this afternoon.

BECKER, THE ARTIST, DEAD.

Famous German Master's Eightieth Birthday Was Celebrated Three Days Ago.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—Prof. Karl Becker, the German painter, whose eightieth birthday was celebrated two days ago, and who was then the recipient of a congratulatory address from the Berlin Academy of Arts, died to-day from influenza.

Karl Ludwig Friedrich Becker was one of the greatest of the modern German painters of historical and genre subjects. He was born at Berlin on Dec. 18, 1820, and first studied under August von Kloeber at the Berlin Academy. He afterward studied fresco painting under A. Hess at Munich, and after a year at Paris, two years at Rome, (1843-7,) and a visit to Venice, returned to Berlin imbued with intense admiration for the work of the great masters of the Venetian Renaissance and the determination to follow the standards they set. Later in his life he made many visits to Venice, collecting materials for painting subjects inspired by the life in that city of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Among Becker's most notable works may be mentioned the "Jeweler at a Venetian Senator's," (1855;) "Visit of Sebastian del Piombo to Titian," (1861;) "The Doge in Council," (1864;) "Diner in Venice," (1873;) "Bianca Capello," (1874,) and "Scene from the Marriage of Figaro," (1874.)

There are a large number of Herr Becker's works in this country. They include paintings purchased by Collis P. Huntington, W. T. Walters, W. Richmond, D. W. Powers, and C. H. Taft.

Herr Becker was a professor and Honorary President and Senator of the Berlin Academy and an officer of the Order of Leopold. Many of his important works are in museums and national galleries. Four are in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. These include "Adelheid and the Bishop of Bamberg" and "The Emperor Maximilian Receiving the Venetian Embassy."

Two Finnish Papers Suppressed.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 20.—A dispatch from Helsingfors, Finland, says the Tidning, a daily newspaper of Christinestadt, and the Ieanmaan, a weekly paper, were suppressed last evening, and that another paper was suspended for four months.

The suppression of the papers mentioned in the dispatch from Stockholm is undoubtedly due to the so-called "Russification" of Finland. Recent mail advices indicate that the final measures are about to be adopted by the Russian Government for this "Russification." All papers in the Grand Duchy which had criticised the Government in any way, whether printed in Swedish, Finnish, or Danish, were being suppressed.

The New German Wine Law.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—The bill revising the wine law was published to-day. It forbids the adding of sugar water to partly pressed grapes for making wine. It also prohibits the use of decoctions from dried fruits, as well as acids and essences for securing an artificial bouquet. Officials charged with the duty of inspection are authorized to enter vintage rooms, cellars, and stores to examine books and to take samples. The bill provides penalties not to exceed six months' imprisonment or a fine of 3,000 marks.

Alleged Vickers-Maxim-Cramp Deal.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Details of the alleged impending consolidation of the Vickers-Maxim and Cramp companies are published here. It is said the capital will be £30,000,000. Of £10,000,000 preference shares the Cramps take half. A Director of the Vickers-Maxim Company says the statements made are untrue. Nothing, he adds, has yet been decided upon, and any question of consolidation will first be submitted to the shareholders.

Dock Strike at Antwerp Grows.

ANTWERP, Dec. 20.—It is now estimated that there are 13,000 men on strike, including coal porters and sailors, who have joined the dock laborers. Most of the imported laborers have been induced to join the unions. The Red Star Line officials have offered special terms to men.

Colombian Rebels Said to be Crushed.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Dec. 20.—Advices received here from Cumana, on the Gulf of Cariaco, say the Colombian rebellion has been crushed.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN.

"Down in the South," remarked a man at one of the clubs yesterday, "there exists more of a religious atmosphere than there is here in the North. So most of the stories they tell have a sectarian flavor to them. One that I heard while in Charleston was entirely new to me, and it appeared to be so in the circle of gentlemen where I heard it. It ran this way: A dignified old gentleman stood on one of the city wharves watching an old darkey who was fishing. No word passed between them until the darkey landed a good-sized fish. This was unhooked, and there was a look of disgust on the face of the fisherman as he threw the fish back into the water.

"Why did you throw that fish back into the water instead of keeping him, uncle?" queried the on-looker.

"He no good, massa."

"What kind of a fish was it?"

"We calls 'em Baptist fish, Sah."

"And why Baptist fish, Uncle?"

"Ah couldn't say fo' sure, massa, but I spects it's bekase dey spiles soon as you gets 'em outen de water!"

By the way, what has become of that theory of our forebears that when sharp, cold weather came it was always death to the smallpox. Like many of those old fancies of our daddies, it seems to have failed to work this year.

Phelps Montgomery, a member of the Grolier Club of this city, and with a pretty general acquaintance among book lovers here, has come to be a bone of contention among the politicians in Connecticut, through no fault of his own. Mr. Montgomery is a strong personal friend of the Governor-elect of the State, Mr. McLean. As such he was invited to become a member of the military staff of the Governor, with the title of Judge Advocate General. It may be stated parenthetically that the office is a purely ornamental and complimentary one. Yet it carries with it a certain amount of prestige, and so is much sought after by ambitious young politicians. If there are any duties attached to the office, which so far no one has been able to discover, they would be of a judicial character. So the place falls to a lawyer, generally an ambitious and working "spellbinder." Mr. Montgomery is a lawyer all right, but he is young, has been in practice at the bar but two years, and not particularly active, politically. After his appointment was announced some of those who had wanted the place and failed to get it discovered a law on the statute books providing that the Judge Advocate General should be a member of the bar with at least five years' experience. So now they are clamoring for Mr. Montgomery's removal and the substitution of some member of the bar who has been more active in politics and is better known in the party ranks as a worker than Mr. Montgomery. Mr. Montgomery offered to retire, and so let his chief out of the apparent dilemma. But the Governor-elect wants his appointee to serve, and has taken a stand akin to that of Congressman "Tim" Campbell, who appealed to President Cleveland, "not to let the Constitution stand between friends." Mr. McLean thinks the law requiring five years' active service at the bar before a man may be eligible to the entirely complimentary place on his staff is a ridiculous one. He doesn't hesitate to say so, and refuses to withdraw the nomination of Mr. Montgomery. As a way out of the difficulty he will, so gossip has it, hold the place open until the Legislature has amended the law, so that the appointment of Mr. Montgomery can be confirmed by the State Senate. One of the first measures to be presented to the Legislature will be a bill making the necessary change to admit Mr. Montgomery to the gold-laced and uniformed-wearing official family of the new Governor.

They are telling a rather good story about John W. Gates, he of the Steel and Wire concern, who is such a thorn in the side of a lot of the stockholders of his company, of a few Wall Street manipulators, and of some people who think they can play poker. Mr. Gates is known as a hunter, and rather prides himself on his skill with both the rifle and shotgun. Shortly before the recent meeting of the Directors of the American Steel and Wire Company here, he went on a shooting expedition to Texas. He had as his guests Messrs. Lambert and Ellwood of his steel company, and C. H. Randle, who is engineering a deal to fight the Salt Trust. Accompanied by eight men with a reputation as guides, the party went to the hunting grounds near Port Arthur on a special train of three cars. There were supplies of all sorts aboard, including several decks of cards, guns worth several hundred dollars each, specially loaded ammunition, a big wagon with four horses, and everything else to make the trip successful and comfortable. The party put in fourteen hours to-day at the hunting grounds, and fired in all between 400 and 500 rounds of ammunition. Yet the net result of the trip was two of the particularly exasperating sort of ducks known as coots.

"Not a feather for him. He worked all day pumping a breech-loader until his arm was as sore as if it had been vaccinated, but never touched a feather on one of the birds. The two that did fall came down to the gun of one of the guides. If you see Gates don't say a word to him about that hunting trip. He's beginning to believe that some of the party may get a lot of blank cartridges on him, and he prides himself on his marksmanship and knowledge of shooting."

"It is rather of a puzzle why it should be so, but we have found in two years' experience that the best of the amateur detectives we employ evenings during the holidays are young men who run elevators during the daytime," said the Superintendent of one of the big department stores. "These young men rarely if ever make a mistake as to the character of the people they are employed to watch while shopping here. One such young man proved very serviceable a year ago. He caught a number of petty thieves, but made no mistake by interfering with people who were shopping instead of stealing. We are trying him again this year, and if he continues to do as well he will be offered a good position on our regular staff at a good salary. That thief spotters are born rather than made is proved by the fact that one of the best we ever had was a young woman who is regularly employed as a stenographer and confidential clerk by one of the big Wall Street firms. She had an ambition to test her powers as a detective as a matter of sport, as well as a way to earn a few extra dollars for Christmas money. She was as expert as a professional, caught a number of shoplifters, one of them an old-time professional, and sharply refused a good offer to make this work her business in our establishment the year round. She was satisfied with her short experience."

When one sees the troubles that horses have on these frosty mornings trying to secure a foothold on the slippery asphalt pavements, he is inclined to believe that such pavements are a failure from the horses' point of view at least. No matter how well the animals may be calked, they slip about on the frosty surface in a fashion that makes one wonder there are so few accidents and broken legs. As a means of remedying the trouble horsemen would like the city to adopt some regular system of sanding the pavements. That seems the only way in which the horses can be prevented from slipping about, as if they were on a piece of glare ice. Drivers of heavy trucks keep well away from the slippery streets, so that it works a good in keeping these from the asphalted streets devoted to pleasure driving. As there is less danger for the heavy cart horses than the lighter-shod carriage horses, the system of sanding the streets now followed in some smaller cities might well be put in operation here.

When the annual meeting of the Roman Catholic mutual benefit order, known as the Knights of Columbus, is held in March next, a proposition is to be made to extend the organization to Cuba, Porto Rico, and some of the other West Indian Islands, to one or two of the South American countries, and to England, Ireland, France, and possibly Italy. At the present time there are no councils of the order outside the United States. So popular has the order become that members who have gone to other countries to live and who have there explained the workings of the organization, have been asked to obtain charters for lodges in those countries. Nothing can be done in this direction until the meeting of the legislative body in March. Delegates to that council are now being chosen throughout the country, and the extension of the order is the principal question to come before the National body. On this question hinges principally the selection of the delegates.

THE CHINA PROTOCOL IS PROBABLY SIGNED

Envoys Decided Wednesday to Affix Signatures Last Night.

WHO GIVES LI INFORMATION?

Foreign Ministers Want to Know Which of Them Breaks Faith—Note Is in French, English, and Chinese.

PEKING, Dec. 20.—Yesterday's meeting of the foreign envoys was protracted and somewhat stormy, owing to the desire to discover who discloses to the Chinese what every Minister has pledged to keep secret. Li-Hung-Chang invariably knows within two hours of the close of a meeting what has happened.

The Ministers admit that yesterday was a critical time for the preliminary joint note, as it was felt that a point had been reached where, if the envoys did not agree, other difficulties might occur. As a matter of fact, there was a threat by one of the Ministers that his Government would have other modifications to make, and that he had not reached a decision.

European and American residents, therefore, are glad that a stage has been reached where something can be done. It is felt that valuable time is being wasted and the country becoming more unsettled.

A meeting of the Ministers will be held to-night to sign the note, which, probably on Saturday, will be delivered by all the Ministers to Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching, with a request that they reply as soon as possible.

The original note will be written in French. Mr. Conger and Sir Ernest Satow will inclose an English translation, while a Chinese copy will also be attached.

Four days will elapse before a reply can be received, owing to the necessity of communicating with the Chinese Court.

The modification proposed by the British Government was that, until China had proved that she intended complying with the terms of the note and rendering full satisfaction to the powers, no hope could be held out that the occupation of the Province of Pe-chi-li by all the forces would cease.

GERMAN ATROCITIES CHARGED.

Troops Said to Have Killed Friendly Chinese Soldiers—Another Anti-Foreign Rising Feared.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The Peking correspondent of The Morning Post says:

"On many grounds the Germans are gaining a worse reputation for severity than the Russians ever had. The country is practically in a defenseless state, moreover, because Count von Waldersee will not allow Chinese troops to do anything, and the foreign troops are absent or engaged in looting.

"It is reported that five days ago the German troops visited Lung-Ching and shot sixty imperial soldiers who were engaged in suppressing Boxers, and also killed thirty other Chinese, including three converts. They took 200 prisoners, including thirty natives attached to the Anglican Mission.

"In consequence of an appeal from the magistrates, however, the prisoners were liberated in return for the payment of 20,000 taels. This punitive expedition was in defiance of the understanding that no such measures should be taken pending the negotiations. The Germans are said to have looted the place."

A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company from Peking, dated Dec. 19, says the situation is rapidly growing worse and is causing grave anxiety.

The dispatch adds that unless a definite system of Government is speedily installed a recrudescence of the anti-foreign outbreaks is confidently predicted. The pressure of Winter begins to be felt by the people, who are also suffering on account of the blackmail levied by the native employes of the allies, for which the foreigners are blamed.

The same dispatch says a number of desperados, imprisoned at Tsan-chow-Foo by Gen. Mei, and released by the Germans, are now harrying the border of Pe-chi-li and Shan-Tung, burning houses, murdering, and pillaging.

British to Control Shan-hai-Kwan Line.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has concluded negotiations, according to The Daily Mail, by which Russia will, on Jan. 1, give Great Britain entire control of the railway from Peking to Shan-hai-Kwan.

TRYING TO RAISE LOAN HERE.

Russia Said to Desire Money to Rebuild Manchuria Railway.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The Russian Bank, according to a dispatch to The Daily Express from St. Petersburg, is endeavoring to raise a loan in New York for rebuilding the Manchuria Railway.

MISS GREY AS SELMA WHITE.

The Popular Actress to Return to the Stage in a Month or So.

Miss Katharine Grey (Mrs. John Mason) will probably return to the stage in a month or so to act Selma White in Leo Dietrichstein's dramatization of Robert Grant's "Unleavened Bread," at the Savoy Theatre. The Liebler Company, who own this play, have not yet formally announced the date of its production or the place. But it is well understood, in theatrical circles that the play will be done at the new house in West Thirty-fourth Street after Miss Crosman has vacated it. The Lieblers long ago engaged that promising young actress, Eleanor Robson, for the contrasting rôle of Flossie Williams. Joseph Holland, who has not been in the public eye this season, will probably play the estimable architect. Miss Grey has had many artistic triumphs since her famous impersonation of the self-willed Maine damsel in "Shore Acres," and people who have read Judge Grant's novel say she ought to make a hit as its feminine protagonist. What Mr. Dietrichstein has been able to do with the long story and its utterly undramatic theme will remain a mystery until the play is produced. But Dietrichstein is clever and knows what dramatic action is.

JEAN DE RESZKE HERE.

The Tenor Says He Will Secure an American Jockey Before He Leaves.

M. Jean de Reszke arrived yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Shortly after his arrival, accompanied by Maurice Grau, he went to the Gilsey House, where he was seen by a reporter. He said:

"My voice, I think, is in good condition, but as to that I prefer to let the people judge for themselves. I will make my first appearance on Dec. 31 in 'Lohengrin,' and the Friday of that same week I shall sing the rôle of Faust, and some night the following week yet to be determined upon I shall be heard in 'Aida.' The only new rôle which New York operagoers shall hear me in will be that of Jean in 'Herodiade.'

"Before returning home I hope to secure a prominent American jockey to ride my horses in the large stake races of Europe in which I intend to take considerable interest next season. Like many others abroad I have come to the conclusion that the old English style of riding is outclassed by the American style. My plans for presenting the "Nibelungen Ring" in Paris during the absence of Sarah Bernhardt in this country at her theatre were changed when Mr. Grau persuaded me to come over and sing this season in New York.

POPULAR PLAYS BURLESQUED.

A New Second Act to the Weber & Fields Extravaganza.

In place of the travesty of "Arizona," at the music hall of Messrs. Weber and Fields last evening, a new second act of "Fiddle-dee-dee" was performed, which carried the wildly preposterous story to an unintelligible conclusion by mixing the romantic affairs of Hoffman Barr and Mrs. Meadowbrook bewilderingly with the courtship of the Prince and Princess in "A Royal Family," the intrigue of the Marquis and the manicure in "The Gay Lord Quex," the "spooning" of the pretty maidens in "Floradora," the jugglery of the Agoust family, and the recent shaking up in the police force.

The bedroom scene of Mr. Pinero's comedy was travestied in an old-fashioned way, though Fay Templeton's caricature of Irene Vanbrugh was clever, and the afternoon tea beneath the treed Prince and Princess was transformed, with Fields as the King, Warfield as the Queen Dowager, and Weber as the infant heir to the throne, into a cake fight.

There was some new fun in the thing, however, and much of it was vehemently applauded; but Mr. Kelly and Miss Russell had evidently not bothered to learn the words. Mr. Edgar Smith had written for them to speak, while Mr. Hopper's too generous caricature of John Hare was not very amusing, and he developed a severe hoarseness late in the evening which spoiled the good effect of his new topical song.

As for Fritz Williams, who was called in at a few hours' notice, to act the Prince, he was perfectly at ease and got through his not too arduous task very well. An apology was made for him, but it was not needed. The crowded audience received him with acclaim.

There were two noteworthy new hits in this new half of the old show. One was a capital Cockney song, "I'm a Respectable Working Girl," sung with much spirit and humor by Fay Templeton, and the other was a travesty of the "Pretty Maiden" of "Floradora," executed with extravagant gravity and splendid agility by Weber, Fields, Warfield, Alice Gilbert, Belle Robinson, and the invaluable Bonnie Maginn.

Miss Maginn's remarkably dexterous, graceful, and swift dancing in the "Rose of Old Pasadena" episode of the first act continues to be one of the most attractive features of the entertainment, which, as a whole, is full of life and color, fun and melody, and is touched with a certain reckless spirit, which is neither Parisian nor bohemian, though it vaguely suggests both to the wayfaring man, and is probably rather innocent and juvenile. It belongs clearly to the surface life of this metropolis in the present hour.

MUSICAL ART SOCIETY.

First of the Two Concerts at Carnegie Hall Last Night.

The first of the Musical Art Society's two concerts was given last night at Carnegie Hall. The audience was one of those large and brilliant assemblages which are always seen at the entertainments of this organization, and which seem so thoroughly to enjoy the feast of chaste and elevated music. It is a happy thing for this city that it contains so many persons capable of appreciating the kind of music offered at the concerts of the Musical Art Society, for there is so much to deprave taste in the sensational offerings of the day. The surroundings last night were in harmony with the Christmas spirit of the concert. The stage was handsomely decorated with evergreen trees, and the prosc enium arch was hung with greens, the conspicuous figures being three bells made in greens and red blossoms. It was a pretty fancy.

The music was of the kind usually heard at these concerts. There were an "In Exitu Israel," by Samuel Wesley, a closely harmonized and melodious "Salve Regina" by F. X. Arens, (a local composer;) two old Bohemian Christmas carols, in which the spirit of folk music contributed to the beauties of the evening; an adagio from a Bach violin concerto, played by Mr. Fritz Kreisler; the perennially lovely and inspiring Marcelline mass of the immortal Palestrina, the Bach concerto for two violins, in which Mr. David Mannes seconded Mr. Kreisler; two songs by Brahms, a "Spring Song" by Kopylow, and "Sunrise," by Rergei Taneyeff.

Thus the concert was full of variety, while the purpose of the society to preserve for the edification of this generation the noble works of the old masters of "a capella" writing was not forgotten. To those who cherish a love for the well of pure church music undefiled, the Palestrina mass is always welcome. It is one of the undying masterpieces, whose lofty conceptions lose none of their pristine glory with the flight of time. It was admirably sung last night, though at one moment there was a little uncertainty in the intonation of the tenors. But so long as the society's choir sings as well as it did in the "Benedictus" and "Angus Dei" to find fault with its work would be to carp.

The old Bohemian carols delighted the audience by their characteristic melodies, and the second of them had to be repeated. The Bach numbers were also plainly to the taste of most of those present, and in the second movement of the double concerto the two soloists played uncommonly well. They were less happy in the finale. Mr. Frank Damrosch conducted with zeal and ability. This gentleman continues to command admiration for his enthusiasm in the cause of good choral music. He is in his way a public benefactor.

MR. HAROLD BAUER'S RECITAL.

Mr. Harold Bauer, who appeared as the pianist at the last concert of the Kneisel Quartet, in this city, yesterday afternoon gave a recital at Mendelssohn Hall. It was said in this paper after his first performance that he would probably be heard to better advantage in a recital. In some respects this prediction was fulfilled, but in others it was not. The recital gave abundant opportunity to measure the value of the player's gifts and equipment, and the result was not altogether satisfactory. Mr. Bauer had the courage to submit himself for public judgment in a programme calling for all the resources of the pianist's art. He played Beethoven's sonata, opus 111, Mendelssohn's etude in B flat minor, a Gluck gavotte arranged by Brahms, the Chopin fantasia, opus 49, Schumann's "Papillons," a romance, and the toccata of the same composer; Chopin's C minor étude, Liszt's "La Leggierezza," and Balarikeff's Oriental fantasia "Islamey."

In the performance of all this music Mr. Bauer proved himself to be a good pianist of a type now quite common. He displayed no especial individuality, no striking personal attributes that might command general attention for him. He is at the best an academic performer, intelligent, correct, and dry. He has a big tone and an extensive dynamic range, though the whispering pianissimo is not included in it. But in tone color he is sadly deficient. His reading of the Beethoven sonata, for instance, was quite spoiled by the coldness and monotony of his tone color and by his generally dry style. It was a sort of conservatory professorial interpretation, with which little serious fault could be found, but which left one untouched by the real genius of Beethoven.

The performance of the Chopin fantasia naturally was far from being ideal in the hands of a player of such qualities as have been indicated. It was vigorous, but it laeked the variety of intimate details which reveal sympathy with its innermost spirit. It may be possible that some of his hearers enjoyed the performance of Schumann's "Papillons," but this writer found it deficient in delicate nuance and wholly unpoetic in conception. The romance was equally dry and colorless, but the toccata was given with dash and clearness, especially in the management of the middle voices. Mr. Bauer's best achievement in the niceties of his art is in his treatment of the pedals, but he utterly neglects the possibilities of touch in connection with it. In short, he is a pianist who must be very warmly welcomed in the respected circles of the Back Bay and the Browning societies of Boston, where it is regarded as indelicate for a pianist to express sentiment in public. There Mr. Bauer might dissect sonatas and fantasias to the delectation of the wise men of the East. But in this town we are fond of cakes and ale and "ginger hot i' the mouth." We prefer our piano playing a trifle more highly colored and not so musty with the atmosphere of the schools.

ROSS LEAVES WEBER & FIELDS.

Will Enter Vaudeville, on the Keith Circuit, Next Season.

Charles J. Ross has withdrawn from the Weber & Fields Stock Company, and his rôles in the new burlesques last night were taken by Fritz Williams, who was loaned by Charles Frohman for one week. Efforts are being made to secure Robert Hilliard. It has been known for some time that Mr. Ross was desirous of withdrawing from the company, but was prevented by a five years' contract.

When the announcement was made Wednesday evening that a dress rehearsal of the new burlesques would take place after the performance, he absolutely refused to remain, and words between him and Mr. Fields followed. Mr. Fields protested at the stand taken by Mr. Ross, and in the briefest way gave him to understand that his services would not be longer required if the rehearsal was not attended by him. He tendered his resignation forthwith.

Mr. Fields stated last night that Mr. Ross's action in refusing to rehearse on the grounds that he knew his part is perhaps without precedent.

Mr. Ross, speaking of his action, said: "For a long time I have been desirous of withdrawing from the company for several reasons; first I find that myself and wife can make more money in vaudeville than Weber & Fields can afford to pay me, and secondly I have not been satisfied with the treatment recently accorded me. Perhaps I acted hastily, but the stand taken I think is correct. Mrs. Ross and I will go to West Baden, Ind., for a much needed rest. The early part of October we shall begin our vaudeville career, appearing for twenty weeks on the Keith circuit, where we will present short sketches on prominent plays before the public at that time."

Melbourne MacDowell Divorced.

Emmanuel Blumenstiel, as referee in the action for absolute divorce brought by Mrs. Wilhelmina Maria Brafman MacDowell against Melbourne MacDowell, the actor, has filed a report in the County Clerk's Office recommending that the decree be granted. Counsel for Mrs. MacDowell will apply to Justice Lawrence in the Supreme Court this morning for a confirmation of the report. The testimony in the referee's report is sealed.

Mansfield Lays a Cornerstone.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—The cornerstone of the Garrick Theatre, now in course of construction on Chestnut Street, this city, was laid to-day. Richard Mansfield, who is filling an engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre, this week, laid the stone and delivered an address.

CASTELLANES FILE SUIT

Counter-Action in Paris Against Bric-a-Brac Dealer.

DENUNCIATION OF THE COUNT

PARIS, Dec. 20.—The suit of Charles Werthelmer, the London bric-à-brac dealer, against Count and Countess Boni de Castellane, to recover payment for art objects sold to the defendants, began this morning in the First Civil Chamber. The transaction taken as a test case involved the sum of 12,946f. The hearing was devoted to the arguments of counsel. None of the parties was in court.

The total sum involved in the transactions is 6,500,000f.

Count and Countess Boni de Castellane have replied with filing a counter-suit, demanding a full statement of all transactions, claiming that various objects, admittedly authentic, were sold at scandalously exaggerated figures, and that many articles were represented as real antiquities when they were imitations, modern, or useless, while in a series of exchanges in 1899 Wertheimer took back a number of articles at a price greatly inferior to their true worth. The plaintiffs, therefore, demand a reduction of the debt, provisionally estimated to be at least 2,000,000f., and the restitution of the objects taken in exchange by Wertheimer, under the penalty of 1,000f. for each day's delay in the restitution from the day of judgment. Finally, they claim damages to the amount of 300,000f.

The plaintiffs also ask, in case the Judges decide it is necessary to throw further light on the case, that experts shall be appointed to appraise the articles involved. The appointment of these experts is the first aim of counsel for the de Castellanes.

The pleadings in the case were unfinished to-day, and the hearing was adjourned for a week.

Among the articles whose value the de Castellanes question are a bronze Neptune, attributed to Jean de Bologne; paintings attributed to one of the Cuyps and to Franz Hals, and a number of pieces of Louis XIV. furniture.

Wertheimer's counsel, Maître Foucauld, in a speech lasting several hours, made a most vigorously worded reply to the plaintiffs' contentions. He said there was nothing serious in the observations and criticisms "behind which the de Castellanes were screening their temporary insolvency," and denounced the Count's conduct scathingly, referring to his "pretexts to delay payments." He did not hesitate to accuse him of telling untruths. Counsel explained how the Count cheerfully accepted all the transactions, expressing satisfaction until the last moment, when he turned and accused Wertheimer of usury.

Maître Foucauld presented details of the various transactions. The first was in 1895, when the Count purchased three art objects, including a Gainsborough picture, for 250,000f., which, counsel said airily, was only modest for a man of Count de Castellane's fortune, at which the Court smiled. When the bill was due, counsel continued, the Count asked for delay and offered to pay interest.

The second transaction was in 1897—eight articles, price 1,000,000f. Here counsel replied to the contention that the articles were sold at exaggerated prices, and explained that Count Boni de Castellane sold a number of the last-named articles, and Wertheimer asked the buyer at what price he would resell them to him. The prices asked were above those at which Wertheimer sold the articles.

Counsel detailed other transactions, up to 1899, when the various exchanges occurred, at Count de Castellane's suggestion, which counsel asserted, gave rise to the Count's counter-charges. He referred to one article, in a batch, which the Count asked him (Wertheimer), to sell on the eve of his departure for New York. Count de Castellane, counsel said, asked a higher price than he had paid for the article. Wertheimer, nevertheless, sold the batch at the Count's figure.

Nothing could be more painful, asserted Maître Foucauld, than the steps taken by the de Castellanes to avoid the suits. Who could have expected such an attitude from a Castellane? No one could reproach Wertheimer for placing confidence in the man who had contracted marriage with the richest heiress in the world, whose fortune the press described as fabulous.

Maître Foucauld claimed the Count utilized the construction of the magnificent residence on the Avenue Malakoff as a pretext to delay the payment of his debts. He said he had an income of five to six million francs and had an enormous surplus, more than needed to live on, and the sums he had sunk in his palatial home compelled him to beg for the generosity of his creditors. He had recourse to his brother-in-law, from whom he obtained nothing, which did not prevent the Count from telling Wertheimer that Mr. Gould would pay.

The Count's conduct at this period, according to counsel, resembled that of a child. He was surprised at his wrongdoing and requested his creditors to keep from Mr. Gould the real extent of his indebtedness. Later, the Count affirmed his own brother would pay Wertheimer, but through his brother's lawyers, not through his (the Count's) hands.

"What an affront," said counsel. "Count Boni was thus obliged to admit that his brother would not trust him with money."

Maître Foucauld here brought in contrast Count Boni's conduct with the glorious traditions of the de Castellane family. He said one felt grieved to find such falsehoods written with the pen of a Castellane.

Count de Castellane wired Wertheimer, after his arrival in New York, that he was well satisfied with the voyage, which, counsel said, Wertheimer interpreted as meaning that the Goulds would finance him. When the Count returned Wertheimer was asked to meet the Goulds' counsel, from which he hoped much. But the lawyers informed him that the Goulds did not give the Count pecuniary support, but only moral support. Afterward, the counter-charges were brought against Wertheimer, and the latter wrote a sharp letter to the Count, expressing his opinion of him.

Counsel also said Wertheimer's honesty had never before been questioned. He was surprised that Count de Castellane, after the most friendly relations, social and business, which had existed between them, should now accuse him of deceitful and usurious manoeuvres.

Counsel for Count and Countess de Castellane, Maître Bonnat, acting for Coudert Brothers of New York, contended that Wertheimer had been striving to prevent the case from coming before the courts, but the result had been unfortunate for him, as the nature of Wertheimer's business must be exposed.

Maître Bonnat said George J. Gould considered Wertheimer gave credit to a young married couple who had no thorough comprehension of the value of money on terms very advantageous to himself. Wertheimer, counsel contended, while giving Count de Castellane time to pay, offered to make exchanges whereby he took back the finest objects of his collection. Wertheimer had no right to say Count de Castellane was pursuing a dishonorable course. Counsel claimed that Wertheimer had abused the confidence of the young people, and, if the latter had committed follies, it could be said that for the last eighteen months they had been cruelly assisting for them. Moreover, henceforth they would devote themselves to wiping out the indebtedness.

"We have been witnessing for some time past," continued Maître Bonnat, "a sort of duel between the parties—Wertheimer apparently relying on the exhaustion of Count de Castellane's strength of resistance, and it is to-day that Count and Countess de Castellane at last perceived that Wertheimer had sold his benevolence at the highest price, which was costing them too dear, that the counter-suit was entered."

Walden—Eddy.

Special to The New York Times.

MAMARONECK, Dec. 20.—Miss Anna Brevoort Eddy, daughter of U. D. Eddy, was married at noon to-day to R. P. Walden, in St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, by the rector, the Rev. Frank F. German. Miss Eddy is well known among local golfers. Mr. Walden served as one of the crew of the Yankee in the Spanish-American war. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Matilda Eddy, as maid of honor, and the best man was Percy Waldo. The bridesmaids were the Misses Towle, Miss Gwynne, Miss Dupignac, and the Misses Cushman. The ushers were Robert McGuire, Henry Maury, James S. Cushman, James Mitchell, H. S. Eddy, and Howard Walden.

After a reception at the home of the bride's parents Mr. Walden and his bride left for their honeymoon trip. It is reported that they will live in London, England. The wedding was attended by about 300 guests, who came to Mamaroneck on a special train on the New Haven Railroad.

The fact that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is to give a dinner dance at Sherry's on Wednesday evening, Jan. 2, to which about 100 guests have been asked, has been ingeniously interpreted by people not averse to mild sensations into the story that Mrs. Vanderbilt intends to cut the mythical "400" list to one of "100." Mrs. Vanderbilt, like other hostesses, has simply found that the number of guests she has chosen is about the best number required to make a dinner dance both enjoyable and successful.

The engagement of Dr. Andrew S. Clarke of Paris and Mrs. William F. Burden, (Miss Daisy McCoy of Troy,) just made public by Mrs. Burden, excites no surprise. It was virtually announced in print a fortnight ago, and the many New Yorkers who were in Paris last Summer, and who knew Dr. Clarke and Mrs. Burden, considered it then as a settled matter. The wedding will be celebrated in the early Spring. Mrs. Burden is one of the handsomest and most popular of New York society matrons. She was left a widow two years ago, and since that time has resided for the most part in Paris. Dr. Clarke, who is a wealthy American physician, has resided for many years in Paris, and his name has been matrimonially coupled with those of a number of prominent New York women. He was at one time reported to be engaged to Mrs. Astor.

The first Les Cendrillons dance for this season was held at Sherry's in the big ballroom last night. The guests, who arrived early, were received by Mesdames R. James Cross, Henry E. Howland, Alfred Pell, Anson Phelps Stokes, and James A. Scrymser. The cotillion was led by Alexander Hadden, who danced with Miss Mary Harriman, the débutante daughter of E. H. Harriman. There was one favor figure, and for the girls these favors consisted of Japanese iris flowers on long sticks, with the foliage attached. For the men there were boutonnières of holly, tied with red ribbon. The dancing was over at midnight, and supper was then served at small tables. The dancers were chiefly the older girls and men, although there were a few débutantes, including the daughters of many of the patronesses, a list of whom was published in this column on Sunday last. CYCLISTS SET FAST PACE

ELKES' NEW WORLD'S RECORD

Walthour Second in the Long Competition Event, but Won More Money than Winner.

Twenty-five miles on a bicycle in one hour plus one minute and fifty-five and a fifth seconds was the pace set last night on Madison Square Garden's ten-lap track by Frank L. Kraemer, the former amateur champion from Newark, N. J., who has recently joined the professional ranks. He won the first open professional twenty-five-mile race ever held in this city on an indoor track, and his time establishes a special competitive record.

Harry Elkes, the six-day bicycle victor, also shared the honors of the evening by breaking the world's indoor one-mile motor-paced record by 3 seconds. He made the distance in 1:36 1-5.

In the finishing bunch of the twenty-five-mile race there were, besides Kraemer, "Bobby" Walthour, one of the fastest sprinters in the country, and "Tom" Cooper. On the last few laps they set a scorching pace, and came very near ending the race in an even hour.

For a twenty-five-mile race it was an unusually hot finish, and the galleries were in a perfect frenzy of excitement. Walthour had led at all of the intermediate five-mile points, and the system of awarding special $10 prizes for the leader at five, ten, fifteen, and twenty miles acted as a natural pacing incentive and occasioned fast time from start to finish. The times for each five miles, with leaders, were:

Five miles	Walthour	0:11:30
Ten miles	Walthour	0:23:36 2-5
Fifteen miles	Walthour	0:35:42 2-5
Twenty miles	Walthour	0:48:29 1-5
Twenty-five miles	Kraemer	1:01:55 1-5

Sixteen men started in the race, as follows: Robert Walthour, Floyd Krebs, Frank L. Kraemer, Louis Gimm, Arthur W. Ross, O. V. Babcock, C. W. Miller, Robert Muller, R. S. Ireland, Hippolyte Aucoutrier, Jean Fischer, "Tom" Cooper, Jean Gougoltz, Karl Kaser, George W. Crook, and Frank Ryser. Ross, the Newark bicyclist, forged to the front at the crack of the pistol and held the lead at the first mile, closely followed by Kraemer. Ryser dropped at once to the rear, and was the first man to retire, and Fischer soon followed him. At two miles Gougoltz, Walthour, Ross, and Kraemer took the front in that order, and the Frenchman led the procession for over two miles. Within two laps of the first five miles Walthour made one of his lightning spurts, and shot ahead of Gougoltz in a twinkling, winning the first special prize of $10 for the five miles.

Walthour repeated his sprinting performance just before the tenth mile, and immediately after that he, with Kraemer and Cooper, gained a lap on the others. This advantage they held to the end. To the surprise of the crowd Gougoltz dropped out at ten miles, the pace being too hot for him. His companion in the six-day race, Simar, is still very ill with pneumonia in his hotel.

Walthour continued to lead at the fifteen and twenty mile points, but Graemer on the third lap made a sensational spurt and passed his rival at the twenty-fifth mile by half a wheel's length. Walthour was about five yards ahead of Cooper. All the others finished their race at the twenty-fourth mile. Arthur W. Ross of Newark, N. J., getting the fourth prize of $25. Cooper got $50. The special prize system gave the peculiar result of the second man, Walthour, winning $65, more than the victor. Walthour won $40 by leading at the four intermediate five-mile points. He then got $50 for leading at the greatest number of laps, his record being 123, four more than half the number run. Second prize was $75, making his total $165, while Kraemer got the winner's purse of $100.

Elkes was paced in his record ride by a motor tandem, ridden by Crooks and Tinsler, and the latter put on every ounce of steam that the machine could carry. Elkes rode magnificently, sticking like a leech to the rear wheel, and when the time was announced, the galleries went wild with delight. The former record for the same style of exhibition was 1 minute 39 1-5 seconds, held by Jimmy Michael.

When it came time for the rival police cyclists, John Scheussler of New York and Otto Hausaler of Brooklyn, to race, the latter was not present, it being announced that he had injured his hip during the day and his physician forbade him to ride.

A bad spill occurred toward the end of the second semi-final heat in the half-mile handicap. While rounding the east curve, J. H. Hunter, Walter Smith, known as the Brooklyn boy wonder, and G. C. Schrieber came too closely together, and all went down in a bunch. There was great commotion for a minute, but, beyond a mild scalp wound sustained by Hunter, no one was hurt.

The Garden was well filled with spectators, at least 5,000 being present, and enthusiasm was kept bubbling from start to finish.

ASSISTANT GAVE NO ALARM.

Allowed Students to Perish in School Fire Without Warning.

FREDONIA, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Coroner Charles Blood, assisted by District Attorney Greene and his assistant, Elton D. Warner, examined twelve witnesses to-day in an effort to ascertain those to blame for the death of the six students and Janitor Morris, who lost their lives in the fire of Dec. 14, which destroyed the Normal School.

Dr. Francis B. Palmer, principal, described the screens in the windows before the fire escapes, stating that they were easily unhooked from the inside, but supposed to be burglar-proof. In giving his testimony he was overcome with grief and buried his head in his folded arms, sobbing.

Charles B. Gibbs, assistant janitor, discovered the fire, and thought nothing of the sleeping students on the third floor. He lost ten minutes before he whistled up a speaking tube to the janitor's room. He waited for no answer, and did not know whether the whistle aroused her or not. He made no effort to cry fire or run up either fire escape.

Coroner Blood roundly scored him for his utter indifference in such a critical time. Evidence plainly showed that he could have roused the whole dormitory in time to have gotten all out safely.

Liner Passed a Leaking Bark.

The liner Fuerst Bismarck, which arrived from Genoa yesterday, reported that she had spoken the bark Elsa in latitude 41.32, longitude 32.28, which had signaled that she was leaking. Otherwise she reported all well on board.

CHAMPIONSHIP HOCKEY.

Opening Game in Amateur League Series Won by New York Athletic Club Team.

The opening game of the Amateur League Hockey season at the St. Nicholas Rink last evening furnished a brilliant and spectacular contest. The New York Athletic Club won from the Hockey Club by the score of 4 to 0.

In the first half, despite the Hockey Club's most desperate efforts, they could not land the puck in their opponent's net, and the wearers of the Mercury Foot were forced to content themselves with one goal scored soon after play began. Dozens of times apparently good chances to tally were turned aside by both vigilant goal keepers. In the second half, almost before any one fairly realized it, the redoubtable cuver point of the New Yorks scored two points on swift shoots from the centre of the rink, and gained the third on a pass from Fry.

The New York Athletic Club's victory was due to the surpassing excellence of their defense, the splendid speed of their forwards, and a general ability in team work.

From the start of play it was apparent that the game was to be a warm one. The Hockey Club opened the contest with a rush, but O'Donnell neatly turned aside Phillips's shoot. After some four minutes of dashing work, in which both teams came within an ace of scoring, Fenwick and Hornfeck got the puck and by clever dribbling brought it within scoring distance of the Hockey Club's goal. On a long angle shot from the side of the rink, Fenwick sent the puck with wonderful velocity square past Ellison for the first score, that served to make both teams warm up to their work. On the next face-off the Hockey Club came near scoring, but O'Donnell kneeled in front of the goal in time to stop the progress of the rubber.

Referee Dobby warned the players that the rough work must cease, and soon ruled Russell off the ice for two minutes. Taking advantage of his absence the New Yorks made desperate attempts to score, but Ellison checked their swift shots. Howard and Hornfeck did some pretty but fruitless team work and the half closed without further scoring.

Refreshed by the ten minutes' intermission both sevens went fiercely at each other on the opening of the second twenty-minute period. Probably some of the most speedy and brilliant team and individual work that has ever been seen in New York terminated in a second score made by Fenwick on a magnificent shoot from the middle of the rink. The Hockey Club was spurred to further effort by this, but a moment later Fenwick dashed their hopes by again shooting a goal from almost exactly the same spot.

The Hockey Club then frustrated several brave efforts to tally, but Fry soon dribbled the rubber down the ice and shot to Ellison unsuccessfully. Fenwick caught the puck on the rebound, and, taking the goal keeper by surprise, smashed the disk into the net.

Play then became rougher than ever, and Howard and Russell were ruled off before time was called. Line-up:

New York Athletic Club. (4.)	Position.	Hockey Club of New York. (0.)
O'Donnell	Goal	Ellison

The Xavier hockey team defeated the Drisler seven at the St. Nicholas Rink yesterday by the score of 6 to 0. Xavier's forwards were at all times fast. Line-up:

BASEBALL PLAYERS AROUSED.

Protective Association Advises Its Members Not to Sign Contracts Hastily.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 20.—The committee of the Players' Protective Association has sent out a circular letter to all baseball players of their association. The letter, after setting forth the action of the National League in ignoring at its recent meeting in this city, the players' petition for a change in the existing state of things, says:

"It looks pretty sure that the National League owners are going to cut salaries all along the line. We give you our judgment on this so that you may all bear it in mind later when you have to decide whether to sign in the National or the American League. Much of a cut, you see, would bring the average salary paid in the two leagues pretty close together.

"All things considered, we believe that it would be unwise for us now to start a 'war' ourselves; that at present players should not under any consideration jump from our league to the other, even if the American does become entirely independent; that American League players may at any time now sign contracts in that league which contains the amended portions of which they have been advised heretofore, and to which Mr. Johnson has agreed, which provide against selling, farming, and drafting without the players' consent; that any member of the association, whatever league he is in, should sign no contract at any time which has not been approved by the attorney.

"Having acted to the best of our ability with all the possibilities in mind, we urge you to immediately write Mr. Taylor your personal preference as to action for the future, both as to yourself and to our association, which is grounded on all that is fair and honorable and which must be kept up and made a success, or no players' organization can ever succeed."

The letter is signed by Charles L. Zimmer, Hugh Jennings, and C. C. Griffith.

Jennings Signs as Cornell's Coach.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Hugh Jennings, first baseman of the Brooklyn National League baseball team, has finally decided to enter Cornell College of Law, to take a degree. He has been hired for three years by the Athletic Association to coach the Varsity baseball nine. Final arrangements were made and a contract with him for that time was signed by Manager Thomas to-day. The time of contract extends from Feb. 4, 1901, to June 22, 1904.

Columbia's New Ballot System.

The undergraduate Executive Committee of the Columbia University General Athletic Association, at its last meeting, announced the official nominations for manager and assistant manager of the football team for next year, and proposed a new method of holding elections. Instead of the mass-meeting system of election formerly in vogue, regular ballot boxes will be stationed in several of the University buildings with inspectors at each, and the polls will be open for five hours to give every student a chance to vote. In the stead of formal registration, the official student lists of the University will be used. The new scheme has been successfully tried at other universities, and its need at Columbia is readily felt when it is known that at the last election almost two hundred proxy votes were thrown out and not counted by the vote of the meeting. A fair trial will be given the new system on Jan. 10.

Live Bird Match a Tie.

A 100 live bird match was shot at the traps of the Carteret Gun Club at Garden City, L. I., yesterday afternoon between Robert A. Welch of this city and Harold Money of Oakland, N. J., resulting in a tie, with a score of 89 killed by each.

There were only two contestants in the weekly shoot of the Fountain Gun Club at the Interstate Park traps yesterday afternoon. Dr. Wynn won the 40-bird handicap with a score of 37 killed at 50 yards rise. J. Stewart (28 yards) killed 30 in addition to three which died out of bounds.

Governor May Interfere with Fight.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 20.—In regard to a rumor of possible interference with the projected Jeffries-Ruhlin fight at Cincinnati, Gov. Nash said to-day that he is opposed to prizefighting, which is a felony under the Ohio laws. The Governor said he had not looked up the law to see what his duties are, but that, whatever they may be, he will meet them fully.

COMPANY D'S ABEEL TROPHY.

Competition on Seventh Regiment's Rifle Range Ends in Close Contest.

Company D of the Seventh Regiment, with a total score of 631, won the fifty-eighth competition for the Abeel Trophy, which was concluded last night at the Seventh Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street. Company K's team, which made a score of 626 on the first night of the match, stands second to the winners. The finish of Companies D and K at the head of the list of teams entered is a reversal of the usual order, as out of the fifty-eight competitions held for the trophy, D and K have each won only once previously. The shooting in the present match fell considerably below the records. Company D's winning score of 631 points was divided into 322, made from the prone position, and 309 standing. The record total score is 649, made by both Company B and Company F. The record prone score is 340, held by Company C, and the best score made standing—324—is held by Company B.

Company D did not develop any remarkable shots in the present competition, but won out by the high average ability of members of the team. The individual scores follow, seven shots being fired standing and seven prone:

Nicholls Won from English Golfer.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Bernard Nicholls of Boston, Mass., played his first golf match in England to-day against Peter Paxton on the Tooting Bee Golf Club links. Nicholls was the victor by five up and four to play. The score was 81 and 86, and the course was 18 holes. The weather was miserable, the ground wet, and a high wind precluded even mediocre play.

Doings of College Athletes.

The organization of the Yale Fencers' Club has now been completed, and arrangements have been made for several contests with other teams.

Hugh I. Wilson of Philadelphia has been appointed manager of the Princeton freshman baseball nine. Wilson is also manager of the hockey team.

Oscar H. Perkins of Danvers, Mass., has been elected Captain of the Tufts football team for next year. Perkins was nominated by ex-Capt. Pierce, who refused a re-election.

A basket ball tournament, in which teams from Yale, Colgate, Union, Cornell, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, will participate has been arranged for Jan. 5 at Schenectady.

Jere D. Delaney, who has coached the Exeter track team for the past three years, will not return to the academy as coach next year. It is rumored that Dartmouth and Williams Colleges are trying to secure his services.

Villanova College is to have a hockey team this Winter for the first time. A large number of good hockey players are in the college this year, among them being Powers, who formerly played on the Holy Cross team.

Franklin and Marshall College has received a proposition from Swarthmore College to assist in arranging a four-cornered field meet, comprising Franklin and Marshall, Swarthmore, Haverford, and Rutgers Colleges. The proposition will probably be accepted.

The annual indoor athletic meet and relay races of the Boston Athletic Association will be held in Mechanics' Hall, Boston, on Feb. 16. Cornell has already accepted the invitation to enter, and it is expected that Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and other colleges will send teams to the meet, according to their usual custom.

Hockey is now occupying a prominent position in athletics at Cornell. Of last year's team the following men are again at practice: R. M. Roberts, '02; K. W. Woodward, '03; C. B. Brown, '03; G. M. Forrest, '02; E. B. Whitman, '01; W. J. Norton, '02; W. G. Warren, '03; A. S. Williams, '03; H. M. Wood, '02; L. F. Bruce, '03.

Yale's hockey squad, which will play a series of games in Western Pennsylvania during the Christmas holidays, will be made up of the following men: E. S. Bronson, P. G.; F. C. Inman, 1902, S.; T. After the holidays there will be a general call for candidates for the team, when all the new men will be given a chance.

Charles D. Speer has been elected Captain of the Gettysburg College football team for next year. Speer is a sophomore in college, and played left tackle on the Varsity last Fall. Clyde B. Welkert will manage the 1901 football team. The other managers of Gettysburg's athletic teams next season will be: Herbert Stifel, assistant manager of the football team; P. Harry Philson, 1903, tennis manager; Joseph M. Bordy, 1901, basketball manager, and C. S. Karmany, Captain of the track team.

Lead for Defender's Keel Arrives.

BRISTOL, R. I., Dec. 20.—W. Butler Duncan, Jr., who has been at the Herreshoff's works all day, left to-night for New York. Asked when the lead keel for the new cup defender would be poured, now that the lead has arrived, he said it would probably be started very early Saturday morning, which would give the keel a chance to cool during the Christmas holidays. The lead, about 100 tons in all, arrived this afternoon from New York.

Fully one-third of the pigs will be set in bulk, the remainder being melted and poured over them. Should the work of molding be commenced Saturday morning at 5 o'clock, it will probably be dark before the work is completed. The mold is built like that used for the Columbia, with the planking running lengthwise, the whole mold being shaped like a skiff, or ordinary boat. Everything is now in readiness for the running of the metal.

SCHOOL EXPENSES ATTACKED.

Merchants' Association's Experts Charge Board of Education with Bad Audit and Overcharges.

The Merchants' Association gave out yesterday an analysis of school expenses prepared by experts hired to do the work of examining the accounts of the various city departments and suggest changes for the economical administration of affairs.

The report claims that the official documents of the Board of Education are especially defective in statistics relating to average attendance in the schools. The report shows that the outlay for general supplies is extremely disproportionate between the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn. The experts claim that "every essential of effective audit and scrutiny is omitted" in the books and accounts of the Board of Education.

The report contains the following:

Because of the legal powerlessness of the Controller to check wasteful outlays of whose character he is aware, this city suffers heavily. I have personally inspected a large number of bills on file in the Controller's office whose original amounts were largely in excess of the market value of the articles and the services charged for. These large overcharges were pursuant to agreements or contracts entered into by city officials under statutory provisions which enable them to commit the city to the payment of such obligations.

While this particular form of waste of the people's money is not legal fraud, it is fraud in its essence. Because the Controller is unable to prevent it under existing conditions, it is desired to appeal to the Legislature for the necessary statutes to cure this evil. The city now loses many hundreds of thousands of dollars annually by it. The proofs will be forthcoming whenever the public wishes them.

Attached to the report of the experts is a table showing the comparative cost of educating a child in Manhattan and Brooklyn. The city spends from 17 per cent. to 55 per cent. more for various expenses of the Manhattan schools than is spent for like purposes in Brooklyn.

STATUS OF MR. COOGAN.

Mr. Whalen Wants the Courts to Pass Upon His Case.

It was said yesterday at the Corporation Counsel's office that Corporation Counsel Whalen was averse to deciding the question as to whether President Coogan forfeited his office when he voted in Southampton, L. I. Mr. Whalen thinks that such a serious matter as the election of a successor to President Coogan should not be undertaken until the courts have passed on the question as to whether he is legally in the office.

It was suggested that a taxpayers' action would be the best way to test the question.

MARKET MOVEMENT.

Recorded transactions on the stock market yesterday ran up to 1,590,000 shares, while actual dealings aggregated beyond the two million mark—in point of activity almost establishing a new record, and being exceeded only by one other day, on the Thursday following election. In the morning, and for the greater part of the afternoon, aggressive strength was shown under the leadership of Northern Pacific and Missouri Pacific, prices going up with a bound. Large financial interests continued as heavy purchasers, while London also came into the market as a purchaser, taking in all about 50,000 shares on balance. Cable advices reported a more confident feeling abroad, and the fact that the Bank of England did not feel called upon to advance its minimum discount rate was taken as indicating an assurance on the part of the Governors of the Bank that the money situation there does not present any alarming or disturbing phase.

In the afternoon a general selling movement set in all around the room by interests who had bought earlier in the week, and who desired to convert some of their paper profits into actual cash. Not unnaturally, this resulted in a sagging of prices throughout the list, the declines being the greatest in those issues where advances had been largest. The tone, however, was neither unhealthy nor weak, good buying appearing on the decline.

The reports received from Vanderbilt sources during the day had much to do with the general market strength.

Webb & Prall, usually credited with acting for Vanderbilt interests, were buyers of Wheeling and Lake Erie shares, while Standard Oil brokers, principally Welles, Herrick & Hicks, continued as purchasers of the shares. Officials of the company are reticent in respect to the significance, if any, of these purchases, saying only that they may be connected with the Standard Oil plans of development in the Ohio coal fields.

After Northern Pacific, Union Pacific was the most active railroad stock on the list, more than 100,000 shares being traded in at a net advance of a point. There was no news on the security one way or the other.

Erie shares continue to hold their strength, further advances being recorded yesterday on buying both for home and London account. Ever since the acquisition by Mr. Morgan of the Pennsylvania Coal Company speculative as well as investment sentiment has run strongly to the Erie shares, probably being helped by the rather indefinite report that the first preferred stock is shortly to be placed on a dividend basis. Undoubtedly it will be some time, but no official is as yet prepared to say when that time will be.

Sugar Trust stock gave another of its pyrotechnical exhibitions yesterday when on dealings involving some 106,000 shares it shot up to 133⅞, only in the last hour of trading to decline as sharply to 130½, at which figure it closed, marking the same figure as on the previous day. So far as could be learned, the upward movement had no more significance than a drive against the short interest.

In anticipation of the declaration of the 2 per cent. dividend on the preferred stock, officially assured, there was further buying of Kingston and Pembroke yesterday. The system owns some of the richest mineral deposits in Ontario, which are now being opened up.

The strength of the Grangers, under the leadership of St. Paul and Burlington, was on investment buying, principally for Western account. The old story of a probable increase in the dividend rate on St. Paul was revived, but officials here say that the dividend is not to be acted on for several months, and that any such talk is, to say the least, premature.

The sharp advance in Père Marquette stock followed a published statement to the effect that a movement is on foot to lease the road to the Vanderbilts on a 4 per cent. guarantee. Another report was that the property is to come into close relationship with the Northern Pacific, through Wisconsin Central connection.

Cotinental Tobacco's early advance was on buying induced by information that the Attorney General of Ohio had dismissed the suit against the company which was brought under the Ohio anti-trust law. Subsequently the stock reacted on profit-taking.

Amalgamated Copper's decline was in the face of the declaration of the usual quarterly dividend on the stock, 1½ per cent. and ½ per cent. extra. Profit-taking was held primarily responsible for the heaviness of the issue.

The Vanderbilt dividends were what had been expected, and had no market influence one way or the other.

Missouri Pacific's strength was largely the result of manipulation by a bull pool, members of which have been steadily absorbing the stock for some time.

Des Moines and Fort Dodge was again active and scored a net advance of three-quarters on trading in something over 2,000 shares. The renewal of activity in the stock again called attention to the recent reports in regard to the future of the road, but nothing of definite character was stated. It is said that the road is earning more than is required to pay the preferred stock dividend, and purchase of the road by the Rock Island, to which it is at present leased, is spoken of.

Money, instead of growing tighter, as pessimists had predicted, grows easier, some loans being made yesterday as low as 3½ per cent., with most of the loans at 5. The banks continue to gain from the Sub-Treasury and Saturday's bank statement should be a favorable one.

Notwithstanding difficulty with the cable wires and some little delay, London was a large buyer in this market yesterday, taking on balance probably 50,000 shares. This buying, it is insisted, is against options on Americans sold some months ago. Outgoing steamers are now taking large blocks of stocks for delivery to recent London buyers.

NORTHERN PACIFIC'S RISE.

Northern Pacific stocks were the features of the market yesterday, both in point of activity and of strength. No fewer than 206,000 shares of the common stock were traded in, the high figure marking at one time an advance from the low of nearly 7 points; while of the preferred, 47,000 shares changed hands, with an advance at one time to 91½, a gain of almost 4 points. In the late trading heavy profit-taking appeared, sending the prices down several points, but with the closing nevertheless marking a net gain of 3⅝ in the common stock and 1⅝ in the preferred. The ups and downs were violent and irregular, a half-point variation between sales being not infrequent.

Explanatory of the rise, attributed primarily to Morgan and Hill buying, was a statement said to be official, that a plan for a voluntary retirement of the preferred stock has been completed, to take effect in January, the equivalent being 130 per cent. in general lien 3 per cent. bonds. This is the same story that has been in circulation for several months, and that has never yet received official confirmation. Yesterday there was no one who could be found to confirm it.

TO AID A LOAN COMPANY.

Plan to Take the Real Estate of the Anglo American Association.

A meeting of the Directors of the Anglo-American Savings and Loan Association was held Wednesday night, at which funds were provided to finance a company which shall take the real estate burden off the association's hands. This new land company is to take preferred stock in the Anglo-American Association to the extent of $175,000 and provide this amount in cash to safeguard and care for the company's real estate, which otherwise might have to be disposed of at a sacrifice.

Edward B. Dickinson, the receiver of the company, when his attention was called to the plan of the Directors, said:

"The plan has not yet been presented to us, and we can therefore make no comment on it. We are open to any suggestions, and if we deem them to the interest of the stockholders will submit them to the court."

Mr. Russell of the firm of Russell & Winslow, attorneys for shareholders who made application to the Federal Court for a receiver, said:

"It is a revival of the old Empire State Real Estate Company scheme, which was the cause of our applying for a receiver. It is an attempt to give the Directors $175,000 more of preferred stock and save them from their liabilities."

TELLER SHORT $20,000.

Transfers Real Estate to York (Penn.) Institution to Secure It.

YORK, Penn., Dec. 20.—Harry K. Weiser, teller of the Security Title and Trust Company, a banking institution of this city, is said by the officials of the company to be short $20,000 in his accounts. The bank to-day posted a notice informing its customers that neither its capital nor surplus was impaired by the teller's shortage.

Weiser has secured the bank by transferring to it real estate valued at $20,000.

Weiser, since the exposure, has broken down, and lies at his home suffering from nervous prostration. As his habits were correct and he was a highly esteemed young man, the announcement of his shortage at the bank caused a sensation in this city. What he did with the money the bank is unable to say, as he is not in a mental condition to explain. It is believed, however, that he had been trading in the stock market.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

There was considerable irregularity in prices in the outside market yesterday, but at the close the majority of active issues showed better figures than those quoted the previous day. Activity developed in several issues which heretofore had supplied but a small part of curb transactions, notably in Sheet Steel preferred.

***

ELECTRIC BOAT, which for several days had held such a prominent place because of its strength and activity, was much quieter than on Wednesday, and the quotations for the common stock dropped substantially. This issue sold as low as 29⅝, and was later offered below that figure, closing with a net loss of nearly 3 points. The preferred stock held steadier, and closed unchanged at 50 bid. At a meeting of the Board of Directors held Wednesday it was decided to call the amount still due on the original subscriptions to the stock of the Electric Boat Company which still remain unpaid. Originally 25 per cent. was paid on the subscriptions, the balance being left to be paid as called by the Directors. Many large holders of the stock have since voluntarily paid the full amount due on their subscriptions, so that the present call affects but a small part of the company's stock. The payment is to be made in three installments of 25 per cent. each, due Jan. 3, Jan. 15, and Jan. 25. The weakness in the common stock yesterday was attributed to selling by some holders of subscriptions who desire to realize on the stock to meet the payment that has just been called. At yesterday's closing prices there was a premium of about 20 per cent. on the original subscription.

***

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was strong, but relatively inactive, the total trading amounting to little more than 1,000 shares. Early in the day it sold as low as 12½, but at the close it was bid up sharply by traders. Little stock was encountered, and the price advanced easily to 13½. It closed at 13¾ bid, a net gain of three-quarters of a point. It was announced yesterday that Isaac L. Rice, President of the company, had completed negotiations through which Vicker Sons & Maxim of England will undertake the introduction in Europe of the appliances of the Consolidated Company. It is claimed that the company's system of car lighting is superior to any system now in use in Europe, and the company expects to establish a large business in England and on the Continent. Friends of the company state that the success that its system has already met with in this country assures success abroad, and they claim that the contract which has just been made will result in very substantial benefit to the company.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred, for the first time since it has been traded in on the curb, showed transactions for the day amounting to several thousand shares. It sold from 73¾ up to 74½, and closed with a net gain of 1 point.

***

CRUCIBLE STEEL was another of the steel stocks to show considerable improvement. On fairly active trading it advanced about 1½ points, closing at 19¾ bid. The preferred stock was dull and practically unchanged.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE continued to be the most active of the steel group, but the price of this stock declined fractionally. The common sold down to 45, but closed at 45¼ bid, and the preferred stock closed at 95 bid, against 95½ bid on Wednesday.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER was active between 21 and 21¼. It closed with a slight net gain at 21½ bid.

***

UNION COPPER was quiet. All the sales of the day were made at 5½, but they did not exceed a few hundred shares.

***

NATIONAL CITY BANK and one or two other bank stocks showed much strength and advanced sharply, but the transactions were limited in amount.

***

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—Boston had a big market in Sugar, nearly 9,000 shares of it changing hands in the morning dealings. Trading was active also in Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Union Pacific, and the Copper shares. Amalgamated fluctuated narrowly between 94¾@93⅞. Copper Range was a leading feature in the mining group, rising 1¼ more, to 32; Tamarack stock rose 5, to 290, a new high record price; Elm River continues active, gaining ½ more, to 6, later reacting; Utah was more active than usual of late, holding at 33¾; Tri-Mountain maintained prominence, but eased to 20½; Winona was active, gaining ⅛, to 4½; Eureka rose ⅞, to 22⅜; other low-priced coppers were in high favor. Adventure, second installment paid, rose 1, to 10.

In the general list Massachusetts Electric continued strong, and home railroad shares generally were in strong request. Père Marquette preferred rose 2, to 72; Mexican Central, ½, to 14⅝. United States Oil held at 12, Central Oil selling at 12¾. Dominion Coal fell 1½, to 96, rallying to 97. American Telephone receded 1½, to 154; Monona 3, to 325; Butte 2, to 83. Centennial was ½ lower, at 22, and Cochiti, ¾, at 9½. Gas and Coke 5s fell 1, to 61, rallying ¾. Old Dominion eased ½, to 29½; Utah ⅛, to 33½; Mohawk, ½, to 23½.

At the Clearing House money between the banks loaned at 3½ and 4 per cent., mostly 4 per cent. New York funds sold at 5 and 8 cents premium for cash.

Call money is ruling from 5@6 per cent., with the most of the loans being placed at 5½ per cent. The governing rate for four to six months' collateral loans is 5½ per cent.; the very best of loans, however, would shade 5 per cent.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—Prices dragged along to-day in a perfunctory way, with alternate movements of strength and heaviness, but with the drift downward. After three days of neglect Union Traction rose strongly, but it was alone in this respect. The news of a threatened revolution in Venezuela knocked the asphalt issues down again, but there was excellent buying of the first 5s around 62. Lehigh Valley settled back to 29½. Philadelphia Electric, despite the award of a nine-hundred-thousand-dollar city contract, yielded to 4⅝. This was doubtless due to an impending payment of $1.25 due Jan. 1. Electric of America relaxed to 8½. Marsden was anything but buoyant.

Money rates continued at the same level that was reached last week, with a slightly brighter market than yesterday. Money was loaned at call at 4½ per cent., and time money brought 4½ to 5½ per cent., according to the length of the period and the securities offered. The demand for commercial paper was still far from good. The indications are that the market will continue dull until the first of the year.

THE LABOR LYCEUM BURNED.

Firemen Injured by Being Caught Under a Falling Wall.

The Labor Lyceum, extending from 949 to 955 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, was burned yesterday afternoon, causing a loss of over $40,000. Several firemen were injured by a falling wall. It was a frame building. The flames spread so rapidly that forty-six labor organizations which met in the building lost all their records.

The building belonged to the Labor Lyceum Association, and was erected in 1882. The lots upon which it stood were a gift of Dr. Geray. In the building was a library of 10,000 volumes. The fire was discovered shortly after 1 o'clock by Policeman Michaels, who saw smoke coming from a third-story window. Joseph Kelsch, the manager of the place, and six other employes were in the barroom. After telling them of the fire Kelsch turned in an alarm. When the firemen arrived two additional alarms were turned in. They found that it was impossible to save the structure, and turned their attention to saving the frame dwellings which surrounded it. There was much excitement, many families removing their valuables to the street.

The firemen injured were caught under a falling wall. They are:

Thomas Nash, Assistant Foreman of Engine No. 109; cut about the head and badly bruised.

William Maurer and Adam Hestel of Engine No. 13; cut about the head.

Joseph Callahan of Hook and Ladder Truck No. 50; slight burns.

Henry Hueck and Edward Munday were slightly burned. The building was insured.

J. NORRIS WING DEAD.

Well-Known Bibliophile Expires at His Home in This City.

J. Norris Wing, who died at his home in this city yesterday, was born in Prince Edward County, Va., Sept. 29, 1848. His father, a native of Maine, was a bridge builder and constructed some of the finest bridges in the South. He was a Union man, and after the siege of Knoxville removed to New York. Here the son was prepared for college, but, instead of entering, he became a clerk in the Mercantile Library, where he remained thirteen years, and rose to the place of Assistant Librarian. He then entered the employ of Charles Scribner's Sons as an expert at the head of the library department, and remained there till he was appointed Chief Librarian of the Free Circulating Libraries in May, 1889.

In 1883 he married Dr. Mercy N. Baker, and from that time their home was at 236 East Eighteenth Street, the house that Fanny Fern owned and occupied during her last years. Mr. Wing was a founder of the Booksellers' League, and was active in the work of the Good Government Clubs and the Citizens' Union. His knowledge of books was extensive, intimate, and accurate, not of the title pages only, but of the character and contents, and his advice and assistance were sought in the selection of them for hundreds of libraries.

THE STAGE AND THE CLERGY.

Dr. Newton Says They Are Drawing Closer Together Day by Day.

The seventh reception of the Actors' Church Alliance was held yesterday afternoon in All Souls' Hall, Sixty-fifth Street and Madison Avenue. Nearly four hundred members were present and Dr. R. Heber Newton, pastor of All Souls' Church, presided.

William H. Crane, who delivered the principal address, spoke on "The Dignity of the Actor's Profession." He said that an actor to be successful must work hard all the time.

The address of welcome was made by Dr. Newton, who observed that the stage and the clergy were drawing closer together day by day and referred to the work being done to secure for actors the right to have Sunday to themselves.

BABY'S CRIES WERE TIMELY.

Persons Imperiled by Escaping Coal Gas Saved by Them.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 20.—The cries of a baby saved the lives of his parents, aunt, and himself early this morning. Coal gas escaping from a stove would, according to the physician who was called in, have killed them and the baby within a few minutes.

The family is that of William P. Dando of this place. Mr. Dando was awakened by the baby's cries, and found himself ill and unable to get out of bed. He managed to get hold of a chair, and with this pounded on the floor until he awakened his father-in-law, Alonzo Schofield, who was sleeping in the room below. Mr. Schofield threw open the windows. The imperiled persons are now out of danger.

BUILDER KIGHT'S DIFFICULTIES.

Receiver of Rents of Big Apartment Houses Appointed.

Judge Leventritt of the Supreme Court yesterday appointed George L. Slawson receiver of rents of the big apartment houses at the southwest corner of Seventy-first Street and Central Park West, and on Central Park West, 50 feet north of Sixty-ninth Street, in suits brought against Alonzo B. Kight, the builder, by Henry Oppenheimer, to foreclose mortgages the amounts of which were not stated, but which come after prior mortgages of $130,000 and $140,000, respectively.

Mr. Kight consented to the appointment of the receiver. It was stated that there are a number of suits pending against him which are likely soon to result in entry or personal judgment. Mr. Kight recently finished building the Barnard apartment house, corner of Seventy-first Street and Central Park West, which he values at $1,000,000, mortgaged for $500,000. But it was stated yesterday that unable to obtain a permanent loan promptly and a number of mechanics' liens were filed against the property in the past few weeks. Nearly all of these creditors are friendly, it is stated.

The rent roll, when the building is full, is said to be $110,000 a year, and the house is nearly all rented, although it has been only ready for about two months. The bond of the receiver for this house was fixed at $25,000. The Pamlico, on Central Park West, between Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Streets, was completed a year ago and is valued at $250,000, mortgaged for $166,000.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 60 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

Mr. Shrady was served with the summons at No. 181 Broadway.

HENRY LE ROY PERSHALL.—Henry Le Roy Pershall, a clerk at 360 Third Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $6,708 and no assets.

ALLIE Z. STRAIGHT.—Allie Z. Straight, dressmaker, of 7 East One Hundred and Sixth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $12,231 and no assets. The debts were contracted principally in Paris and Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1892 and in this city in 1899 and 1900.

EDWARD C. WILLIAMS.—Edward C. Williams, real estate agent at 1,910 Seventh Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $45,341 and no assets. Of the liabilities $1,220 are on individual notes and $44,091 are accommodation paper which he indorsed for the Gulf Phosphate Mining and Manufacturing Company at Charleston, S. C., in 1894.

PHILIP B. VEILLER.—Philip B. Veiller, residing at 125 East Fifty-seventh Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $14,957, contracted in Chicago, Philadelphia, and this city, of which $6,490 is secured. His assets consist of $50 cash, two life insurance policies of $4,000 pledged for loans, and two bonds of $1,000 each of the American Book Company of no market value, also pledged for a loan.

JULIUS BOHM.—Julius Bohm, residing at 128 East Ninety-fifth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $81,619 and no assets. He was formerly of Bohm Brothers, manufacturers of pearl buttons at 472 and 474 East Houston Street, who made an asignment on July 20, 1896, and all his debts are on account of that firm. Rudolph Bohm, the other partner, received a discharge in bankruptcy on Dec. 12.

MARY J. HOWELL.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed here against Mary J. Howell of Poughkeepsie by Marietta Ludington of 44 East Sixty-ninth Street, New York, a creditor for $1,000 on two notes, which were indorsed by Mary J. Howell. It was alleged that the defendant is insolvent, and in the past four months has given a deed of real estate to Henry C. Barker, and also two mortgages for $2,750 and also gave a mortgage to the City National Bank of Poughkeepsie for $9,500 and to Catherine T. Akin for $3,000.

MONTGOMERY & PATTISON.—William Montgomery and Henry J. Pattison, composing the firm of Montgomery & Pattison, plumbers, of 250 West Eighteenth Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $18,221 and nominal assets $9,033, consisting of notes, $2,177; stock in trade, $800; tools, $400; wagon, $100; book accounts, $6,606. They also have a judgment for $6,000 against Platt & Marie, which it is stated is not known to be of any value. Each partner has individual assets of $50, consisting of vacant lots at Yonkers. They have been in business since 1886, and were previously for sixteen years journeymen in the employ of the United States Government, one in the Treasury and the other in the Navy Department.

MARCUSE & MIDDAGH.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed here against Harry R. Marcuse and John J. Middagh, composing the firm of Marcuse & Middagh, clothing dealers, at Kingston, N. Y., by the following creditors: The Roberts-Wicks Company of Utica, $4,639; Emma Middagh of Kingston, $300, and Henry B. Crouch of Kingston, $40. It was alleged that they are insolvent, and committed an act of bankruptcy by Mr. Marcuse acting on behalf of the firm on Dec. 15, removing all the stock from the store, 299 Wall Street, Kingston. The goods were packed up in the night time and put on a railroad car to be shipped away from Kingston, it is declared, but are still in the car on the track there. It was also alleged that Mr. Marcuse then left for parts unknown, taking with him substantially all the money of the firm, and that he shipped a box containing goods by express to J. E. Harris, said to be a brother-in-law, at 415 Central Park West, New York, and also took away the books of account.

A DRY COLOR TRUST.

Its Formation with Over $3,000,000 Capital Almost Assured.

A majority of the twenty-three dry color making firms in this country were represented at a meeting held in the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon, when preliminary plans were drafted to form a combination of the various interests in the trade to the end of forming a dry color trust. Some of the members of firms who could not attend in person sent letters stating that they indorsed such a movement.

Orville P. Allen, an attorney, who is forming the combination, called for the appointment of a committee to appraise the real estate, machinery, and other holdings of the various factories, and the following were named: George S. Mephin of G. S. Mephin & Klein, St. Louis, Mo.; C. K. Williams, Jr., of C. K. Williams & Co., Easton, Penn.; J. M. Wells of Wells & Hall, Ogdensburg, N. Y.; William Conners of the American Lead Company, Troy, N. Y., and Henry C. Stewart of the S. P. Wetherill Company, Philadelphia, Penn.

It is expected that the committee will report by Jan. 15 and the formation of the trust is almost assured from the expressed feelings of those who attended yesterday. Many of the firms willing to enter the trust have been in business for many years and own valuable patents and trade marks. The combination will probably be known as the United States Dry Color Company, and the capital, based upon information already obtainable as to the value of the plants, &c., will be between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

Whitestone Forge Works to Reopen.

The Whitestone (L. I.) Forge Works will resume business on Jan. 2. The plant closed down last month and over 100 men were thrown out of employment. It is stated that on the reopening of the plant, work will be begun on a number of orders obtained from the Government.

Snyder Harris, Bassett & Co.'s Failure.

Arnold Kohn, assignee of Snyder Harris, Bassett & Co., wholesale clothing dealers, of Philadelphia, who made an assignment Wednesday, came to New York yesterday and had an informal talk with the New York creditors at the rooms of the Merchants' Mutual Protective Association, 346 Broadway. The liabilities are about $300,000, of which $200,000 is for borrowed money and $100,000 for merchandise. Mr. Kohn thought the assets were enough to pay dollar for dollar, and that the bank and money creditors would do whatever the merchandise creditors would do. Nothing definite was decided upon.

TWO BRITISH VICTORIES

Gen. French Routs 2,500 Burghers at Thorndale, Cape Colony.

BOER DEFEAT AT HOUTKRAAL

All Cape Colony Districts Near the Orange River Said to Be in More or Less Open Revolt.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 21.—Gen. French has routed 2,500 Boers at Thorndale. The burghers had four guns and a pompom. Thorndale is sixteen miles northwest of Krügersdorp.

The fight took place on Dec. 19. The British had fourteen wounded. The Boers fled in disorder, with about fifty killed.

The Boers who invaded Cape Colony had in most cases pack horses in addition to those they rode. All were in the pink of condition. They commandeered all possible clothing and stores at Venterstad.

Martial law will be proclaimed in Worcester, Wellington, and Stellenbosch.

Heavy rains are general, and several railway washouts delay the movements of troops.

Gen. Brabant, commander of the newly raised Colonial Division, has been ordered to the front and will start to-morrow.

Gen. Baden-Powell will start for the Transvaal to-morrow.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—A dispatch from De Aar, Cape Colony, says that the Yeomanry have driven the Boers out of Houtkraal, the enemy retiring westward.

From its Cape Town correspondent The Daily Mail has received the following:

"The second invading force was designed to occupy Britstown, but being checked by the De Aar troops, it has disappeared into the Cradenberg Mountains.

"An enormous concentration of troops is being made upon the belt country occupied by the invaders, but it is not likely that the Boers will offer battle in large numbers. There is a renewed demand for the wholesale proclamation of martial law."

"We understand that private reliable advices have been received in London," says The Daily Mail, "to the effect that virtually all the districts of Cape Colony in the vicinity of the Orange River are in more or less open revolt, and that there is likely to be sharp fighting on a smaller scale before the invasion is crushed. The tactics of the Boers in rallying as many as possible of the Dutch in the back country to their cause are proving successful."

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 21.—The Boers attacked Zunfontein on Dec. 18, but were beaten off.

BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS.

Mounted Men and Horses to be Hurried to South Africa—Big Pay for Imperial Yeomanry.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The War Office made the following announcement last evening:

"In view of the general position in South Africa, the following reinforcements of mounted troops have been arranged:

"Eight hundred will start next week. Two cavalry regiments have been ordered to leave so soon as the transports are ready.

"The Colonial Police will be increased to 10,000. Detachments will leave as fast as they are formed. Further drafts of cavalry will be dispatched at once. Australia and New Zealand have been invited to send further contingents.

"Three thousand extra horses, beyond the usual monthly supply, have been contracted for."

The Secretary of State for War, the Right Hon. William St. John Brodrick, announces that in view of the prolongation of the war in South Africa, members of the Imperial Yeomanry will be paid 5 shillings instead of 1 shilling and 2 pence per day. To militiamen is promised priority of return over regulars.

As the outcome of statements made in the course of the recent session of Parliament, and since reiterated, to the effect that some of the colonial troops have refused to fight again, the War Office late last evening issued the following explanation from Lord Kitchener:

"A number of men belonging to two of the South African corps refused to march on one occasion, owing to some mistake in carrying out their discharge at the expiration of their term of service.

"Lord Roberts, on the ground that they had a grievance, overlooked the matter, simply reprimanding them.

"The men of both corps have since done good work in the field, and it is absolutely unfounded to say that there was a mutiny or that guns or any other force was used against them. It is considered cruel to publish an incident which all concerned regret."

DE WET'S SPLENDID CHARGE.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Dec. 20.—The details of Gen. De Wet's escape from the encircling British columns furnish one of the most remarkable incidents of the war.

When Haasbroek's command joined De Wet, on Dec. 12, some fifteen miles east of Thaba N'Chu, Gen. Knox was only about an hour distant, and the Boers' situation appeared desperate. But De Wet was equal to the occasion. Dispatching Haasbroek westward to make a feint at Victoria Nek, De Wet prepared to break through the British columns at Springhaan Nek Pass—about four miles of broad, flat, unbroken ground. At the entrance were two fortified posts, while artillery was posted on a hill eastward, watching the Boers. Suddenly a magnificent spectacle was presented. The whole Boer army of 2,500 men started at a gallop, in open order, through the nek. President Steyn and Piet Fourie led the charge, and De Wet brought up the rear. The British guns and rifles boomed and rattled incessantly. The Boers first tried the eastward route, but, encountering artillery, they diverged and galloped to the foot of the hill to the westward, where the fire of only a single post was effective.

The whole manoeuvre was a piece of magnificent daring, and its success was complete, in spite of the loss of a fifteen-pounder and twenty-five prisoners.

The British force sent after Haasbroek came in contact with his commando at nightfall. The burghers were scattered, and the Welsh Yeomanry galloped among the retreating Boers, using their revolvers and the butt ends of their rifles with great effect.

An incident of the fight was the gallop of a British ammunition wagon right through the scattered Boers, the gunners using their revolvers freely.

MR. KRUEGER'S PURPOSE.

W. T. Stead Returns to London After Conference with Boer Statesman—Latter Only Wants Arbitration.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—William T. Stead has just returned from The Hague, where he has had a long conference with Mr. Krüger, and has ascertained at first hand the views of Mr. Krüger and his counselors as to the present situation and future prospects. Mr. Stead has written the following:

"First of all nothing is decided about Mr. Krüger's visit to America at present. President Krüger has not abandoned all hope of securing the support of the Governments of the civilized world in his demand for arbitration. Until the last Government refuses absolutely to say a word in support of the principles which they solemnly laid down at The Hague Conference, Mr. Krüger will not take part in popular demonstrations. It is recognized that if he cared to do so he could shake the Continent. The popular enthusiasm for him is unparalleled since Garibaldi's visit to London, but until his diplomatic mission is exhausted an appeal to the peoples cannot even be taken into consideration.

"Mr. Krüger is emphatic in disclaiming any desire to involve other nations in war on behalf of the Boers. What he asks is that the Governments which at The Hague declared their determination to use their efforts to secure amicable settlement of disputes by means of mediation and arbitration should make a united effort to bring the verdict of the civilized world to bear on Great Britain.

"'The English,' Mr. Krüger said, 'are waging this war in South Africa like savages. They are burning homes, destroying dams, cutting trees, devastating fields, and creating famine. They are unable to capture De Wet, and they are making prisoners of women and children, who are not treated with ordinary decency. Hundreds of women have been confined in a prison kraal near Port Elizabeth with only one chair, and several of them are expecting to be mothers.'

"Mr. Krüger avers that the provisions of The Hague Convention and the laws and usages of war are trampled under foot, and he wants to know whether the signatories of this convention have anything to say on the subject.

"The Man on Horseback at this moment is not Mr. Krüger, but President Steyn. He, Schalk Burger, and De Wet are masters of the situation, having a better disciplined and more effective force than that which followed the vierkleur at the outbreak of the war. They have plenty of ammunition, and replenish their stores continually from the British convoys. They have taken enough Lee-Metford rifles to arm all the burghers now in the field. I cannot put their position better than in the words of one of Mr. Krüger's counselors:

"'England is our accuser. England is the sole witness against us. England is the judge. England is the executioner, and England hopes to profit by our death. We appealed for arbitration before the war. We are fighting for arbitration today. We have the right to expect the sympathies of the civilized world.'

"I found Mr. Krüger hale. His bearing is not so good as it was. His mind moves somewhat more slowly; but, every now and then, the old fire flashes from his eyes and you hear the deep, resonant voice, which has so often rallied the burghers in battle.

"Queen Wilhelmina is kindness itself. She has displayed pluck, in remarkable contrast to the timidity of many of her official advisers.

"I found the old man's spirits unshaken by his reverses. He disclaimed any desire to humiliate England, and said they only wanted their rights.

"I may interest Americans to know that Mr. Krüger's appeal to the civilized world would be received everywhere with unanimous enthusiasm were it not for the deep-rooted distrust and jealousy of the dynasties of Hapsburg and Hohenzollern against the President of a republic. If he were a King, the courts would have been open everywhere. But the Central European monarchs dread the popular enthusiasm excited by the heroic figure of the Republican President pleading for justice.

"This feeling, it is well to note, is not shared by Russia.

"The Boers will not listen to any proposals for a compromise. They are unanimous. Failing independence or arbitration, they will prefer to die fighting."

Hesse Arbitration Motion Defeated.

DARMSTADT, Dec. 21.—By the President's casting vote the Second Chamber today defeated a motion to instruct the Hessian representatives in the Bundesrath to propose the assembling of the Foreign Affairs Committee, with the object of initiating a proposal for arbitration between Great Britain and the Transvaal. Twenty-two votes were cast each way. All the Anti-Semites and Social Democrats favored the motion. The representatives of the Government left the House before the debate on the motion.

COMING VANDERBILT WEDDING.

Mrs. French to Hire Automobiles in Newport for Use of the Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 21.—On Wednesday next will begin the work of opening The Breakers on Ochre Point for the reception of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, her children and relatives, and a number of friends, who will arrive about the first week in January for the wedding of Alfred G. Vanderbilt to Miss Elsie French, on Jan. 14.

For the work of removing the heavy storm windows and doors, which is a considerable undertaking, bids have been asked for from the building contractors by Mrs. Vanderbilt's representative, who will award the contract on Monday.

Mrs. French has arranged with the automobile company here for the use of all the machines at their depot for the use of the guests at the wedding, but in case of heavy snow, sleighs will be called into use instead.

The wedding gowns to be worn by Miss French, as well as those for her mother, arrived from New York to-day in a half-dozen large waterproof boxes.

GIFTS TO 30,000 EMPLOYES

American Express Company Distributes $150,000.

Each, from Highest to Lowest, Receives a $5 Gold Piece—Company Celebrates Its Jubilee.

One hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold was distributed in Christmas gifts by the American Express Company among its employes in the United States and Canada. Each of the 30,000 employes received a brand-new five-dollar gold piece of the mintage of 1900, together with a beautifully printed souvenir containing an abbreviated history of the company since its formation, in 1850, to the present day.

No distinction was made in the distribution, the manager of a department or Superintendent of a division receiving no more than the driver or helper or clerk. The only requirement made by the company was that the employe sign a receipt and certify that he had been in the company's service continuously for the past twelve months. Those who had not served for that length of time were disqualified as recipients.

"The company," said C. O. Smith, manager of the Eastern financial department, "desired to make the last Christmas of the century memorable to its employes. It made equal distribution because the Executive Board desired, by so doing, to impress upon the mind of even the most menial employe that his faithful services were appreciated quite as much as those of the highest official."

On the first page of the souvenir that accompanied each gold piece was printed the following greeting by President J. C. Fargo:

The company having reached in the year 1900 a half century of existence, and desiring to commemorate the event and also to recognize the faithful service of its employes during the year past, takes pleasure in handing you with this a slight token of the occasion, with its best wishes and the compliments of the season.

The souvenir also contains a copy of the advertisement that was published in the newspapers in April, 1850, notifying the public and all concerned of the absorption of the three old express companies, Wells & Co., Livingston & Fargo, and Butterfield, Wasson & Co., by the new corporation.

During the half century of the American Express Company's existence its capital stock has been increased from $150,000 to $18,000,000, and the number of offices from about 200 to 7,500 in the United States and Canada. ZOLA OPPOSES AMNESTY.

Declares Dreyfus Case Will Have to Be Reopened—Fears the "Terrifying Fifth Act."

PARIS, Dec. 22.—L'Aurore publishes this morning a seven-column letter from Emile Zola to President Loubet protesting in characteristically eloquent fashion against the passage of the Amnesty bill, which M. Zola stigmatizes as a "grave fault" of the government. M. Zola says:

"I am confident the day has arrived when this error of amnesty is recognized as well as the fact of the gross betrayal by the second condemnation of Dreyfus. It is the duty of the Government to put the Dreyfus case again in the hands of the Court of Cassation, and to allow all the cases connected with it to be fought out, thus giving to the French nation a lesson in truth and equity without which it will never be appeased. The Government, however, has decided upon an opposite course—decided to stifle the truth, thus plunging the country into a nightmare certain to last so long as the Dreyfus iniquity is not repaired."

M. Zola enumerates the accusations of the famous "J'accuse" letter, each of which he says has been proved; and he emphasizes the injustice to himself in "including me among a number of guilty men who escape under cover of the bill."

"I predict," he says in conclusion, "that the affaire is not yet finished. The fourth act was played at Rennes, but there is bound to be a fifth. People forget that the German Emperor is in possession of the truth, and will be able to throw it in the face of France when the hour comes. This terrifying fifth act is the one I have always feared, and the French Government ought not for a single hour to accept the terrible eventuality."

INFLUENZA IN CHICAGO.

The Disease Becoming Epidemic—Many Business Men Victims.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—Chicago is in the clutches of influenza. Many entire families are afflicted, and the disease is becoming epidemic. The disease is of a milder type than usual, and is chiefly prevalent among children.

Dr. F. E. Wynkoop, assistant bacteriologist of the Health Department, said: "I have found influenza bacteria at the rate of one in every seven cases, which is unusual at this time of year." According to the Health Department there is a more rapid increase in the disease this year than there was last.

Doctors in down town offices are besieged by business men who have influenza, and are anxious to continue their work. Business houses report that many employes are at their desks working in a listless manner as the result of slight attacks of the grip. Many policemen are confined to their homes. The Mayor is one of the victims.

CONTRACTOR DOODY GUILTY.

Convicted of Perjury in Connection With Trial of Robert W. Fielding.

The jury in the trial of Contractor Daniel Doody, indicted for perjury in connection with the trial of Robert W. Fielding, accused of conniving to defraud the City of Brooklyn while Deputy Commissioner of City Works, last night found Doody guilty of the crime charged. Doody, who had been under bail, was taken to Raymond Street Jail and locked up. He will be arraigned for sentence probably on Monday morning. The maximum punishment for the crime he has been found guilty of is imprisonment for twenty years.

It was on information given to the Grand Jury that indictments were found against Fielding and other Brooklyn city officials charging them with conniving with Doody to defraud the city in connection with contract work. On the second trial of Fielding, Doody, who was to be the star witness for the prosecution, astonished the District Attorney by showing a great lapse of memory. On the witness stand he failed to remember testimony he had given the Grand Jury, and which he had gone over with the District Attorney just prior to the trial of Fielding. This testimony related to "commissions" or percentages which Doody alleged had been paid by him to certain city officials in connection with contracts for city work. Fielding was acquitted of some time later Doody, as a result of his lapse of memory at the trial, was indicted by the Grand Jury for perjury.

The trial of the contractor on this charge, which lasted more than a week, was concluded yesterday morning. Counsel for Doody attempted to prove that the accused was a paretic and not responsible. The jury took a long time in arriving at a decision, being out from 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning until 9:05 o'clock last night before finding a verdict.

BRITISH ISLES STORM SWEPT.

Great Damage to Property in Scotland and Ireland—Several Persons Killed Near Glasgow.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The storm appears to have reached its height during Thursday night, and while the gale is still severe and the seas very heavy, it is hoped that the worst is over. Stories of wrecks and damage are coming from all directions.

The gale blew with almost hurricane force at times. Telegraph lines went down in all directions; communication with Scotland was cut off; the Mersey ferryboats suspended service, and Channel passages were the most tempestuous in years.

The telegraph wires are being slowly restored, and news is now arriving. The gale has done great damage generally in the north of England and Scotland. A Glasgow correspondent says:

"Not since the storm which destroyed the Tay Bridge has such a gale raged in Scotland. High walls have been wrecked in Glasgow. At Coatbridge, ten miles east of Glasgow, several people have been killed, while at numerous other places roofs and chimneys have been destroyed and persons injured. Some of the buildings of the University of Aberdeen have been seriously damaged, and everywhere telegraph wires, telephones, and railway lines are interrupted."

The storm at Belfast and in its neighborhood was the most severe in a decade. Great damage was done to property, many persons were injured, and Belfast Lough is crowded with vessels which have sought shelter from the wind's fury.

The British ship Clan Macfarlane, (from Tocopilla, Oct. 20, for the Channel,) drifted on a sandbank north of Southport. A lifeboat went out to her and found that she had been abandoned. Her sails were blown to shreds and she will probably be a total wreck.

Skibbereen reports the British steamer Allsawald on the rocks off Sherkin Island. She will be a total wreck. Her crew of twenty-four men is reported to have reached the shore. The Allsawald, Capt. Bovey, sailed from Penarth on Dec. 19 for Bermuda.

The Dominion Line steamer New England, which sailed on Thursday from Liverpool and yesterday from Queenstown, for Boston, had such a bad time in the Channel that several of her crew were injured.

THE CUFIC STILL AT ANCHOR.

Liner May Be Towed to Liverpool When the Weather Moderates.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The latest news of the White Star liner Cufic, which was abandoned on Thursday off the Skerries while on her way from Queenstown to Liverpool in tow, is that she is still riding heavily at anchor a mile southwest of the Skerries.

According to the latest information it is hoped that the Cufic may be towed to Liverpool as soon as the weather moderates.

CUT DOWN BY OCEAN STEAMER.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 21.—A special from Portsmouth, Va., says:

Cut down in the darkness by a big ocean steamship, the little schooner Emblem, Capt. George B. Marshall, went to the bottom in Hampton Roads shortly before daylight this morning.

The sailors reached the deck just in time to seize the dory, which was being towed astern, and, drenched and shivering, made their way to Old Point.

The name of the vessel which struck them is unknown. The vessels of the North Atlantic Squadron sent boats to the assistance of the shipwrecked crew.

SCHOONER JENNIE HALL LOST.

CAPE HENRY, Va., Dec. 21.—By telephone from Dam Neck Station, it is learned that the schooner Jennie Hall, Capt. Lamson, from Trinidad to Baltimore, which stranded eight miles south of Cape Henry at 4 A. M., will be a total loss.

The Captain and two men were drowned. Their bodies are not yet recovered. Four men nearly died from exposure, but were rescued in the breeches buoy.

One man still clung to the mizzen crosstree. Two life savers went off in the breeches buoy to save him, but, being a large man and benumbed by cold, they could not lift him into the buoy. Notwithstanding the terrific surf, Capt. Barco and his crew then launched the lifeboat. They went alongside and put two men on board the schooner. The lifeboat then came ashore, leaving the two life savers on the wreck. The rescuers succeeded in getting the sailor into the buoy and he was hauled safely off, the two life savers following. One of the surfmen was washed out of the lifeboat, but was rescued.

Schooner N. H. Skinner Wrecked.

LEWES, Del., Dec. 21.—The schooner N. H. Skinner, lumber laden, Capt. Wheatley, from Wilmington, N. C., for New York, stranded this morning near Cape Henlopen. Several attempts were made to haul the schooner into deep water without success. The heavy seas washed over her and she filled with water and began breaking up, and the position of her crew of nine became so dangerous that the life savers brought them ashore in the breeches buoy. All hopes of saving the schooner have been given up.

The Mound Oswald Ashore Off Florida.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 21.—The large English steamer reported ashore last night on Elbow Reef, thirty-five miles south of Miami, is said to be the Mound Oswald. It is coal laden, and is being discharged by wreckers. The steamer probably will be saved. Several small wrecks are reported along the coast to-day.

The Westernland Sighted.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The Belgian steamer Westernland, Capt. Ehoff, from Antwerp, Dec. 15, for New York, which passed the Lizard on Dec. 19, was sighted to-day, attended by two tugs.

GIRL SANTA CLAUS AFLAME

Carrie Hanley, a Public School Pupil, Horribly Burned.

Costume Caught Fire from Gas Jet During Christmas Tree Celebration—Injuries Probably Fatal.

Just as the Christmas tree celebration of Public School No. 44, in North Moore Street, was beginning yesterday afternoon, a little fourteen-year-old girl, Carrie Hanley, who was playing the part of Santa Claus, caught fire by going too near a lighted gas jet. All the efforts of the Principal, Janitor, and some of the other children to put out the blaze were unavailing, and the child had been wrapped in flames for fully ten minutes before the firemen arrived and turned the hose on her. She is now lying in the Hudson Street Hospital, where it is said that there is scant hope for her recovery.

Miss Ella Conway, Principal of the music department of the school, was badly burned on the hands and arms while trying to help the child, and Veronica Schwab, a ten-year-old girl, who was decked out in a garb like a nightgown for the part of the wife of Santa Claus, was painfully but not seriously burned. When the accident happened there were 200 or more children and their parents in the big schoolroom on the second floor, and when the flames settled on the little girl's head and then jumped into the midst of the gorgeously ornamented Christmas tree beside her, a scene of the wildest confusion began. Over one another in utter disorder ran men, women, and pupils. When the firemen, summoned by a call from the schoolroom, arrived, every one except the teachers, janitor, and a few of the bolder pupils had reached the street, where, augmented by a crowd that had been attracted from all the neighborhood, they waited anxiously to hear the fate of the little girl.

When the trouble arose the work of distributing the presents from the Christmas tree was about to begin. The audience, largely composed of happy children who were to receive gifts, filled every seat in the room, many being forced to stand up in the rear. There were two trees, one on each side of a raised platform in the front. Between these Carrie Hanley was dancing about, jingling in one hand a toy. She danced too close to a flaring gas jet. The jet was high enough for people to pass under it ordinarily, but the child had on her head a tall cotton hat that rose to a point and looked exactly like the pictorial headgear of Santa Claus as he steps from roof to chimney. As the wearer sped under the light a tuft of the cotton caught fire. All eyes had been turned toward the child, so there was nobody in the room but who saw the danger.

Miss Conway, who was on the platform, putting the finishing touches on the trees, rushed toward Carrie, who was madly endeavoring to loosen the tall hat from her head while the fire ran downward and leaped to her shoulders, igniting the flowing robe of fluffy cotton that covered her to her feet. But the hat was fastened tightly, and it was only with much difficulty that the Principal succeeded in dragging it loose. By that time the flames had entirely enveloped their victim, and a stray gust of air had blown some of them into one of the Christmas trees.

As Miss Conway was struggling heroically to save the little girl, Policeman Jacob Rogers heard the shrieks of the children and rushed into the school. Seeing the Principal endangering her life, he pulled her away from the child. Then, after sending out a messenger to turn another fire alarm, one having already been sent from the adjacent house, he worked with the janitor in trying to put out the flames on the Santa Claus.

Meanwhile, when it became evident that there was about to be a panic in the rush of the crowd to the street, Miss Amelia Wedekind, the music teacher, ran to the piano and began to play a march, shouting to the children to fall into line and get out in files of twos. By a few the command was obeyed, and it was doubtless due to that fact that the race downstairs was not attended by serious accident.

The efforts of the policeman and his helper to put out the fire on the little girl were fruitless, and she was still burning when the firemen came. Ten minutes later after the blaze had jumped to her hat from the jet. The hose was pointed toward her, and as the stream of water left her wreathed in a light film of smoke she writhed on the floor in pain. An ambulance arrived from the Hudson Street Hospital as those in the room were trying to dry her wet and charred clothing by wrapping her in towels and pieces of cloth. When she was taken to the hospital it was found that the fire had hardly missed a part of her body from head to foot, and, although everything possible was done for her, the physicians said that she had little chance of living.

Miss Conway's burns, which were on her hands and arms, were dressed at the hospital, after which she went home. The other little girl who was burned was taken home, where she was found to be so slightly hurt that her parents could care for her.

The fire, which was speedily quenched after the firemen came, did little damage to the room, and even some of the presents on the injured tree were intact. None of the scholars received their gifts.

TO START A RIVAL FACTORY.

Directors of Berlin Iron Bridge Company to Open a Concern at Kensington, Conn.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 21.—It is announced to-day that three of the best-known Directors of the Berlin Iron Bridge Company have withdrawn from the company and are to establish a rival concern at Kensington, occupying the old Yale Brick Company's plant. The incorporators of the new company are D. E. Bradley and George H. Sage of Berlin and Seymour N. Robinson of New York City.

The new company will ask for incorporation rights at the coming Legislature, and will start their factory early in the year. The new company will take contracts for river and railroad bridges and will be represented abroad.

NEW YORK BONDHOLDERS WIN.

Mexican Court Grants Foreclosure Against Sonora Irrigation Co.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Hermosillo, Mexico, says:

The property of the Sonora and Sinaloa Irrigation Company, which consists of 550,000 acres of land situated in the Yaqui River Valley of the State of Sonora, and one of the most extensive irrigation plants in Mexico, representing a total value of $1,500,000, will pass into the hands of the New York bondholders of the company.

Walter S. Logan of New York City, as trustee for the bondholders, brought suit some time ago before the Judge of the Second Civil Court, in the City of Mexico, for foreclosure of the mortgage, the amount of which is $600,000. Word has just been received at Hermosillo that the Judge has rendered a decision foreclosing the mortgage and ordering that the necessary notices be posted on the property. The Mexican stockholders of the company have entered a formal protest against the foreclosure proceedings and claim that the jurisdiction of the case lies with the Civil Court at Guaymas, State of Sonora. The question will be settled by the Supreme Court of Mexico.

KIDNAPPERS' HOUSE LOCATED.

Young Cudahy Identifies the Place Where He Was Kept Prisoner—Bank Furnished the Gold.

OMAHA, Dec. 21.—Young Cudahy to-day located the house in which he was held by the kidnappers. It is at 3,604 Grover Street, and the boy recognized it by certain features which left no doubt of its being the right place.

The house is four miles from the city, and in a place of easy access, but so situated as to allow the desperadoes ample opportunity to lay and carry out their plans without molestation from inquiring neighbors. Within easy communication by rail and wagon roads to Omaha and South Omaha, and on a high knoll where sentinels could give immediate alarm in case of necessity, the place was admirably chosen by the bandits.

It is an isolated structure, commanding a full view of the surrounding country for miles about. It is a two-story affair and has the ricketty stairway and other features described by the kidnaped boy. On the second floor was found a new well bucket containing water from which the boy had drank. About the room were found hundreds of cigarette stumps and burned matches and a small quantity of sugar and coffee.

Eddie Cudahy pointed out the exact spot in the north room where he lay from the time he was taken to the house Tuesday evening until removed Wednesday night. He indicated the broken stair step which he had previously referred to as where he slipped in going up stairs to his imprisonment.

Mr. Cudahy, after looking over the room which had been described by his son, returned to those with him and said:

"Boys, this is undoubtedly the place. I am fully satisfied."

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE.

That a woman is mixed up in the kidnaping case has devolved from the further investigations made, Dec. 2, a man driving a gray horse and a top buggy and accompanied by a young woman called at the office of James Schneiderwind, the owner of the Grover Street house, and when they drove away a few minutes later the man paid $1 on a month's rent to hold the house. To Mrs. Schneiderwind he gave the name of James L. Connor, and at her request wrote the name in her ledger in a disguised-looking hand. The next and last time Mrs. Schneiderwind saw the man he called alone on the morning of Dec. 6, paid the remaining $5 on the rent, and took the key.

Mrs. Schneiderwind described the man as between thirty and thirty-five years old, slightly above medium height, slender, quick in his movements, dark hair, and sandy mustache, and shifty gray eyes. He was dressed in a brown suit of clothes and a soft hat. The woman was younger than the man and fairly well dressed.

"The man asked me if the place was for rent and I told him yes," said Mrs. Schneiderwind. "I told him it was not in repair, but he said that would be all right. I told him the rent was $8 a month. Then the woman asked 'How much will you take to sell the place?' but the man hunched her and told her to be still, and then he told me he would take the place and pay a dollar on the rent to secure it. He asked the woman for the money, but she didn't have it, and, after looking in his pockets as though he had no money, he finally handed it out and said he would pay the rest when they moved in in a few days.

"When next I saw the man it was on the 6th, when he came for the keys and well buckets, saying he wanted to move right away. He told me we needn't call for the rent, but that he would be in every month and pay it himself."

B. K. Hunshaw, who lives 150 feet west of the vacant house, says that two weeks ago a light-complexioned man, with light hair, mustache, and perhaps twenty-seven years of age, called on him and asked about the vacant house. He referred the man to Schneiderwind. The man came in a top buggy, accompanied by a woman. Last Wednesday Mr. Hunshaw saw the same man at the well drawing water, but the woman was not visible. About ten days ago another man, dark-complexioned, dark mustache, sprinkled with gray, called to inquire about the house. He also was sent to Schneiderwind, who later thanked Hunshaw for sending him a customer.

Mr. Hunshaw says the dark man, when inquiring about the house, addressed him by name, and when in surprise Mr. Hunshaw asked him how he had learned it, the man said he had known Hunshaw eight years ago. When asked where, the man responded: "When I worked at the Cudahy packing house."

Other neighbors tell of movements about the house last Wednesday, showing its occupancy for two days only; but the occupants have completely disappeared.

Beyond locating the house in which the men were stopping prior to the kidnapping, the police have made no progress looking to a capture of any of the outlaws.

This afternoon an official of the Omaha National Bank confirmed Mr. Cudahy's statement that he had withdrawn from that institution the $25,000 in gold with which the latter states he paid the ransom to secure the return of his son.

NO LAW TO COVER THE CASE.

One thing that is puzzling the police at this time is how they can punish the kidnappers should they be captured, there being no law to cover the case. There is an offense known as "kidnapping" in the criminal statutes of Nebraska, which carries with it a penitentiary sentence on conviction ranging from two to seven years, but it only applies to kidnapping with the intention of carrying the victim outside of the State.

Another penitentiary offense defined by the Criminal Code is that of "child stealing," but this section, too, seems to have no application to the present instance, because it refers only to stealing children under ten years of age, while young Cudahy is already fifteen.

The suggestion has been made that the kidnappers might be held on the charge of levying blackmail, inasmuch as they used their possession of young Cudahy as a means of extorting money from his father, but nothing in the Nebraska statutes covers this phase of it.

So far as can be ascertained by the police in the examination of the law, the only charge which can be successfully brought against the perpetrators of this outrage is that of false imprisonment, which is not criminal, but merely a misdemeanor, subject to a fine and jail sentence only.

MRS. W. BECKWITH DIVORCED.

Robert T. Lincoln's Daughter No Longer Wife of the ex-Baseball Player.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Iowa, Dec. 21.—Jessie T. Beckwith, granddaughter of Abraham Lincoln and daughter of Robert T. Lincoln of Chicago, is no longer the wife of Warren Beckwith, the ex-baseball player of this city, according to a statement made to-day before the Probate Court here in the hearing of the case of James C. Whitford vs. Robert T. Lincoln.

The sensational courtship, elopement, and marriage of Miss Jessie Lincoln with Beckwith furnished society with plenty of gossip in 1897. The facts developed here when the case of Whitford vs. Lincoln was called in the Probate Court. It was stated that Mrs. Robert T. Lincoln, who was wanted as a witness, was in New York caring for her daughter and granddaughter, the latter having scarlet fever and the family being quarantined.

Whitford, who is a nephew of the late Senator Harlan, sues to secure $27,000 from the estate for services of twenty years.

DEVERY'S ORDER ANNULLED

Police Board Re-Transfers Deputy Chiefs to Former Posts.

ACTS ON WHALEN'S OPINION

Corporation Counsel Decides That the Chief Exceeded His Authority—Devery Refuses to Talk.

Chief William S. Devery was "reversed" yesterday by an opinion of Corporation Counsel Whalen that he had not the power to transfer, as he did on Saturday, Deputy Chief McLaughlin to the Borough of Queens and Deputy Chief Clayton to the Borough of Brooklyn. The Police Board by a practically unanimous vote acted on the opinion by directing Acting Chief Cortright to annul Devery's action, and he at once issued orders which put the Deputy Chiefs where they were on Dec. 14.

Corporation Counsel Whalen's opinion on Devery's right to transfer Deputy Chiefs, which was asked for by President York, was delivered at Police Headquarters early in the afternoon. Mr. Whalen, in deciding against the Chief's action on Saturday and saying that when, by resolution of the board, a Deputy Chief has been assigned to a borough, he cannot be transferred without the authority and direction of the Police Board, finds an apparent inconsistency in the charter. Section 292, he says, standing alone, would prevent any doubt of the absolute power of the Chief as the "chief executive officer of the police force," to assign to duty any officer or member of the force. Section 320, however, says:

There shall be one headquarters or central station, established and located by said Police Board in each borough into which the City of New York is divided by this act. A Deputy Chief of Police shall be assigned to duty by the Police Board at Police Headquarters in the Borough of Brooklyn, and, in the discretion of the Police Board, a Deputy Chief of Police may be assigned to duty at Police Headquarters in each of the other boroughs.

The question, the opinion says, is on the continuing power of assignment given to the board as opposed to the power of transfer given to the Chief. Mr. Whalen decides that the Chief had not the power to "assign" a Deputy Chief directly, so that he has not the power to assign indirectly by making a transfer.

All the Commissioners went into session when the opinion was received and President York offered this resolution:

It appearing from the report of the Chief of Police that he, on the 15th day of December, instant, transferred Deputy Chief P. H. McLaughlin from the Borough of Brooklyn to the Borough of Queens, and Deputy Chief E. P. Clayton from the Borough of Queens to the Borough of Brooklyn; and it further appearing that the President of the board had requested from the Corporation Counsel an opinion as to the powers of the Chief of Police to transfer Deputy Chiefs, and the opinion of the Corporation Counsel being now presented to the board in which he advises that the Chief of Police was not authorized by law to make such transfers,

Resolved, that the Acting Chief of Police be and is directed to forthwith order and direct Deputy Chief of Police P. H. McLaughlin to report for

ARTHUR W. MILBURY'S EDUCATIONAL WORK

Letterhead Used Without Authorization in Asking Funds.

Paper Bears the Names of Officers of the Committee of One Hundred on India Famine Relief.

Considerable comment and curiosity have been aroused among a number of persons recently who have received a typewritten letter signed by Arthur W. Milbury, and asking for money for educational work. These letters have been identical, except that the amounts asked for have varied in individual cases from $10 to $50. They were written on paper which bore the letterhead of the Committee of One Hundred on India Famine Relief, and the names of the officers of that organization, William E. Dodge, Chairman; L. T. Chamberlain, Chairman Executive Committee; Elgin R. L. Gould, Secretary; Arthur W. Milbury, Assistant Secretary; Frederick D. Green, Assistant Secretary, and John Crosby Brown, Treasurer.

The names of the Committee of One Hundred also appeared printed on the letterhead. With the letters sent to each person was inclosed a stamped envelope, bearing the name of the committee and its address: 23 Bible House, New York. The printed address on the envelope was,

Mr. Arthur W. Milbury,
23 Bible House,
New York, N. Y.,

and the full text of the letter was as follows:

Dear Sir: For several years I have been very earnestly engaged in public school work, the chief object being the preservation of the American public school system in its original integrity and the securing to public school graduates a thorough grounding in the fundamentals of education; in other words, my efforts and those of my associates have been in the line of endeavoring to hold the public schools to thorough training in the essentials of education, as against the tendency of the past few years to treat reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling, grammar, simple history, &c., with a considerable degree of contempt and to favor a widely extended curriculum, to the serious detriment of the essentials, so that boys and girls are graduated from the grammar and even from the high school with a superficial smattering of knowledge along a great variety of lines, but without thorough training in any, and totally unfitted for the practical duties of life.

We believe in giving the children as broad an education as possible. But we insist that the foundation be laid soundly.

My associates and myself have spent several thousand dollars in this work, and have never asked for a penny outside of our own small circle. The work is now at a critical point. We need it to the utmost in many instances, and I write to you in the hope that you will be willing to contribute $10. Checks may be drawn to my order.

Hoping that you may be able to respond to my appeal, I am, with cordial holiday greetings, very sincerely yours, ARTHUR W. MILBURY.

The indefinite wording of the letter and the fact that it appeared on the stationery of the Committee of One Hundred occasioned inquiry on the part of some of those who had received it, and it was learned that the use of the letterheads and envelopes purporting to be those of the committee was unauthorized.

William E. Dodge, when asked about the matter, said:

"The Committee of One Hundred has passed out of existence. Mr. Milbury was an employe of the committee, but his use of the letterheads and envelopes bearing its name for personal solicitation of funds is entirely unauthorized. I would not care to hurt Mr. Milbury in any worthy enterprise, if he has such on hand; but he certainly had no right to use such paper and envelopes."

An effort was made to see Mr. Milbury at the Bible House, but it was learned there that he is now located in Philadelphia, and only comes to the city on Saturdays. His address in Philadelphia is in care of the International General Company, Real Estate Trust Company Building, Broad and Chestnut Streets.

Mr. Milbury was for a number of years the Secretary of the Industrial Christian Alliance of 170 Bleecker Street.

"He was with this society for ten years," said Ralph Bryant, the present Secretary, "but left to do work for the Ecumenical Conference. He raised over $40,000 for them. I have heard him speak of some sort of educational work that he was interested in in New Jersey, but do not know its character."

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—Arthur W. Milbury is one of the Vice Presidents of the International General Company, which controls a dozen minor companies engaged in the manufacture of pegamoid, an artificial leather, and a number of kindred products. John H. Michener, a millionaire, and Henry K. Fox, a leading attorney, men who are closely identified with the corporation, ridicule the suggestion that Milbury has been guilty of any irregularities, and express unreserved confidence in him. Milbury is not in town to-night.

WOMAN WITNESS FAINTS.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Public interest in the trial of Edgar C. Burnz, charged with the murder of Herbert B. Fellows, the Searsdale station agent and Postmaster, is unabated. Mrs. Annie E. Burnz, mother of the accused, who was on the stand when court adjourned yesterday, resumed her testimony to-day. She said that her boy was a confirmed cigarette fiend. She had known him to smoke as many as eight packages of cigarettes a day. The boy always had a poor memory, she said. He would go to school for a short period, and then forget all he ever learned. He had suffered from toothache since he was three years old, and was subject to malaria every Spring and Fall. Mrs. Burnz said she had never known of any insanity in the Burnz family, with the exception of John Herbert Boardman, who had died in California.

Mrs. Margaret Moore was the next witness. She told of the boy's immoderate use of cigarettes, and said he had often complained to her of headaches. He had told her that he often felt as if he would like to throw himself under a railroad train. Mrs. Moore said she considered some of the boy's acts irrational.

Mrs. Catherine Hertin, daughter of Mrs. Moore, said that on one occasion when young Burnz was sick she had visited him and he had failed to recognize her. She also visited him in the White Plains Hospital, where he was suffering from sunstroke. She had heard him complain many times of pains in his head. The witness created a sensation in court at this point by falling in a faint, from which she was revived with the greatest difficulty.

Nellie Burke, a nurse in the White Plains Hospital, testified that she had been cautioned to watch Burnz closely, as he might attempt to jump out of the window. He smoked cigarettes almost continually. Ada Philpp, another nurse, also testified to the same facts.

Albert F. Knapp, the next witness, a patient in the hospital, had heard Burnz complain of pains in his head. They played cards and smoked cigarettes. They smoked about four packs a day.

The District Attorney asked the witness: "Did you see any of the nurses smoke cigarettes?"

Dr. H. G. V. De Hart of White Plains testified to having attended Burnz in the hospital. He appeared to him like an irrational person. He never noticed any odor of cigarette smoke.

The court then adjourned until Wednesday.

BALTIMORE BANK IN TROUBLE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The Controller of the Currency to-night appointed J. Frank Aldrich temporary receiver of the American National Bank of Baltimore, Md.

This bank, it is stated, has suffered a large shrinkage in deposits and has sustained some heavy losses which had involved its capital and surplus and reduced greatly its cash resources. The condition of its assets is such that the loss to depositors probably will be small.

At a meeting of the Clearing House of Baltimore this afternoon it was decided that in view of the condition of the bank no further credit could be extended to it, and the Controller being satisfied of a condition of insolvency, a receiver was appointed.

The last statement of the bank, made to the controller Oct. 25, shows the following:

RESOURCES.—Loans and discounts, $697,825.11; overdrafts, $12,743.51; United States bonds and premium, $100,000; real estate, $57,755.51; due from banks, $75,439.56; other resources, $68,587.67.

LIABILITIES.—Capital stock, surplus, and undivided profits, $299,428.71; circulating notes, $100,000; due to banks, $238,711.79; deposits, &c., $388,209.86.

MISS GRACE WAGNER A BRIDE.

Palace Car Official's Daughter Secretly Married to P. Roone Warner, a Bank Clerk.

Harlem society was surprised yesterday afternoon when the announcement was made that Miss Grace Wagner, the nineteen-year-old daughter of Robert C. Wagner of 1,911 Madison Avenue, an official of the Wagner Palace Car Company, was the bride of P. Roone Warner, a clerk in the Plaza Bank, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street.

The couple, according to the story given out, were clandestinely married on July 1 last at the parsonage of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. Johnson. A promise was exacted from the minister by the bridegroom to keep the wedding secret, the reason assigned being that the bride's mother was ill and the shock resulting from the news might entail serious results.

The secret might have been kept for an indefinite time had it not been for the bride, who is a teacher in the Sunday-school of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, at One Hundred and Twenty-first Street and Madison Avenue. She resigned her position as teacher a few days ago. When questioned as to the reason, her answers failed to satisfy her father. He persisted in his catechising, and she broke down and confessed.

The young couple, it appears, met at a ball given by the Builders' League in Harlem. They took a fancy to each other at once and danced together every waltz on the programme. Afterward the bank clerk became a regular caller at the Wagner residence, and when Miss Grace went to spend the Summer at the family's country place, in the Mohawk Valley, Mr. Warner went also. In June they became engaged, and on July 1 they slipped away, came to New York, and were married.

The usual "Bless you, my children" was said yesterday after a stormy interview, and Mr. Warner became a guest at the Wagner mansion.

THE VANDERBILT TAXES.

Heirs of Cornelius to be Assessed on $16,000,000 Worth of Personalty.

The heirs of Cornelius Vanderbilt will be assessed on $16,000,000 of personal property next year. President Feitner of the Tax Department said yesterday that he would take the schedule of the value of the personal property left by Cornelius Vanderbilt as the basis of personal assessment for next year. Prior to the death of Cornelius Vanderbilt taxes were paid on $400,000 worth of personal property—the amount levied by the Tax Department. President Feitner said yesterday:

"Now that the value of the personal property of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt is shown to be about $16,000,000, according to the appraisement made and the schedules filed in the Surrogates' office, and with the Controller, the Tax Department will, according to custom, on the second Monday in January, levy personal assessments on the heirs based on the value of the estate. The trouble is that it is only for a few years after the death of a wealthy man that the Tax Department has the chance to assess the heirs for the full value of their holdings. Personal property is transferred to avoid taxes, and they swear off millions. We cannot prove that legal transfers have not been made, and so the city is unable to collect full taxes. There should be some equitable system established for the assessment of personal property."

One of the members of the firm of Anderson & Anderson of 35 Wall Street, who are attorneys for the Vanderbilt interests, said yesterday that they would pay no attention to any declarations of Mr. Feitner as to what he would do, and that they would consider the matter only when the Department of Taxes had announced its action. He also said that he did not know what the value of the personal property which would be subject to taxes was, as no authentic list had been compiled, so far as he knew. He said he did not know whether the lists recently published in the newspapers were correct or not, as he had purposely refrained from reading them.

W. H. VANDERBILT TRUST FUND.

Appraiser Mazet Apportions It Among Cornelius Vanderbilt's Heirs.

Robert Mazet, as appraiser, filed with the Surrogate yesterday his report as to the present value of a trust fund of $5,000,000 left by William H. Vanderbilt to his son, the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, with power to the latter to dispose of the trust by will. Out of this trust fund Cornelius Vanderbilt left $500,000 to his son, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and the remainder to be divided between the other four children.

The appraiser found that the fund had increased to $6,421,092.50, and, after deducting the $500,000 payable to Cornelius, that Alfred G. and Reginald C. Vanderbilt should each have $1,480,273.12, and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Gladys Vanderbilt are each to get 1 cent more than the young men—that is, $1,480,273.13.

REPUBLICANS CONFER TO-DAY

Senator Platt and Others Will Consider County Chairmanship.

Senator Platt arrived from Washington last night, but he denied himself to reporters. It is understood there will be a conference to-day, at which the question of a successor to Gen. Greene as President of the County Committee will be discussed. The opinion prevails that William H. Ten Eyck will be selected and that he will take the place despite his disinclination to do so.

There is a good deal of talk, too, about Lemuel E. Quigg and James W. Perry, in connection with the place.

Governor-elect Odell is expected in town, and Mr. Quigg is due on an incoming steamer from Havana. Other prominent Republicans in town are Louis F. Payn, Senator Hobart Krum, Speaker S. Fred Nixon, Chairman George W. Dunn of the State Committee, Jacob Snell of Amsterdam, and half a dozen others.

Police legislation will receive some consideration at to-day conference, in view of the unexpected opposition to the single-headed commission bill that has developed among members of the County Committee.

SANTA FE STRIKE CALLED OFF.

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 21.—The strike of the telegraph operators on the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fé was called off to-night. The strike was inaugurated in Texas fifteen days ago.

No concessions were asked by the men or offered by the company as a preliminary to calling off the strike.

Movement Against Tammany.

David B. Hill is expected to attend the meeting at the Manhattan Club this evening and make an anti-Croker speech. John B. Stanchfield will also be there. The meeting as planned is to mark the opening of a movement for the organization of a Democratic Party in New York City to take an active part in municipal politics against Tammany Hall.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Fair, winds northerly.

The South Atlantic Coast storm has moved northeastward over the ocean, attended by strong northerly winds and rain or snow on the Middle Atlantic and South New England coasts. In the Atlantic Coast districts the weather will be fair, with rising temperature. By to-morrow rain or snow is likely to occur as far east as the Alleghany Mountains, and a decided fall in temperature will be experienced throughout the central valleys and upper lake region. Along the New England coast strong northerly winds will diminish in force to-day. On the Middle Atlantic Coast the winds will be light and variable. On the South Atlantic Coast variable winds will chift to fresh southeasterly. Storm signals are displayed from New Haven to Boston.

BOOZ'S WEST POINT FIGHT

Other Witnesses Corroborate Him—Booz Ran Around the Ring to Get Away from Him.

WEST POINT, Dec. 21.—The military court of inquiry, which is holding two sessions daily at the West Point Military Academy, ferreting out the alleged brutal cases of hazing which are said to have been the cause of the deaths of Cadets Booz and Breth, will not be able to finish its work to-morrow, but it is said all of the desired testimony will probably be secured by the end of next week.

To-day the story of the fight between Keller and Booz in Fort Putnam, on the 6th of August, 1898, was told by Keller himself as well as by some of the seconds and the sentinels who were posted to watch out for officers who might interfere and punish the party. They all agreed that Booz was not badly punished.

Nothing adduced in the evidence to-day showed that there was any brutal hazing practiced at the academy, and the trend of the evidence went to show that neither Booz nor Breth was possessed of the necessary mental capacity to go through the entire course of studies necessary for graduation.

Cadet Lewis Brown, Jr., of Rhode Island, who was one of Keller's seconds in his fight with Booz at Fort Putnam on Aug. 6, 1898, was directed by the court to tell all about the fight. He said:

I was one of Keller's seconds. Cadet Barnes was the other. I cannot remember the names of the referee or timekeeper, but the latter was of the class of '99. There were Boos and his two seconds, and we had three sentinels, Cadets Hayden, De Young, and Spalding, all of the new first class.

The contestants stripped to their waists, and met in the centre at the call of "time" by the referee. There were a few exchanges, and then Booz turned his back to Keller and ran around the ring. Keller followed and in consequence Booz got hit several times on his back. In the second round Keller landed a blow on Booz's eye, cutting it slightly. This was the hardest blow of the fight.

Before the second round was half over Booz lay down without having received a blow immediately before doing so. He would not get up. The reason we posted sentinels was that in case an officer should appear they could give the alarm, so that we might get away. Then I knew that you were violating the rules and regulations of the Military Academy?

Yes, Sir.

You say the men were stripped to the waist?

Yes, Sir.

Did you see any marks on Booz's body?

He had a black eye.

Any other marks? Was he hit on the mouth or was he bleeding from the nose?

No, Sir.

What were the relative proportions of the two men?

Booz was the taller and heavier.

Whom did you think would win?

From the looks of the men, I had my doubts of Keller being able to win.

Lieut. Frank W. Coe, instructor in mathematics at the Military Academy, testified that Cadet Booz was deficient in his mathematics. He was next to last in his section. He never could have passed his examination. He was mentally far below the standard required by the Military Academy.

Cadet Frank Keller, who had the fight with Booz, in reply to questions by Gen. Clous, described the encounter. He said:

I was chosen by a committee of my class to "call out" Cadet Booz, because he disobeyed the orders of the Corporal of the Guard and made insolent remarks in an uppercluss man.

I was told to weigh in, and I turned 150 pounds. Booz was 152 pounds. He was taller than I and had a longer reach than I had. We were to Fort Putnam on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 6, 1898. The referee was Cadet J. B. Wray.

We stripped to the waist, and my seconds told me I had a tough customer to meet and to do my best. For thirty seconds, after the call of time, Booz showed a little fight, as he struck me a couple of times about the shoulders. I struck him under the left eye, cutting it slightly.

After this I found great difficulty in getting to him, as he turned his back and kept running away. I frequently told him to face me or I would hit him in the back. I did hit him a couple of blows under the right arm. He kept running, and did not want to stand up and fight.

In the second round he came up all right and shaped for me. I thought then that he was going to put up a fight after all, but he immediately began running around again. I struck him in the right eye and then on the stomach. He went down altogether, although the blow was neither a knock-down nor a knockout blow.

He lay on the ground and was counted out. He was not knocked out. I went up to him and shook hands. He said I had no ill feeling toward me. He said "No," and smiled.

Did you hit him any blows in the region of the heart?

No, Sir; I did not.

The witness answered a number of questions pertaining to the "code" which the cadets live up to, and explained how the committee chose men to meet others so as to equalize the height and weight, so that a man might be called upon to fight another, although he himself would have no personal grievance against his opponent.

Cadet Ralph N. Hayden of New York, one of the sentinels at the fight, told of the affair in a general way. He said Booz was not hit hard enough to knock him down, and that all through he acted cowardly. Booz lay on the ground and cried. While lying there crying Booz extended his hand to Keller, who had gone over to him. He acknowledged having taken part in hazing lower class men, the ordeals being "eagling," "Wooden Willie," "stretcher," and "dragging out of tents on mattresses." He never saw or knew any one to be injured by hazing.

Cadet W. R. Bettinson of Kentucky told of one occasion when Booz was on sentinel duty at the rear of Bettinson's tent. He spoke to Booz, who was standing at one end of the post, and told him to patrol his post properly. Gen. Brooke asked:

Had you any right to give him any such instructions?

No, not officially. But I felt I had a right to give some information to him when he was doing wrong.

Was it not a breach of military discipline for you to speak to a sentry on duty?

It was.

And as a result of that Mr. Booz was called out to fight?

Yes, Sir.

Then, Sir, you had no right to put Cadet Booz in that position.

Cadet George R. Spalding of Michigan, who acted as timekeeper at the fight, was next sworn. His story of the bout was in no way different from the others told during the morning. He said Booz was not severely injured, and walked all right from Fort Putnam to camp, over three-quarters of a mile.

Cadet Charles Barnett, President of the Cadets' Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, was asked if he had written to the Rev. Dr. Alexander Allison of Bristol, Penn. He replied that he did, and got a reply, which he submitted to the court.

Cadet Joseph Farnsworth Barnes of Washington, D. C., who was one of Keller's seconds in the fight, gave a rather new version of the encounter, as he said it lasted three rounds. According to his account, there were three rounds of two minutes each, with one-minute intervals between. In all other respects his story was about the same. He said Booz ran away from his opponent, and was not knocked out.

Cadet Walter Smith of Georgia knew Boos, and said his appetite was normal, and he never knew Booz to have any difficulty in swallowing.

Cadet James Prentice of New York said that one day Booz came into his tent and asked if he could not lie down. He told Prentice that he was afraid he had heart disease, and Prentice advised him to resign. He saw Boos read a small book, and one day saw him read a small book which he held inside of his Bible. He could not say what kind of book it was. Prentice saw Booz "braced" one night in the camp. Boos seemed to have a weak back.

Later On the witness explained that fourth-class men were not allowed to read during the day, and Booz had the book inside the Bible, so as to take advantage of the fact that no one would interfere with him while reading the Bible.

Cadet Fred L. Deen of Texas, who, it was said by some previous witness, gave hot sauce to Booz, was called next.

Did you give Cadet Boos any tobasco sauce?

No, Sir; not that I remember. I may have, but can't say positively. I took pity on him. He was kind of down and I felt for him. I wanted to see him brace up and make him feel good.

Did you ever fight when a fourth-class man?

Yes, Sir.

Did you win?

No, Sir; he beat me.

It is well known among the West Pointers that Deen, when a fourth-class man, fought fifty-eight rounds with an upper class man, and, although defeated, came out of the fight with glory.

The court adjourned at 5:30 until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

MR. CLEVELAND TO STUDENTS.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland made an address this evening at the annual graduation exercises of the Pierce School.

In opening, Mr. Cleveland spoke of the advantages derived from a business education. He said it is good to start out in life with the idea firmly in one's mind that the world owes you a living.

"Of course," he added, "you are not to give this the highwayman's meaning, nor act upon it in a highwayman fashion. Neither should the proposition that the world owes you a living be construed as giving license for all sorts of sharp practices, involving work only with the wits, and a disregard for the golden rule and every other precept which maintains and cultivates human brotherhood.

"We hear a great deal just now in condemnation and defense of trusts and combinations. Quite lately a short article in opposition to them was sent me which I was informed was the result of much thought on the part of an able thinker. As I glanced on it my eye fell on a description of a community of people whose wants were supplied by tradesmen and craftsmen who were their neighbors, they dealt together as friends interested in each other's welfare and willing to yield something to each other's circumstances. This description was followed by an arraignment of trusts and combinations as destroyers of this happy situation by first monopolizing certain branches of the business done in the communities, and then displacing with their stranger agents and representatives the dealers and craftsmen who were neighbors and friends. There may be much or little misfortune in such a change, but I could not help feeling that the simple, natural, healthy, live-and-let-live conditions first described were worth perpetuating. Of course, in attempting to win success you are in a race with your fellows, but you need not run a foul race nor treacherously disable your competitors."

Mr. Cleveland said the world owes us just such a living as we can gain by hard work, the exercise of all our mental faculties, a scrupulous adherence to the rules of honesty, and a never-failing obedience to the dictates of enlightened conscience. Continuing, he said:

"Let us add in completion of our standard of true success a constant example of patriotic love of country and a conscientious discharge of every duty of citizenship—not perfunctorily nor in blind duty of citizenship—but intelligently, and in sober recognition of the responsibility the citizen assumes to his Government where the people rule."

In conclusion Mr. Cleveland said that the greatest danger attending the accumulation of wealth is found in its hardening effect upon the heart and conscience and its suffocation of our best feelings and impulses, and added: "It is decreed that we can rarely exact our dues from the world and at the same time can achieve a success that shall be glorious. To do this it is only required of us to be true to ourselves, true to our duty to humanity, obedient to the Divine law, and submissive to the will of God."

MR. CLEVELAND ON SUBSIDIES.

Favors Free Ships and Hopes to See Less Coddling.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—A reporter for The North American to-night asked ex-President Grover Cleveland for his opinion on the ship subsidy bill now pending in Congress. He intimated that what he had said on that subject had not pleased the friends of the subsidy. He then dictated the following statement, which he said contained all he cared to say regarding the subsidy:

"In regard to this proposed subsidy I would refer you to my speech at the launching of the steamship St. Louis. I then said something in favor of free ships. I have not changed my opinions.

"With our much-vaunted accession to a position among the world powers, I hope to see less so much, instead I want of that sort of coddling which a less prominent place in the family of nations was claimed by some of our people to excuse."

LIVELY DOCK BOARD ROW.

There was a lively row in the offices of the Dock Board yesterday, after the regular meeting of the Commissioners.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Freedman, for the board, had been examining Dockmaster L. Hitch Harrison, who was on trial on charges of neglect of duty preferred against him by Secretary Burke of the department, and growing out of the alleged violation of the law by the Degnon-McLean Contracting Company in dumping cellar dirt on Pier 28 East River without a permit.

Harrison testified that the foreman of the company had told him on Aug. 13 that Mr. Degnon had an understanding with Commissioner Meyer in regard to dumping the dirt. Harrison said he then went to the office of the company in the Syndicate Building and saw Mr. Degnon, who informed him that he had seen Mr. Meyer about the matter, and that he had told him to go ahead, and that the matter would be taken up and a permit issued at the September meeting.

Commissioner Meyer heard this testimony, but did not say anything.

Continuing, Harrison said that he had then reported the matter to Assistant Secretary Rarle and Assistant Superintendent Manley, and had been told to let them continue the dumping until that night, which was the 1st of September, and then to stop it. This he said he had done. Close questioning by the Commissioners and Mr. Freedman failed to shake Harrison's testimony. The board then adjourned.

Commissioner Meyer went into his office and was immediately followed by Mr. Freedman. Mr. Freedman had been in the room but a short time when suddenly angry voices were heard, seemingly in the office of Commissioner Murphy, whose office adjoins and is connected with that of Commissioner Meyer.

"You are a liar." "It is a lie," "A shame on your manhood to prefer such charges," and phrases of similar import reached the corridor, and the noise soon brought attachés and other employes of the department out of their offices.

Commissioner Meyer shortly appeared and went down stairs. When asked if he had anything to say in reference to Harrison's testimony, he replied: "I have not a word to say to the press," and hurried away.

At the office of the Degnon-McLean Company it was said that Mr. Degnon was in Cleveland. "We are paying for the pier, and I suppose we have a right to dump what we like there. I am sure that we have not done anything that we are not permitted to do," Mr. McLean said.

GAMBLING HOUSE RAIDED.

Proprietor Receives a Tip, and No Arrests Are Made.

While Capt. Martens of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station was at the Harlem Opera House last night enjoying the play he was informed that Special Agent Burr of the Parkhurst Society had raided a gambling house on Eighth Avenue near One Hundred and Twentieth Street.

Three truck loads of gambling devices were later taken to the station. The name of the proprietor of the place could not be learned, as he had been informed of a contemplated raid and left the place. No arrests were made.

Later Capt. Mertens said the raid was made by his precinct detectives and that Burr had nothing to do with it.

A NEW YORK TIMES reporter called Frank Moss up by telephone and repeated Mertens's statement to him. He emphatically denied that the Captain had anything to do with the raid.

Nobody dies of whooping cough; but the cough suspends nutrition and weakens the body. Then set in pneumonia consumption scrofula.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil is useful all through: it eases the cough; it limits the weakness; it sets nutrition going as soon as the cough has run its course. That is health.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

BIG DEAL IN BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT

Metropolitan Directors Hold a Controlling Interest.

CHANGES IN BOARD IMMINENT

Stock Changes Hands After Appraisal of Property by H. C. Payne, Expert Named by J. P. Morgan.

Important developments in the affairs of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company will be soon announced. There are to be changes in the Board of Directors. New members to be elected will represent an influential banking interest and insiders of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

Prominent Directors of the Metropolitan Street Railway have acquired holdings of Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock sufficient to control the property—with the co-operation of financiers already having large investments in the property. Messrs. Elkins and Widener and Thomas Dolan of Philadelphia, with William C. Whitney and Thomas F. Ryan of New York, have recently been buyers of Brooklyn Rapid Transit on a scale large enough to approximate a majority of the company's capital stock, and Mr. Ryan is believed now to be the largest stockholder of the Brooklyn company.

Facts bearing on the acquisition by Metropolitan interests of their holdings in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit property are stated as follows:

"Since election day a series of conferences have been held between Anthony N. Brady of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and Thomas F. Ryan of the Metropolitan Street Railway, with a view to the absorption of Brooklyn Rapid Transit by Metropolitan. One of these conferences lasted all night. The meetings were held because the Metropolitan people, having previously decided to accumulate a majority of Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock, found that they could not do so without the holdings of Messrs. Brady, Sheehan, Beardsley, and their friends. So they 'got together,' the Metropolitan people stopped buying stock in the open market, and asked Mr. Brady and his friends to fix a price for their holdings.

"Mr. Brady's figure was $125 a share. Mr. Brady said if Mr. Whitney did not believe the stock was worth that figure, he could have the property appraised by any expert he saw fit. Mr. Whitney accepted this proposition, and called on J. P. Morgan to name the expert. Mr. Morgan had previously been brought into the deal by the Metropolitan people when they made their first effort to buy control. Mr. Morgan named H. C. Payne, Vice President of the Milwaukee Street Railway Company, of which company Mr. Morgan is a large owner. Accordingly, Mr. Payne, whom Mr. Morgan characterized as "the best street railway man in the country," came to New York and went over the system. He personally investigated the construction, equipment, and traffic arrangements, and he put expert accountants on the books. On Dec. 12 he handed in his report in three copies—one for Mr. Morgan, one for the Metropolitan people, and one for Mr. Brady and his friends."

Expert Payne's report, according to this same authority, was "enthusiastic, showing that the Brooklyn property was capable of quick development into a large profit maker."

To a representative of THE NEW YORK TIMES, a Director of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, said:

"It is not true that the Metropolitan Street Railway, as a corporation, has acquired any interest in Brooklyn Rapid Transit. It may be that Directors of the Metropolitan Company have been buyers of the stock—in fact, this will hardly be denied by us. But such purchases have been by Metropolitan insiders individually, for their own personal account—not as the official representatives of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

"As to whether or not the two properties are soon to come into closer relationship; as to whether or not a unified system of power houses will be established; as to whether or not the Brooklyn Rapid Transit will be leased to the Metropolitan, or otherwise merged with the New York property, is hardly to be discussed at this stage. We think well of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, or we would not individually have made large investment in it.

"Experienced observers have for a long time anticipated a state of affairs wherein there would be unification, consolidation, concentration—whatever phrase you choose to use—for the street railway systems of New York and Brooklyn. But that the recent investments by Metropolitan financiers in the Brooklyn property signify the close approach of such a consummation is certainly not yet ready for official announcement."

Such changes as may take place in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's Board of Directors cannot be made until at a meeting to be held next month.

TWO COTTAGES SET ON FIRE.

Residences at Seaside, N. J., Destroyed —Firebugs' Tracks in the Snow.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Dec. 21.—Firebugs set two cottages on fire at Seaside, two miles from this place, this evening. The first blaze was seen in the cottage of Michael Rolland of Highlands. This faced directly upon the Shrewsbury River. A minute later flames also shot up from the cottage of Samuel Course of 382 West Thirtieth Street, Manhattan, which is next to the Rolland cottage. Both houses had been vacant since September.

The flames in the Course cottage did not start from those in the Rolland building, as the latter had not attained sufficient headway when the first persons to reach them arrived. It had been snowing for over two hours and the footprints of two persons were found in the snow. One of these persons was a man and the remaining set of tracks were made by a woman or a boy. There was one trail of the double tracks heading from the road down to the Rolland cottage. From this cottage they led to the Course cottage and then by a different route back to the road. There trace of them was lost.

There was a high northwest wind blowing, and by the time the firemen had dragged their machines down to the fires the buildings were beyond saving and were attacking the Hays cottage, next to the eastward of the two burning. The firemen saved this building. The other two were totally consumed. The loss on the Rolland cottage is estimated at $2,000 and that on the Course cottage $4,000.

FIRE ON BLACKWELL'S ISLAND.

Two Men Hurt in Answering Alarm—Station Little Damaged.

The waiting station near the big hospital on Blackwell's Island caught fire in some unknown way last night, but the blaze was quickly extinguished, and a damage of only $15 resulted. There were some patients in the station when the fire started, but they got out quickly and without being injured.

While responding to the fire alarm, Firemen Burns and Halpin were thrown from the hook and ladder truck and seriously injured. Burns had contusions of the face and bruises of the body, and Halpin was internally injured. Both were taken to the City Hospital on the Island.

Election Law Violators Sentenced.

Five prisoners who pleaded guilty to violating the election law were sentenced by Recorder Goff in General Sessions yesterday. They were Lorenzo Pincolo, who said that he had paid a Street Cleaning Department employe $25 to get him a position, and that he was told to vote, and he would get the job. He was given six months in the penitentiary. Patrick Moore was given six months, Patrick McNulty got eleven months, and William Tucker one year. Joseph Webb was let off with a sentence of nine months.

No Pardon for Samuel Goldberger.

ALBANY, Dec. 21.—Gov. Roosevelt has, it is said, refused to pardon Samuel Goldberger, who last December was sentenced to Sing Sing Prison for a term of two years on the charge of colonizing in the interests of Tammany Hall in the Eighth District of New York City. Goldberger is the man whom Assemblyman-elect Adler and others petitioned the Governor to pardon. Mr. Adler told the Governor that it was Goldberg's first offense and that he acted under a threat that he must help the Tammany cause.

A USE FOR MOSQUITOS.

That the mosquito is beneficial to mankind is the conviction of Charles M. Slade, cotton broker, of 50 Worth Street, this city, resident of Englewood, N. J. For thirteen years the cotton broker has been laughed at, gibed at, and bullyragged by his business friends in the city and by the unregenerate of Jersey for his belief in the mosquito's usefulness in preventing certain diseases. He feels that at last he has been vindicated.

"Yes," said he in his office yesterday afternoon, "I consider that my theory has been fully vindicated by the report received a day or two ago from Havana relating to the experiments being carried on there in mosquito inoculations. I cut out the article and showed it to my friends, and told them, 'the old man has at last been vindicated.' The dispatch said that 80 per cent. of mosquito inoculations had been successful. Some of my friends long ago accepted my theory, and they have been immune each year from malaria and certain other diseases. I believe firmly in mosquito inoculation, not only as a preventive of malaria, rheumatism, neuralgia, and typhus, but as a preventive against annoyance from the bites of insects after they have taken their early Spring meal from me. That's a fact."

"How did you come to originate the theory?" was asked.

"I didn't originate it," was the reply. "I never did originate a thought, nor has any one else. When you think that you think a thought you are wrong. A new thought is in the air surrounding you. Sometimes it strikes and sometimes it doesn't. If it strikes, you develop it. It was that way with me. When I was living in Montclair, N. J., in 1887, I went into the garden one May day with my body covered from the waist up with only a thin gauze undershirt. As I worked in my garden, I let the mosquitoes swarm on me, principally on my back. After they had enjoyed their feast for half an hour I went into the house. I put a teaspoonful of ammonia into a pint of water and rubbed the liquid over my skin. That took the sting away, and the rest of the season I was not bothered once. The merry little stinger stung me, but I didn't feel it. I was inoculated.

"You see," said Mr. Slade, warming up to his subject, "the mosquito comes from swamp land where malaria prevails. Take the mosquitoes away from the swamp lands in New Jersey and malaria and typhus would kill us all off. When he bites, the effect is like, for instance, inoculation by vaccination. You get a mild form of the disease. I don't know whether you believe in God or not—that does not matter; you needn't answer—but God never created anything for nothing; everything in nature has its use, and the despised mosquito is, if treated with kindness and courtesy, more useful in certain ways than doctors, and he's cheaper, or rather I should say 'she.' Why? Because the lady mosquito does all the work. The bull mosquito never stings. He just simply sails around, perches himself, and sings in his own merry way, while the lady does business on the family account."

"Have you any converts?"

"I have. The Jersey people are waking up. They're just finding out what a valuable disease preventing plant they possess within the borders of their State. I'm a 'Down East' Yankee, and I went to Jersey, among other things, with the rheumatism. After I arrived I acquired neuralgia, rheumatism's first cousin. It was an early asset. One day I took a bicycle ride. I overdid it. Then came an inevitable attack of rheumatism. I went down by the side of my pond and let the mosquitoes bite my legs until they got tired—not the legs, but the mosquitoes. Then I bathed myself in ammonia and water and the rheumatism disappeared."

"If you went to Havana in yellow fever time, Mr. Slade, would you allow a mosquito to bite you?"

"Come off the perch!" he ejaculated. "Would I? Why, the first thing I would do would be to gather half a dozen or more of the native product and take them to my room. Then I would turn them loose, undress, go to bed, and tell them to sail right in. After they had their sport with me I would be a yellow fever immune."

Now that the mosquito idea is beginning to spread, Jerseyites see great possibilities ahead; all except the doctors. The doctors are apprehensive. The real estate men with swamp lots see hope in the future.

FIGHTING THE SMALLPOX.

Health Officials Say Safety Lies in Vaccination Only—Thomas E. Bussey Stricken.

Smallpox cases continue to develop at the rate of three or four a day, and in such widely separated localities that the only hope of the Health Department officials of stamping it out is in the continuance of the very general movement to be vaccinated. Cases reported yesterday were:

BUSSEY, THOMAS E., thirty-three years old, Treasurer of the Board of Education; removed from his home, 1,047 Trinity Avenue, to North Brother Island.

GOODWIN, A. REILLY, thirty-five years old, 2,027 Lexington Avenue.

McNAMARA, HENRY, twenty-two years old, of 505 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

Mr. Bussey lives at the address given with his wife, two sisters, and his father. A telephone inquiry at the hospital late last night brought the information that his attack was of a mild order and that he was resting comfortably.

Members of the Bronx vaccinating corps had a lively time when they tried to vaccinate employes of a great dry goods store at Third Avenue and One Hundred and Fiftieth Street Thursday afternoon. The special need of it arose from the fact that two sisters of Jennie Goeffroy, who was taken to the island earlier in the day, were employed in the store. Theodore J. Chabot, one of the proprietors, met the Inspectors as they were about to mount the stairs, and positively refused to permit the vaccinations. Dr. Monaghan sent the men back yesterday morning with five policemen. The 200 girls employed in the building were vaccinated in short order.

Rumors persistently circulated yesterday were that smallpox had appeared in two fashionable hotels. Dr. F. H. Dillingham, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent, denied that there was any truth in this, and said that hotels would be the last places to conceal cases, for the knowledge that they had done so, when it came out, as it must, would irretrievably ruin their business.

He declared yesterday that New York is better off as regards smallpox than most parts of the country. There have been but eighty-two cases in the present outbreak, and eight of these were discharged, cured, on Wednesday. There have been but three deaths. Reports from Manchester, N. H., are to the effect that the pesthouse there is full, while in Winona, Minn., there are 400 cases.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received a letter from "Reader" inquiring whether the Health Department has the power to remove a smallpox patient from his own private house. This was referred to Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, Chief Inspector of Contagious Diseases, yesterday, and he said that the board certainly had the legal power. Sometimes cases of smallpox were allowed to remain in private houses, he said, but the conditions were very severe, and the first, that the building must be placarded, was generally sufficient to prompt the removal of the patient.

TENNESSEE COAL AND IRON.

Chairman of Board of Directors Will Be a Northerner.

It is officially stated that probably within the coming week announcement will be made of the new Chairman of the board of Tennessee Coal and Iron. A Director of the company said yesterday:

"We have had the matter under consideration for some time, and we now think we have hit upon the right man as Chairman of the board, an office to be created. Our choice is a Northerner, and a good, practical man he is."

While no further information was obtained, it is believed that the new Chairman will be found to be closely identified with Carnegie interests.

The Annual French Ball.

The annual ball of the Cercle Français de l'Harmonie will take place at Madison Square Garden on the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 8. Fanciulli's Seventy-first Regiment Band, 200 strong, and Max Schwab's orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion.

Rice Will Hearing Postponed.

The hearing of the contest of the will of William Marsh Rice was adjourned yesterday until the first Monday in February on account of the fact that the citations under what is known as the "Patrick will" are not returnable until Jan. 31.

Measles Among Steamship Passengers.

An epidemic of measles developed on board the steamship Trojan Prince on the voyage from Genoa to this port. When she arrived Thursday forty-eight of her passengers were transferred to North Brother Island for treatment and observation as a result of the contagion. Those ill with the malady were mostly children.

NEW NURSES APPOINTED

Commissioner Keller Continues Investigation of Bellevue Scandal.

Hilliard Inquest Adjourned Until Next Thursday—Ogden Mills Employs Counsel for Accused Men.

Considerable progress was made yesterday with the various reforms in Bellevue, which Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller has decided upon as a result of recent disclosures. The State Board of Charities at its annual meeting decided to institute an independent inquiry into the conduct of the hospital, directing the President to appoint a special committee of three for this purpose.

Coroner Fitzpatrick adjourned the inquest into the death of Louis H. Hilliard, who is alleged to have been strangled and beaten to death by J. R. Davis, Clinton L. Marshall, and Edward O. Dean, nurses in the Pavilion for the Insane, until Thursday at the request of Henry B. Anderson, who has been retained by Ogden Mills to defend the accused men. Mr. Anderson said he had not had time to prepare his case. Thomas Minnock, the reporter who got into the pavilion by feigning insanity and who is a witness, was late at the hearing. Hilliard's widow was present. It is reported that she will, through the French Consul, seek some sort of pecuniary redress for the death of her husband.

Dr. Louis W. Schultze, Medical Inspector of the Charities Department, yesterday assumed full charge of the alcoholic and insanity departments of the hospital, and before nightfall the six nurses in the former who were suspended on Thursday had been supplanted by others, and their three helpers summarily removed. A trained nurse appointed by Commissioner Keller had also gone to work in the pavilion for the insane.

Commissioner Keller said that the work would not stop at these departments, but that before he is done he will thoroughly investigate Bellevue from top to bottom. He admits that he has received many complaints from patients concerning treatment in other wards.

Anthony M. Marcus, who was recently treated for varicose veins in Ward 30, an open medical ward, called on Commissioner Keller yesterday and told him that upon his arrival in the ward he was met with demands for money by two nurses. When he told them he had none, one of them said to him, "Well, then, you had better croak.'" Following this, he said, his wounds were not properly cleaned, and he was cruelly hurt with dirty and carelessly handled instruments.

Nurses have been in the habit of stupefying troublesome patients with hypodermic injections, according to common report, and Commissioner Keller said yesterday: "That is a matter I am going to bring before the Medical Board, and I shall insist that no hypodermics be given by any nurse without the written direction of the physician in charge, and preferably in his presence." The Commissioner also said that he intended to have all reports of cases on the records countersigned by physicians.

Regarding the appointment of Dr. Schultze to take charge of the immediate reforms, Commissioner Keller said: "The State Charities Aid Association has said sometimes that there ought to be a resident physician there, but I had a resident physician in the pavilion, and there was always friction between him and the Medical Board and the Examiners in Lunacy." The doctor he referred to is Dr. Frank Ware Robertson, who left Bellevue a few months ago to succeed Col. Brockway as Superintendent of the Elmira Reformatory.

Dr. Charles Henry Brown of 25 West Forty-fifth Street has drawn up a bill to be presented to the State Legislature establishing a hospital for the special treatment of acute nervous and mental diseases in this city.

The plan is that all such sufferers may be sent to this institution by a Magistrate to be detained for not more than ten days before final commitment to a State hospital, and that convalescent insane may be transferred to it by asylum authorities for further treatment and surveillance.

ANOTHER BELLEVUE VICTIM.

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 21.—William Sutters, aged thirty-three years, died here this afternoon from ill-treatment at Bellevue Hospital, it is alleged. It is claimed that he was treated there for alcoholism, instead of kidney trouble, and was finally turned out.

In New York he was a truckman for Siegel-Cooper Company.

It was said at Bellevue Hospital last night that Sutters was admitted to the alcoholic ward on Nov. 23, and discharged "improved" on Nov. 27. One of the attendants, when asked regarding the alleged ill-treatment, said he knew nothing of it, and added: "I suppose everybody who has been here will now say that he was ill-treated."

WOMAN DUPES A MESSENGER.

Brooklyn detectives were hunting yesterday for a clever young woman swindler, who succeeded by a bold method in robbing one of the big Fulton Street department stores of furs worth about $400. The woman visited the store and asked to be shown some sealskin sacques. She was handsomely dressed and impressed the salespeople as being a person of means. The woman selected a sealskin sacque worth $360 and a muff to match, worth $35, and ordered the furs sent to "Miss M. A. Morgan" at the Pierrepont House, Montague and Hicks Streets. A special messenger was sent to the hotel with the furs. The woman directed that he be shown up to her room on the first floor.

When the messenger reached the room the woman took the sacque and muff and smilingly handed him a check in payment for the furs. The messenger told her that he could accept only cash.

"Oh, that will be all right," returned the young woman; "just step down to the hotel office and they will cash the check for you."

The young man, unsuspecting, went down stairs with the check, leaving the sacque and muff with the woman. The hotel people would not cash the check, and the messenger hurried back up stairs. To his dismay he found that the young woman had disappeared, taking the sacque and muff with her. It was learned later that the woman, as soon as the messenger had left her, had hurried down a back stairway and out through the side entrance of the hotel on Hicks Street. She stopped a passing hansom cab, jumped in, and was driven rapidly away.

The messenger hastened back to the store and reported the loss. Two detectives went to the hotel, but were unable to gain any trace of the young woman. The woman hired a room at the hotel on Wednesday, registering as "Miss M. A. Morgan, Washington, D. C." She was a stranger to the hotel people.

Dispute Over Depot Site at Sayville.

The State Railroad Commission met yesterday and considered the application of the Long Island Railroad Company for permission to build a new station at Sayville, about 800 feet west of the present site. The people of West Sayville are unanimous in their support of the company's request. But the population of Sayville exceeds that of West Sayville three to one, and the Sayville inhabitants will not listen to a change of location. The Commissioners adjourned until the members can personally examine the sites.

Store Open To-night Until 10 o'clock

SANTA CLAUS is Coming
On a Gallop — Who Isn't Ready?

THERE will be plenty to hurry and worry over on Monday—better to have every errand done to-day that can be done. The Wanamaker Store is throbbing with the greatest holiday business it ever knew; but we planned for it—cleared decks by pushing to the rear everything that did not have a distinct Christmas interest to you. Vastly increased our forces at every point, and by the most thorough and efficient organization are now serving the thousands who come daily, in the most comfortable and satisfactory way that such an enormous business has ever been done.

There are no long aisles to get clogged up. It is easy to get to, and away from, every counter in the store. And so the crowds make less discomfort here than in any other store where such attractive offerings are displayed.

It is too late to go hunting hither and thither. Gift-things that will satisfy you fully must be found at the first seeking. Every reason points the way to Wanamaker's. Broadest, most comprehensive assemblage of all kinds of merchandise, and most complete variety in each of the kinds. Most prompt and efficient service. Then absolute assurance of fairest prices always.

Everything that combines to make hurried but important shopping, safest and most satisfying, directs you to-day to Wanamaker's.

WATCHES
And Jewelry

Quick last decisions can always be safely made in the Jewelry Store, whatever price you wish to pay. Wherever you look is true artistic beauty in ideal gift-things for men or women. All come from worthy sources. There is neither gaudiness nor sham, at any price. Articles that are least expensive are in new and refined patterns. Then all prices are fair. There are no fictitious valuations anywhere; and this means much to buyers of jewelry.

Concerning Candy

Of course you want your Christmas supply to be fresh. You're going to have it so, if we have a hand in the matter. This holiday selling has been planned to a nicety. We can only handle a certain quantity every day—that's just as much as is possible in the space assigned to our candy store. And a surprisingly large quantity that is. Every day come shipments fresh from the factory—an establishment whose working force to-day comprises 783 people, employed solely in turning out candy for the Wanamaker stores. Fresh and absolutely pure—and more. All of it priced fairly.

Better bonbons and chocolates than our best are not possible—no matter what you may pay. Ours are 60c a pound, though you're asked to pay considerably more elsewhere for goods of equal quality.

Then we have another excellent grade of bonbons and chocolates, at 30c a pound. You can't equal them at the price. They're pure, too. But of less expensive ingredients, and not so costly in time and labor.

And a list of all-good and pure candies at 20c a pound: Chocolate-covered marshmallows, chocolate-covered nougats, mixed chocolates, and other mixed candies—five-pound boxes for $1.

Glace fruit in five-pound boxes, at $1.50. Imported. An excellent grade at a very moderate price.

A splendid assortment of table decorations has been gathered. Novelties in the way of candy boxes, fancy packages, snapping mottoes, and so on.

Velour JACKETS
Beautiful — Under-price

This is a group of almost forty fine and beautiful Velour Jackets, also from Louis Graner, as were the Jackets we told of earlier in the week. These did not get here as quickly.

They include some of the most exquisite Jackets made this season, of this superb fabric. Nothing surpasses them in elegance, except fur; and in tailoring and decorations these excel the fur garments. No one made more beautiful garments than Louis Graner, and these are some of his handsomest styles. Now offered at

A Third Below their Worth

Wide variety of styles. Priced from $18 to $50. Worth $27 to $75.

Second floor, Broadway.

Silk Waists

A pretty silk waist, put up, as we do them, in a neat gift-box, makes a most attractive present. We have also a number of special lots of entirely perfect and beautiful silk waists which carry almost a half more of value to the recipient than they cost the giver; and that is a very gratifying merit.

These three prices:

$6 Waists at $4.50 — $9 Waists at $6.50
$12 Waists at $7

Then there are many other styles at regular prices. Two excellent values at $4.50 and $5.

Second floor, Tenth street.

Lillian CORSETS

The new styles crowd out those that came earlier, and so we have these three groups of the peerless Lillian corsets to offer to-day at smart reductions in price. They are the best made corsets in the world—best materials, many boned with real whalebone; shapely and comfortable. These attractive prices:

At $1.75, from $2.75—Lillian corsets, in sateen; white and black; low bust; long over hips; trimmed with lace; white or black. Also some of black sateen, with medium and short hips.
At $2.50, from $4—Lillian corsets; long waist, medium bust; long over hips and abdomen; bias cut; real whalebone; of white or drab coutil.
At $3.50, from $5.25 and $6—Lillian corsets of white coutil; bias cut; long waist; real whalebone; trimmed with lace.
At $5, from $8.50—Lillian Corsets of black Italian cloth; whalebone; bias cut; trimmed with lace.

Second floor, Tenth street.

Young Men's Suits

This means small men, as well as boys of 14 to 19 years. The offering includes about a hundred and fifty suits collected from various broken lots, but containing all sizes. Materials are all-wool fancy cheviots, and neat worsteds and cassimeres. Most of the suits are the new Military cut. The former prices were $12 to $16.50. To-day choose for ten dollars a suit

This is a remarkable price on suits of such real merit.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Warm Wrappers

Here are two new and very pretty styles of Flannelette Wrappers at $1 each. One is in pretty colored stripes, with yoke back; front with two rows of fancy braid; full skirt with deep flounce. The other style is in black and white dots, trimmed with braid, and deep flounce on skirt.

Other Flannelette Wrappers at $1.25 to $2.25.

Second floor, Tenth street.

Japanese Goods
Reduced

Many odd little lots have accumulated during the past few weeks. They're to be closed out before Christmas. This is the method: $2.50 articles are now $1.50; $1.50 things are $1; and like reductions on a lot of smaller but very pretty ornaments. A lot of goods previously reduced have had the reduced-price whip applied again. And all the bronzes and teakwood furniture that recently arrived are marked extremely low. The Japanese Store is more inviting than ever—offers many opportunities for saving to gift seekers.

Basement.

Remnants and Other SILKS

Nearly a thousand remnants of silks are ready to-day, at Half Price. Splendid opportunity for gifts, for here are all sorts of silks in almost every length. Of course they'll be taken quickly; though the collection is a large one.

Then these two offerings by the yard:

40c Wash Silks at 25c a yard.

Dollar Printed Foulards, part of which were sold at 50c; now to be sold at 35c a yard.

Five o'clock tea kettles and stands in brass, copper and nickel plated, $1.35 to $12.

Basement.

Busy FURRIERS

There's a large staff of busy fur salespeople on this second floor. They were not a little concerned a few weeks ago during the mild period—wanted to see more life and action about their splendid stocks. They are seeing it. Everybody is receiving just as prompt attention as is possible—everybody is receiving the best satisfaction in their purchases. Only honest furs, honestly put together, and priced in a reasonable way. You'll understand more about that way when you come to make your purchases. In the meantime, these further hints:

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

A New and Pleasing Comedy Well Acted at Daly's Theatre.

"Lady Huntworth's Experiment" Cordially Received — Yesterday's Music—Stage Gossip.

A new and exceptionally bright and entertaining English comedy was acted for the first time in this country last evening by Daniel Frohman's permanent company, now established for the Winter at Daly's Theatre. "Lady Huntworth's Experiment" was written by Richard Claude Carton, the ingenious and witty author of "Lord and Lady Algy" and "Wheels Within Wheels," and it clearly belongs to the same peculiar type of contemporary comedy as those diverting plays. But it is even more fanciful than either of them in the posture of events it reveals.

Once more an uncommonly alert and self-reliant woman of the world serves doubly as heroine and dea ex machina, but Lady Huntworth does not move, while she is in our sight, in fashionable London society. As a sure way to rid herself of a vulgar and brutal husband, she has offered no defense in his caddish suit for divorce, and, the divorce having therefore been decreed, to the great detriment of her reputation, though she is a virtuous person, she assumes her maiden name, and, putting to practical use one of her best accomplishments, secures a situation as cook at the Vicarage of Stillford, in the parish of Broneborough, a duchy and parish which is to the comedies of Carton what the Duchy and See of St. Oipherts is to the comedies of Pinero.

Here she soon gains sway over the hearts and minds alike of the pompous and rhetorical Vicar, his estimable butler, and a certain Capt. Dorvaston, a sound-hearted but rather slow-witted fellow, who is betrothed, quite against his own inclinations, and the girl's, too, to the Vicar's pert and knowing niece, Lucy. This young thing, indeed, loves the guileless curate, and her clandestine lovemaking with him, having been discovered by Cook, that purposeful heroine increases her power by securing a weapon against Miss Lucy, who suspects Caroline from the first because of her ladylike manners and her high heels.

Over Keziah, the droll kitchenmaid, Caroline also rules supreme, but she has a deadly and purposeful enemy in the Vicar's sister, Hannah, who is envious of her looks, her airs, and her cooking. Her sway is supreme, however, until a certain Mr. Crayll appears in the neighborhood.

This is dissolute and debilitated Lord Huntworth, who, having discovered that his wife in the inheritor of an unexpected fortune, is tracking her with the intention of remarrying her. His coming brings matters to a crisis. The clandestine wedding of Lucy and her curate, the rejection by the cook of both the Vicar's and the butler's hearts and hands, the utter discomfiture of the pseudo Crayll, and the probably happy outcome of the romance of the cook and her soldier, follow swiftly.

Miss Hannah, indeed, has a momentary triumph, but the apparition of Cook, dressed as a lady, and about to take possession of a new fortune, and to depart for the Continent, whither her soldier will surely follow her, leads to the happy denouement.

"Lady Huntworth's Experiment" is not without its passages of pure farce. Some of the kitchen episodes of Act II. certainly exceed the modesty of nature in their extravagance. On the other hand, there are both dignity and feeling in the piece, while the play of wit in many passages of its dialogue is delightful.

Indeed, it is so good a play, and is so well acted that it seems sure to last through the Winter at Daly's. Almost every one concerned in the performance achieved a personal hit last night. Miss Spong carried the principal rôle with exquisite tact and grace. Surely there never was such a hired cook in anybody's kitchen, but that makes no difference. Mr. Mason as the amiable soldier, had a rôle somewhat out of his usual line, for Dorvaston is clearly a "character part," but he acted it cleverly, with both humor and dignity, and only needs a little more practice to make his simulation of physical heaviness and mental slowness perfect.

Equally good was Mr. Stewart's denotement of the pompous affectations of the rural vicar and revelation of the few but desirable emotional and intellectual traits generally hidden by it. A little more flexibility, which will surely come in time, will improve the portrayal, and the same thing may be said of Mr. Finney's adroit, forcible, and highly colored impersonation of the malicious drunkard, a performance which will greatly increase his artistic stature and his vogue.

It is probably fair to say, too, that Miss Loftus made the most of her part as pert and self-possessed Lucy. She certainly made a great deal of it, and received a fair share of the applause. Sometimes her acting was positively charming, as in the scene of three, with the Vicar and Dorvaston, in Act I. At all times it was smart and uncommon.

May Robson contributed an entirely new bit of rustic character as the kitchen maid, new in its pictorial attributes of dress and facial "make-up," and in its pervading tone. The congenital cold-in-the-head was indicated without the traditional snuffle, and ignorance, vanity, and affection were cleverly expressed. Mrs. Walcot was quite in her element as the alert spinster, and Mr. Owen was as diverting as possible in the rôle of the smitten man servant.

In fact, this was a theatrical incident of unusual importance. A good new play was acted in a manner all but perfect. A little softening and subduing here and there of "business," too harsh or too extravagant; a little quickening of the tempo in the last half of the second and the first half of the third act, and there will be nothing a chronic carper could find fault with.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

The Third Public Rehearsal at Carnegie Hall Yesterday.

The third public rehearsal of the Philharmonic Society's fifty-ninth season took place at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. The programme was as follows:

Overture, "Oberon"	Weber
Symphony, No. 6, F major, "Pastoral"	Beethoven
Concerto in B major for pianoforte	Henry Holden Huss
Fantasia, "Francesca de Rimini"	Tschaikowsky

It needs but a glance to tell the trained concert-goer that this was a symmetrical programme. The novelty of the list, Mr. Huss's concerto, might easily be put after the symphony in this case, for the time has long past when listeners to music found the "Pastoral" of Beethoven a tax upon their powers of analysis or a strain upon their imaginations. On the other hand, the ultra-romantic storm and stress of the Tschaikowsky composition could not have preceded Beethoven's music without weakening the effect of the latter. The Philharmonic Society did a graceful act in giving a hearing to the piano concerto of Mr. Huss. This young musician is a resident of New York, and was born no further away than Newark in 1862. Several compositions from his pen have been made known to local music lovers, but the concerto had not been heard till yesterday. It was first performed by its composer at a concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston on Dec. 28, 1894, Mr. Paur conducting.

The work deserved a hearing at the hands of the representative musical organization of the composer's home city. It would not be to the point and it would not be true to say that Mr. Huss claims a prominent position among living composers, but he is one of those whose writings are dignified, whose efforts are in the direction of modernity without forgetfulness of the true functions of music, and who has the technic of the art of composition well in hand. His concerto is a work of no small interest, and the piano part ought to be grateful to soloists because of its prominence and its numerous unaccompanied passages. It might be made very effective in the hands of a virtuoso, but this Mr. Huss, a good pianist, who played the solo part yesterday, certainly is not. His concerto would be heard to far greater advantage in the hands of some such artist as Miss Aus der Ohe, to whom it is dedicated. It is a musicianly, well-made work, with pregnant thematic matter and skill in the treatment of it. The composer was heartily applauded yesterday.

Mr. Paur's reading of the "Pastoral" symphony is always a source of joy. It is so instinct with life, so clear in its coloring, so incisive in accentuation that it brings out all the beauties of a work at which it is the fashion for smart persons now to sneer. The "Francesca da Rimini" of Tschaikowsky, while it owes something to the Dante symphony of Liszt, is a work of powerful individuality and immense temperament. It has not been heard here in years, but it was well worth hearing again, especially in view of the fact that it might be set up as an example of how to do some things attempted by Richard Strauss without ceasing to be musical. It was admirably read yesterday, and the fathers played it with superb spirit. In fact their work this season shows a distinct advance over that of last Winter, but there are still too many slips in the wind cheir.

"LOHENGRIN" AT THE OPERA.

Reappearance of Mme. Nordica, Mme. Schumann-Heink, and Mr. Dippel.

For the third night of the season of opera in French, German, and Italian at the Metropolitan Opera House Wagner's "Lohengrin" was the offering. He would indeed be a person of originality who could find anything new to say at this date about this work of art, or concerning the performance of it by the singers engaged in last night's representation. "Lohengrin" is the most popular opera of our time, and the public seems never to weary of its sweet and sentimental music. One is forced to believe, however, that it is the pretty melody that tickles the public fancy and that those who reach the heart of Wagner's beautiful poetic conception in this lovely work are very few indeed. The truth is that the hardened observer of the public in the presence of masterpieces is prone to think that if the average operagoer really knew what a great drama "Lohengrin" is he would avoid it carefully and wait for "Manon."

But perhaps we ought to be glad that masterpieces are patronized, no matter what the mental attitude of the public toward them. And at the Metropolitan Opera House there is no serious thought about the opera, for it is a temple devoted to the worship of singers. Those who received the adulation of the elect last night were Mme. Nordica as Elsa, Mme. Schumann-Heink as Ortrud, Mr. Dippel as Lohengrin, Mr. Bertram as Telramund, and Mr. E. de Reske as the King. Mr. Muhimann as the Herald also sang, though his name did not appear in the newspaper advertisements. It would be easy to dismiss the work of all these personages with a brief summary of their well-known qualities—Mme. Nordica, a most earnest and conscientious prima donna, whose intelligence and effort have atoned for certain deficiencies of nature; Mr. Dippel, an honest and well-meaning tenor, whose voice is without charm; Mr. Bertram, a baritone with a mediocre voice, a good deal of intelligence, and some feeling; Mme. Schumann-Heink, a contralto who used to have a superb voice and still has some of it; Mr. Edouard de Reszke, an eminent basso, who is known to his intimates as "le cheval," because of the immense amount of work he does and who shows the results of it. But such a summary reads but harshly, especially as the soprano, the contralto, and the tenor made their first bows of the season last night.

Mme. Nordica's Elsa fulfills the requirements of the rôle as they are known at Baireuth under the reign of young Siegfried, and last night her performance was one to command hearty admiration. Her voice was in excellent condition, and much pleasure may be expected from her in the course of the season. Mr. Dippel's voice sounded fresh and buoyant, but his unfortunate habit of splitting his phrases intwain detracted from the effect of his delivery. At the close of the first act, Lohengrin and Elsa were borne aloft in triumph on two shields. This piece of business disturbed the equanimity of those to whom the conventions are sacred, but they may reap comfort from the fact that it is imported directly from Baireuth.

The performance was in general smooth and effective. Mr. Damrosch conducted with enthusiasm and good judgment. The chorus sang better than usual. The audience was not large, but it seemed to be well pleased with the performance.

EDWIN ARDEN FAINTS ON STAGE.

Is Revived and Reappears in Last Act of "L'Aiglon."

Just before the mirror scene in "L'Aiglon," which is being played at the Knickerbocker Theatre, Edwin Arden, who was playing the part of Metternich, fainted last night. He staggered for a moment and then fell forward on the stage. The curtain was immediately rung down, and a moment later a member of the company appeared before it and asked if there was a doctor in the audience.

A young physician responded, and after fifteen minutes' work succeeded in resuscitating Mr. Arden. The actor was too weak to take his part in the next act, and it was taken by his understudy, Mr. Blake. In the last act he resumed his part.

Miss Tracey Will Take Part of Aida.

Owing to the sickness of Miss Strong, Miss Minnie Tracey will sing the title rôle of Aida in her place at the Metropolitan Opera House to-night.

LEGAL NOTES.

PROCURING CITY CONTRACTS.—Edward R. Dunham, whose suit against the Hastings Pavement Company, upon a written contract, was dismissed on the trial on the ground that such contract was void, as against public policy, yesterday secured a new trial from the Appellate Division in this city. The company, which was engaged in the manufacture of paving blocks, known as "compressed asphalt paving blocks," in 1895, after samples of the pavement had been used for five years in this city, made the contract referred to with Mr. Dunham, providing for compensation to him based upon the square yards laid under each contract secured from the city, by way of commissions. Mr. Dunham agreed on his part to use all honest efforts to secure the right from the city to make bids for laying the pavements upon city streets. During the three years following, he, with the assistance of Rollin N. Morgan, interested with him, secured for the company the right to bid in competition with others for paving contracts. As a result of Dunham's efforts, contracts were secured by the company for paving, and a large amount of its asphalt blocks were laid for the city. Mr. Dunham's suit is to recover his commissions for his services. Justice Hatch, giving the opinion of the Appellate Division, concurred in by Presiding Justice Van Brunt and Justice Ingraham, says that if the contract contemplated one illegal act which the law condemns, it would vitiate the whole, even though it also contracted for perfectly legal acts. But the characterization was to be made, based upon a consideration of all that was done. Such a question must, therefore, usually be one of fact, dependent upon a consideration of the contract and all that was done under it, and the inference which might properly be drawn therefrom. It was not the province of the court to determine the question unless the acts done and all the facts and circumstances practically admitted of but one inference. This was not such a case. "So far as the acts of the plaintiff required that he should see the Mayor and other administrative officers, it is not clearly apparent how he could proceed to lay the matter before them except he visited them at their respective offices. That was the place where they transacted the public business, and so far as we are able to see, that was the place where the plaintiff had the right to go, and where the performance of the contract required that he should go. He had the right to present to these officers the merits of the pavement which he desired to have introduced, and to induce, if he could, a personal inspection by such officer, not only of the pavement laid in the City of New York, but the pavement as laid elsewhere, and if the plaintiff did no more than this with these officers, then we are unable to see how the act was improper, much less how it could be considered to defeat a right obtained by a contract otherwise legal. It is evident that intercourse with the Aldermen stands upon a different footing and should receive more rigid scrutiny. But it is evident that if all that was done with them was to recommend the merit of the pavement and induce examination by individual Aldermen of that which had stood the test for five years, there should exist little basis for condemnation. The difficulty with this class of service lies in the liability and opportunity for abuse."

STOCK EXCHANGE MEMBERSHIP.—The Appellate Division yesterday affirmed the judgment of the Special Term of the Supreme Court in favor of Rudolph Keppler, as President of the New York Stock Exchange, in the suit brought against him by Charles Neukirch to compel the latter's reinstatement as a member of the Stock Exchange and for damages for his expulsion. Mr. Neukirch was expelled from the Exchange, his membership forfeited, his right of membership sold, and the proceeds of the sale paid over to him. The expulsion was the result of an investigation of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange of certain transactions by Neukirch upon the floor of the Exchange on the 30th of March, 1897, for the firm of which he was a member, which were claimed to be fraudulent. The alleged frauds were that Neukirch procured the delivery of fictitious reports of the sale of stocks for account of his firm by the E. S. Dean Company, or Samuel Kellar, its agent. It was claimed that Neukirch knew at the time that it was intended by his firm and the E. S. Dean Company, or its agent, to make some dishonest or fraudulent or criminal use of the reports, and that he also knew that there was no lawful or honest purpose which such documents, procured by him, could subserve. Justice Patterson, giving the unanimous decision of the Appellate Division, says the cause was properly decided. "The burden of proof," Justice Patterson says, "was upon him to show that he was unjustly convicted without evidence. He admitted the transactions. What fraudulent use might be made of such transactions would seem to be obvious, even to one unacquainted with the juggling methods that may be resorted to by unscrupulous brokers in stock transactions. The plaintiff did not prove that the person or persons who actually made charges against him, and who instituted the proceedings, and who sat with the Governing Committee as a member or members thereof, or who pressed the charges, took an active part in procuring and preparing the evidence to be brought against him, or became witnesses and made arguments against him and in favor of the charges, were allowed to sit as members of the committee and vote upon the question of his guilt or innocence. Nor did he prove bias or prejudice or personal hostility to him on the part of any of those who sat upon the committee, nor any practice of any one connected with the committee as would show that its action was inspired by other than an honest intention to render a just judgment upon the cause as it was presented; and it was affirmatively shown that the charge was signed and preferred by 'the person who made it,' in accordance with rules and requirements of the law of the Stock Exchange relating to the subject. The case as it comes before us is barren of proof to authorize the reinstatement of the plaintiff."

COMMISSIONS FOR SALE OF THE HOBOKEN FERRIES.—The recovery by Archibald Gracie, on the trial of his suit against Edwin A. Stevens and others of a judgment for a large sum for commissions he claimed to have earned five years ago in procuring a purchaser for what was known as the lower ferries was yesterday upheld by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The Stevens family were conducting two ferries from Hoboken, one to Fourteenth Street in New York and the other to Christopher and Barclay Streets. Mr. Gracie was paid for procuring a purchaser for the Fourteenth Street ferry, and his suit was for like services for the lower ferries. The defense was that Mr. Gracie was not employed as to these ferries and that before the sale had been completed he made an agreement with Roswell Eldridge, who purchased the ferry, that if the latter succeeded in making a purchase, he would pay Gracie $10,000 for his services. Upon ascertaining that fact defendants say they discharged Gracie from employment on their behalf. Justice Rumsey, giving the opinion of the Appellate Division, says the evidence was sufficient to warrant the finding of the jury in favor of the plaintiff. Justice Ingraham, in a dissenting opinion, said: "Unless we are to overrule the authorities, under which a broker is required to act in good faith toward his principal in the conduct of negotiations of this kind, it seems to me that we must hold that the defendants had a perfect right to repudiate all relations with the plaintiff after their discovery that he had received and accepted an offer of payment from the person with whom he was negotiating as agent of the defendants for the sale of their property. As a fact, however, I do not think that the plaintiff did procure or introduce to the defendants a purchaser for the lower ferries. He submitted a proposition that Eldridge should purchase the lower ferries. This Eldridge rejected. The fact that Eldridge more than six months afterward purchased the lower ferries would hardly, I think, justify a claim by the plaintiff that he had procured Eldridge as a purchaser for the lower ferries; and certainly, to sustain this recovery, allowing to the plaintiff the enormous sum that was given to him by the jury because during the conduct of the negotiation of the sale of the Fourteenth Street ferry he suggested to Eldridge that he purchase the whole ferry system, which proposition Eldridge declined, would be allowing the plaintiff a compensation for services that he never rendered."

ATTACHMENT OF STOCK OF NON-RESIDENT OWNER.—The Jersey City Contracting Company, a New Jersey corporation, delivered to the Produce Exchange Trust Company of this city 3,220 shares of the stock of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Telephone Company, also a New Jersey corporation, as collateral security for the payment of a loan. Then Louis M. Simpson and others, lawyers, in an action in the Supreme Court in this city against the Jersey City Contracting Company to recover for professional services, obtained an attachment about a year ago, under which the Sheriff levied upon these shares. The levy was vacated at Special Term, but the Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice Ingraham, directed a reversal, holding the levy was valid. The Court of Appeals has now affirmed the Appellate Division, holding, in an opinion by Judge Gray, that a valid levy was made by service of a notice on the pledges, in the manner prescribed by Subdivision 3 of Section 649 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Court decides that the managing agents of the telephone company would not be allowed to refuse a proposed transfer to the purchaser at a judicial sale made under judgment in favor of the attaching creditor, and the presumption would be that the right of such purchase to a transfer would be recognized, and his ownership of the stoek given effect, on the books of the corporation.

HERLIHY PLEADS "NOT GUILTY."

Captain's Trial Formally Opens Before the Police Board.

The trial of Capt. Herlihy, on charges growing out of the condition of the Pro-Cathedral district and insults offered to its clergy, was opened before the Police Board yesterday, after a conference with ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott. Capt. Herlihy was present with his counsel, Louis J. Grant. Frederick B. House of counsel for Inspector Cross, who is to watch Capt. Herlihy's trial in the interest of his client, was also present.

Lawyer Grant pleaded "not guilty" for his client, and waived the reading of the charges and specifications. He pleaded for an adjournment, because he entered on the case on Wednesday and needed time to prepare a defense. Ex-Judge Olcott offered no objection, and the first evidence for the prosecution will be presented Dec. 28. The next hearing will be Jan. 2 or 3, 1901, and the sessions of three to four hours daily are likely to go on without interruption until the trial ends.

Ex-Judge Olcott said that he is not likely to need an associate counsel.

TO PRESERVE HISTORIC PLACES

Joint Action of English Speaking Peoples Advocated by C. R. Ashbee.

Joint action by America and England looking toward the preservation of objects and localities of historic interest to all English-speaking countries was advocated last night at the meeting of the Society for the Preservation of Scenic and Historic Places, by C. R. Ashbee, a Councilor of the National Trust of Great Britain, organized for the same purpose.

"It is my mission to interest you in the movement which the trust has inaugurated in Great Britain," he said, "namely, the preservation of the historical associations of the English-speaking peoples throughout the world. We wish to establish telephonic communication, as it were, so that when some landmark is threatened we may send up a joint and effective protest."

Referring to the work of his society in England in saving historic spots from destruction, Mr. Ashbee said that the problem of what to do with the ancient country seats which the families possessing them for centuries were unable longer to keep had caused the society perplexity.

"Many of these have narrowly escaped going under the hammer," he continued. "We wish to keep them for the people, and we don't want American millionaires to buy them up and make private residences of them." J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Ashbee said, had accepted the position of honorary Treasurer of the trust, and Mr. Rockefeller had contributed $500 to the American society.

Mrs. M. Fay Pierce, President of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Society, made a plea for the proper preservation of Fraunces' Tavern, at Pearl and Broad Streets, where Washington took leave of his Generals. Mrs. Pierce suggested that the tax on bank checks be kept in force and the proceeds used for preserving places of American historic interest. "If one dollar in every ten thousand which passes through the Clearing House," said she, "were used in beautifying this city, the result would be marvelous."

F. W. Halsey, speaking on the "Historical Significance of the Hudson and Champlain Valleys," reviewed at length the events of import which have occurred therein and which have had a decided bearing upon American history since its earliest beginning. The battles of the French and Indian war, the early struggles of the old New Yorkers with the redskins, the battles fought by Washington's Generals in these valleys were also touched upon.

"From the dawn of history," said Mr. Halsey, "these valleys have had the same part to play in the fortunes of men—the part that belongs to a central, vital ground in conflicts between races, in States and nations. It is a story that has become memorable to us in the Revolution; but it belongs also to that world-important conflict between France and England, between Latin and Anglo-Saxon forces, for supremacy in America. Back of all these things it rises up once more in those aboriginal conquests which made the empire of the Iroquois the greatest feat of arms achieved by the redman.

"In the history of the Iroquois," said the speaker, "the momentous fact is the league they founded. Under this federation each nation was to control its own local affairs. For more than three centuries this federation held together, and here and not in the brain of Franklin, Washington, Madison, and Jay, this western world saw the beginnings of the federal idea on our soil. Why should not the imperial fabric reared by this savage race claim attention along with the empires of older lands of the other hemisphere?"

CREMATORIES TO COMBINE.

Certificates to be Issued Entitling Holder to be Incinerated at Death.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 21.—A movement has been started in this city to consolidate all the crematories of the United States and Canada into one association.

There are now seventy-five crematorics in this country. The object is to make a uniform price for incineration. Certificates to be paid up during the life of a person will be issued, and when the holder dies the body may be incinerated at any of the crematories which are in the association.

The Cleveland crematory will probably be ready for business the first of the year. The organization of the International Association will be effected at a meeting of officials of different crematories at Buffalo during the Pan-American Exposition.

SURROGATE CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS' "SUBJECT"

They Clasp Mrs. Eddy's Book and Try Mental Influence.

DR. PEASE'S VIEW OF HEALING

Believes God Will Cure Everything Save a Boil—A Physician, but Unfamiliar with Sanitary Code.

Charles Griffin Pease, M. D., D. D. S., C. S., who gave up the practice of medicine to follow Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. Stetson, was the star witness at the hearing in the contest over the will of Helen C. Brush before Surrogate Fitzgerald yesterday. He was the man who signed the death certificate showing that Miss Brush died of consumption. Although the graduate of a medical college and an active practitioner until he met Mrs. Stetson, the head of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Dr. Pease, on the witness stand, said that he did not know the requirements of the Sanitary Code that cases of consumption should be reported to the Department of Health, and he further admitted that he had signed a death certificate in a case which he had never attended.

There was a lengthy argument between the witness and the counsel for the contestants of the will as to the treatment of disease. The Doctor said that it had taken him four years to study medicine, three years to study dentistry, and that he had become a qualified Christian Science healer at the end of twelve days, after paying $100 to Mrs. Stetson. Outside of the Doctor's direct testimony, the fact was developed that, though he attended Miss Brush during her last illness, he did not do so as a physician, but as an assistant of Mrs. Stetson, and he gave Miss Brush what is called "his personal treatment." He did, however, prescribe for her once, and that was when he ordered her to drink milk. In return for this service he received a check for $51, made out over Miss Brush's signature by the Christian Science companion of Miss Brush, who had watched over her for five years.

Incidental to his other testimony, the source of considerable income to Mary Baker Eddy, the head of the Christian Scientists, was disclosed. Miss Brush had left nearly a dozen copies of "Science and Health." The last copy was of the one hundred and thirteenth edition. The witness said that each true "Scientist" was supposed to purchase the very latest edition printed, and Miss Brush had followed this rule. Mrs. Eddy holds the copyright on this book.

All through the various hearings of the contest the Surrogate's Court has been filled with ardent followers of Mrs. Eddy. Many times testimony has been given which even caused the Surrogate to smile, but "Scientists" sat with hands clasped over copies of "Science and Health," and never seemed to realize the humor of the situation. One of the "healers" explained this yesterday by saying: "We have all brought our minds to bear upon the mind of the Surrogate and say to him, 'You will sustain this will, and you will believe in Christian Science.'"

The fact that the "Scientists" are trying this means to influence judicial opinion is known to counsel for the contestants. Mr. Wadhams of the law firm of Latting & Wadhams, which is with John M. Bowers for the contestants, was informed of this yesterday by one of the Scientists.

DR. PEASE ON THE STAND.

Dr. Pease, who signed the death certificate of Miss Brush, when called to the stand yesterday afternoon, said that he lived at 101 West Seventy-second Street.

"What is your profession?"

"A physician and dentist."

"When were you admitted to the practice of dentistry?"

"In 1890."

"When as a doctor of medicine?"

"In 1891."

"Do you still practice?"

"Dentistry, yes."

"Do you practice as a physician?"

"Yes, without the use of drugs. My ideas to the value of drugs, my opinion rather, has changed since I began practicing."

"When did you cease using drugs?"

"In 1898."

"Have you been in any other practice outside of dentistry and medicine?"

"No, Sir."

"Have you one of your business cards with you?"

"No, Sir."

Then Mr. Bowers produced a card and read from it, "Charles Griffin Pease, M. D., D. D. S., C. S."

"What does 'C. S.' mean?"

"Christian Scientist."

"Explain the rest of the titles."

"The 'M. D.' shows my authority to act in the healing art, and the 'D. D. S.' my right as a dental surgeon."

"Now, what did you mean by adding 'C. S.'?"

"That I was a Scientist by thought."

"Is this one of your regular business cards?"

"No; I only had a few like that struck off."

"You attended Mrs. Stetson's class?"

"Yes."

"How many lessons did you receive?"

"Twelve."

"How long did you study medicine?"

"Four years."

"Dentistry?"

"Three years."

"Then it took you four years to become a doctor, three years to become a dentist, and only twelve days to become a Christian Science healer?"

"Yes."

"Did you get a certificate from Mrs. Stetson?"

"No. I did not think of it. It was not necessary."

"You did not forget to pay your fee?"

"No."

"How much was it?"

"One hundred."

The doctor then testified that he was still a member of the New York County Medical Society, but that he had resigned from a number of other societies after he had become a Scientist.

"Since December, 1898, have you practiced medicine?"

"As a physician."

"Have you practiced as a Christian Science healer?"

"I have, if you mean spiritual adaptation of the Scriptures."

"Do you believe in Mrs. Eddy's book, 'Science and Health'?"

"I believe"—here the witness hesitated, and finally declined to answer the question by "yes" or "no."

"Does the First Church, to which you belong, use 'Science and Health'?"

"Yes."

"Does not that book give instruction as to the treatment of disease?"

"It does not so appeal to me."

"Do you believe, with Mrs. Eddy, that organic disease is nothing more than a condition of mind?"

"Whatever she says is true."

SAYS A BOIL IS A BELIEF.

"In Mrs. Eddy's book she says that a boil is not painful, because it is not a boil; it is simply a belief. Do you think a boil is a boil or a belief?"

"A belief."

"Do you treat people who have boils the same as you did before you became a Christian Scientist?"

"Yes."

"What is the regular physician's treatment?"

"Using a lance."

"Then you practice on boils the same as a physician, and not as a Scientist?"

"Yes."

"Then it's all humbug, your being a Christian Scientist?"

"Just as you like it."

"Can you get rid of a boil without the use of a lance?"

"Yes."

"Ever tried it that way?"

"No. I always use a lance."

"How is the other way for curing a boil?"

"By the allness of God, but I always use a lance."

"Then you think God will cure everything but a boil?"

"Yes," said the witness, and the spectators in the courtroom smiled.

"How many cases have you attended as a Christian Scientist?"

"Oh, a fair number."

"Ever cured anybody?"

"Yes."

"What disease?"

"I once cured a case of tonsilitis in two hours."

A number of questions were then asked the witness as to his understanding of Christian Science. He appealed to the Surrogate, claiming the answers would make him discuss his private religious belief, and he did not want to do this.

"Do you believe that colds, coughs, and contagious diseases are simply mental beliefs?"

"Yes."

"What do you understand a cold to be which is engendered by mental belief?"

"If a draught comes upon one and he believes it will cause a cold, that person will have a cold."

"You think contagious diseases are only a belief?"

"Yes."

"You think that there is no such a thing as smallpox, and that it is only a belief?"

"Yes."

"When did you first discover that Miss Brush had consumption?"

"On my first visit."

"When?"

"May 28, 1900."

"When did you think it would be a fatal case?"

"Not until the last moment."

"Did you report the case as consumption to the Department of Health?"

"No, it was not my case."

"Did you make a record of the case in your book? If so, read it."

"The record is, 'Miss Helen C. Brush, professional visits at her home, 345 West Forty-ninth Street.'"

"Now, was it not your duty to report the case to the Board of Health?"

"Yes, if I was the first physician called."

"You knew she was a member of the Church, and that none of the members was attended by regular physicians?"

"Yes."

Mr. Bowers then read to the witness portions of the Sanitary Code, in which it is set forth that all physicians must report cases of consumption to the Health Department.

HAD NOT SEEN THE RULE.

"Did you not know of this rule?"

"No, I had not seen the rule."

"You understand that you have violated the code?"

"It appears so."

"Have you ever signed death certificates in cases you did not attend?"

"Only in one case."

"What case, and who?"

"A child that died of capillary bronchitis."

"Who attended the child?"

"I don't know."

"You know Stroebel, a healer of your Church?"

"Yes."

"Don't you know he treated the child?"

"They sent out for every one they could find."

"When did you last see the child alive?"

"I saw it in the street with its mother the Spring before it died."

"Did you base your statement in the death certificate that you had seen the child alive on this accidental meeting months before the child was ill?"

"Yes."

"Did you not intend to convey in that certificate that you had seen it just before its death?"

"I did. It was a sudden death."

Mr. Bowers then read the notice on the back of a death certificate requiring the Coroner to investigate all cases of sudden death, and brought out the fact from the witness that the Coroner knew nothing about the death of the child.

Dr. Pease will be on the stand at the next hearing of the contest on Jan. 9.

Anna Margaret Duncan, the "healer," who was Miss Brush's constant companion for nearly five years, completed her testimony before Dr. Pease went on the stand. She explained that Mrs. Stetson had entire charge of Miss Brush during her illness, and that Dr. Pease had been called in solely as an assistant and administered no medicine. She said that Miss Brush did not want Dr. Pease "to give his valuable time for nothing," and had asked him his charges for giving the "impersonal treatment." He had replied that when he had practiced medicine he had charged $3 to $5 a visit, so $51 was given the doctor for his services up to July 7, when Miss Brush died. The only medical treatment he gave was to advise a change of diet for Miss Brush and recommended her to drink milk. Miss Duncan also told about the different editions of "Science and Health."

SANTA CLAUS VISITS EAST SIDE.

Children of Industrial School No. 6 Learn He Is No Myth.

Santa Claus, laden with Christmas gifts and good things to eat, came four days ahead of time to the 350 small children of the east side who are pupils at the Home Industrial School, No. 6, yesterday. Many of the children, none of whom is over ten years old, had until yesterday grave fears that the legendary old gentleman was a myth after all, but his presence in the flesh, long white beard and overflowing pack, banished all lingering doubt.

Good Saint Nick's advent was anxiously awaited by the little fellows, and when Miss Elizabeth Brotherton, the Principal, called the roll in the morning not one was absent. Sturdy youngsters with cleanly scrubbed faces and unusually well brushed hair sat in their seats three deep.

Santa Claus distributed beautiful red striped candy, rosy cheeked apples, and golden oranges, until chubby fists could hold no more and then plates of ice cream without number were set before the expectant children. Thinly clad boys put away three helpings of the frozen cream and wished for more, while the big policeman at the entrance slapped his chest vigorously to keep warm. Mrs. H. H. Rogers was the good fairy who supplied the feast.

When there was no more cream to eat, in each little girl's eager hands was placed a gorgeously dressed doll, which was quickly hugged to palpitating little hearts amid choruses of delighted "Ah's" and "Oh's." The boys in turn received tin horns and skates and games. The gifts were from friends of the institution. Miss Helen Gould maintains the industrial department. Christmas contributions of all kinds for the children whose parents are personally known to the teachers will be received at all times by the committee.

Fell to Death Under a Train.

Two boys were picking up coal on the West Shore Railroad tracks at Fifth Street, Hoboken, last night, when they found the mutilated body of a man. From inquiries made by the police, it was learned that the man had fallen from a freight train and that several cars had passed over him. On the body was found a working card issued by the Compressed Air and Foundation Workers of America, from headquarters, at 147 West Thirty-second Street, Manhattan, to Peter Pice.

Coal Exchange Elects Officers.

The Retail Coal Exchange met last night at 131 East Fifty-eighth Street and elected the following officers: Henry Brenich, President; G. D. Curtis, First Vice President; George Eltz, Second Vice President; A. F. Keckeisen, Secretary, and John Rodenberg, Treasurer. Trustees, J. S. Smoot, J. Pangburn, Jr., and William Brennan.

TELEPHONE COMPANY WINS.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—Justice Colt, in the United States Circuit Court to-day decided in favor of the American Bell Telephone Company in the royalty suit brought by the Western Union Telegraph Company.

The case is known as the Stock Ticker Case, in which the Western Union sought to recover $12,000,000 rentals or royalties under a contract between them and the National Bell Telephone Company, the defendant's predecessor, made on Nov. 10, 1879.

The case has been before the courts since 1883, and was mainly based upon a claim of 20 per cent. of the profits received by the defendant in return for the telephone business of the Western Union, which under the contract was turned over to the telephone company.

SET HER CLOTHES ON FIRE.

Mrs. Mary Matzall of 1½ Monroe Street was discharged yesterday afternoon from the Essex Market Police Court, where she had been arraigned on a charge of attempting suicide. On Dec. 13 she had tried to end her existence by jumping from a fourth story window at her home. She escaped fatal injuries. She had previously attempted to kill herself by taking poison.

When discharged from the court yesterday she went at once to her home, saturated her clothing with kerosene and set fire to it. A neighbor heard her cries, and rushing into the room found her enveloped in flames. A policeman, called in hurriedly, threw the woman to the floor and wrapped her in a mat, extinguishing the flames, after which she was taken to the Gouverneur Hospital. The woman's body is terribly burned, and this time, the surgeons say, her perseverance is likely to be rewarded with success.

The Bailey Fails to Make Thirty Knots.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 21.—The new torpedo boat Bailey failed in her attempt to complete her standardizing trial to-day, likewise failing to reach a 30-knot speed, on account of a poor quality of coal used in firing. Her failure to reach the necessary speed was not a surprise to those on board who saw the way the poor coal acted. The Bailey would repeatedly go a little over 29 knots and then the steam would fall off. A better quality of coal cannot be obtained here, and it will require some time to have a supply sent.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

Total Is About $60,000,000, of Which $23,000,000 Is Cash.

LIKELY TO BREAK THE RECORD

Senate Has Not Yet Made Its Additions—Some of the Principal Items.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The River and Harbor bill was completed to-night, and Chairman Burton gave out a statement showing the amounts appropriated. The total is approximately $60,000,000, of which about $23,000,000 is in direct appropriations and about $37,000,000 in the authorization of contracts for continuous work.

Compared with former River and Harbor bills, the present one is the second largest on record, and after the Senate has added amendments it is expected to be well up to, if not ahead of, all previous records. The bill of 1900 carried $39,958,165, and that of 1897, which was the largest on record, carried $72,275,974.

The appropriations and contracts over $25,000 for the Eastern States and the largest Western items shown by the statement are as follows:

The appropriations made for Sandy Bay, Cape Ann, Harbor of Refuge, and Galveston Ship Channel, and Buffalo Bayou, are not to be expended unless the projects receive the approval of a board of engineers to be appointed to examine and report upon them.

FOUND DYING, HOUSE ABLAZE.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Dec. 21.—The police here are trying to solve the mystery surrounding the death of Mordecai Mills, seventy-five years old, who was found in a dying condition in his burning house at Sweet Hollow yesterday.

Neighbors attracted by the smoke found that the door was locked and the key missing. When the door was forced the old man was discovered sitting unconscious on a lounge in a corner of a room in a deep stupor. The floor of the room was ablaze, and a bed, which was in the kitchen, had been consumed. After the fire had been extinguished a messenger was sent for Dr. Carpenter of Little York. He responded, but when he arrived the old man was dead. No marks of violence were found.

County Physician Cramer learned that Mills had considerable money upon his person on Wednesday night, and although the official thoroughly searched the house, not a cent was found. The old man's pockets had evidently been rifled of their contents. They were turned inside out, and everything about the house was in disorder.

Mills was miserly and lived alone, denying himself nearly all the necessities of life. He drew a pension, and also made money by cutting spokes and selling them. He had hoarded his money for years. He had a bank account at the Bloomsbury National Bank.

STUDENTS IN A HOT FIGHT.

Police Stop a Riot at a Debate of Literary Societies of the College of New York.

A clash took place last night between the freshmen and sophomores of the College of the City of New York in the concert hall of the Madison Square Garden during the annual debate between the Clionian and Phrenocosmian Literary Societies of the college.

The debate had proceeded about half way when the sophomores who occupied the gallery with the freshmen made an effort to steal the latter's banner. There was a clash and the audience, which was large and contained many women, was almost panic-stricken. A messenger went to the West Thirtieth Street Station and Capt. Thomas with a Roundsman and a detail of ten patrolmen was soon at the Garden. They entered the gallery and drove the students into the street, but in the meantime the freshmen had regained their banner after a hard fight.

The members of both classes assembled on the Twenty-fifth Street side of the Garden and made several efforts to get at each other, but the police prevented further trouble.

The judges, Alexander P. Ketchum of the Board of Education; Justice David Leventritt, and John Whalen, Corporation Counsel, awarded the debate to the Clionian Society, which took the affirmative on the question, "Resolved, that a partition of the Chinese Empire such as the powers would agree to would benefit the Chinese."

Sevill Schofield Dead.

Sevill Schofield, one of the best-known manufacturers of woolens in this country, died suddenly yesterday at his home, in Manayunk, a manufacturing district of Philadelphia. Mr. Schofield was sixty-eight years old, and was the pioneer manufacturer of Manayunk. He was a millionaire, having made much money during the civil war manufacturing blankets for the Union Army, but in the last decade had met with frequent business reverses. He, however, was active in business up to the time of his death.

AN IMPORTER ARRESTED.

Byron A. Robinson Locked Up on Technical Charge as a Suspicious Person.

Byron A. Robinson, who lives in the apartment house at 356 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street, and whose business, as given by the City Directory as that of an importer, at 78 Wall Street, was locked up last night in the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station on a technical charge as a suspicious person.

Policeman Hearty, who made the arrest, says that Mr. Robinson is accused by Frank Rolands of 356 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street of forging a draft for $1,275, to which the names of Rolands and A. Lindo of 1 Broadway were attached.

Neither Rolands nor Lindo could be found and Robinson would not talk. Robinson and Rolands, it is said by the patrolman, had business dealings together.

The case will come up in the Harlem Police Court to-day.

REMINDED OF NEW ENGLAND.

At the twenty-first annual dinner of the New England Society in Brooklyn last night 125 descendants of the Puritans assembled to do them honor by feasting and speech-making on the two hundred and eightieth anniversary of the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock.

The dinner was held at the Assembly Rooms of the Academy of Music, on Montague Street, and, although more elaborate than the feasts at which the Puritans regaled themselves, contained some reminder of New England in every course.

The hall was decorated with the flags of the various New England States, and Boston baked beans formed a part of the dinner. Among the guests were Augustus Van Wyck, Judge Edward B. Thomas of the United States Court, and Justice William D. Dickey of the Supreme Court.

Prof. Edward Howard Griggs of the Brooklyn Institute spoke on "The New England Intellect." C. T. Winchester of Wesleyan University spoke on "The Golden Age of New England Literature," and Capt. Joshua Slocum, who made a voyage around the world in his eighty-ton sloop The Spray about two years ago, made a speech entitled "The Yankee Afloat," in which he related incidents of his voyage around the world. The Rev. Alexander McGaffin of the Second Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn spoke on "The Independent and the Presbyterian."

RELIGIOUS NEWS AND VIEWS

General Revival Planned to Mark the New Century.

Remarkable Growth of the Presbyterian Sect Since 1801—Church Extension Movement.

Plans for Christmas observances in the different churches of the city are quite overshadowed by the preparations that are being made on all sides for services in honor of the passing of the old century. In a few cases formal observances are to end the celebration, but most of the churches intend to institute movements of lasting good in honor of the occasion, one of the plans of the kind being that of the Congregationalists, who will launch a church extension movement and start a periodical and a field day for the followers of the sect in this city. Among those engaged in the undertaking will be the Rev. Drs. Meredith, Jefferson, Kent, Ingersoll, Lyman, and McLeod.

John Wanamaker is to be the principal speaker at a meeting with which the Presbyterians are to begin their twentieth century movement. This meeting is scheduled for the evening of Jan. 3 in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, and, while it is not the purpose of the promoters to raise money at that time, the gathering is designed to arouse interest in a plan for raising a specified sum to be used by the church in home and foreign missions, the endowing of Presbyterian educational institutions, and local efforts toward church extension. Among the other speakers at the initial meeting will be the Rev. Dr. Malthie D. Babcock, the Rev. Dr. F. F. Ellinwood, and the Rev. Dr. George T. Purves, the latter presiding.

During the last General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church a special committee was appointed to secure from every church and individual member offerings for the work of the new century. The New York members of the committee are Dr. Purves, William E. Dodge, and H. Edwards Rowland. By the raising of the twentieth century fund it is proposed to commemorate the growth of the Presbyterian Church within the last hundred years. In 1801 there were in this country 183 Presbyterian ministers, 449 churches, and about 20,000 communicants, whereas the corresponding figures for the year just past are 7,467, 7,750, and 1,007,689.

In conection with these statistics it should be remembered that within the century the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, numbering 180,113 members, and the Presbyterian Church South, with 225,890 communicants, separated from the main body. The total number of Presbyterian churches now in the country is, therefore, 1,413,771, a figure that shows an increase of seventy to one since 1801. In that year there were no missionaries representing this church in the foreign field; now there are 627 churches, with a total of 37,820 members, almost twice as many communicants as the whole church had in the United States at the beginning of the century. In 1801 the church had no Sunday schools; to-day it has them everywhere, and the total number of teachers, officials, and pupils is 1,085,205. The Home Mission Board now has 1,743 workers; a hundred years ago it had just a score.

SUBJECT—Review.

It is interesting and important to notice at the outset of this "Review" that during the last three months we have not had the personality of our Lord and Saviour at all presented to us as it was in the previous three months' lessons, and as it will be in those of the next three months. We have had, for instance, no such incidents brought before us as "The Walking on the Sea," or "The Transfiguration," or the sending out of "The Seventy." Neither have we heard Him present Himself to men in any such way as "The Bread of Life," or as "The Son of the Living God," or as "The Good Shepherd."

But we have sat at His feet, and heard Him teach concerning men—men like ourselves. And this He has done, not as a learned rabbi or scribe, or any other kind of earthly teacher. In His discourses concerning men, He has made their condition far more prominent than He has made Himself—His subjects of discussion have been very different from any known or considered in the ordinary "schools"—and His manner of teaching has been far above that of any other, and yet far more simple.

All of these are very important considerations, for they declare very emphatically that the teaching was evidently not intended to simply tell men how to regulate and improve their conduct toward each other, although much of it may profitably be used for that purpose. It was rather to set forth the relation of man to God, and to show how that relationship should be affected by God's plan of redemption.

It therefore could not have been, as some have been disposed to interpret it, in any instance intended to apply solely, or even chiefly, to individual men, or to specific classes among men, for He never recognized individual or class distinctions. As the Redeemer of all men, He so spake, by parable and by miracle, that all men of every class and condition might know of the riches of His grace and of their own personal responsibilities. The keynote, therefore, of the whole series of lessons is

"Never man spake like this Man." (John, vii., 46.) "For He taught them as One having authority, and not as the Scribes." (Matt., vii., 29.) "And they were astonished at His doctrine; for His word was with power." (Luke, iv., 32.)

MIRACLES AND PARABLES.

In this course of lessons, our attention has been directed to

A Man with the Dropsy.
The Ten Lepers.
Blind Bartimeus.
A Pharisee on the Sabbath Day.
The Rich Young Ruler.
Zaccheus, the Publican.
The Great Supper.
The Lost Sheep and Coin.
The Prodigal Son.
The Unjust Steward.
The Rich Man and Lazarus.
The Pounds.

I.—The Miracles. The first of these was a case of "dropsy." The healing occurred on the Sabbath day in the house of a Pharisee. The disease in itself was not contagious or excessively painful, or such as separated the sufferer from religious and social privileges. But it made him exceedingly uncomfortable, anxious, and expectant of evil. His days were full of trouble, with death staring him in the face. When the man who was thus afflicted came to Jesus on this Sabbath day "He took him and healed him and let him go." (Luke, xiv., 4.) Then he was delivered from all fear.

On another occasion "ten lepers" met Jesus, and cried to Him for help. Seeing at a glance their condition, He simply said to them, as directed by the law: "Go show yourselves unto the priests." "As they went they were cleansed." Nine, however, were satisfied with a merely outward cleansing and a restoration to their social and business relationships, and they had no thanks to give for all that they had received from Him. Only one "turned back and with a loud voice glorified God." (Luke, xvii., 14, 15.)

The third case was that of the blind son of Timeus. He was deeply concerned because of his condition, and when he heard that Jesus of Nazareth was passing by the place where he sat in darkness nothing could restrain him from crying: "Thou Son of David, have mercy on me!" The one thing that he desired, he said, was: "'Lord, that I may receive my sight.' And Jesus said unto him: 'Receive thy sight; thy faith hath saved thee.'" At once, with opened eyes and a glad heart, he followed Jesus, "glorifying God." (Luke, xviii., 39-48.)

Thus Jesus ever comes to the poor, blind sinner conscious of his condition, and He opens his eyes, cleanses him from the foul leprosy of sin, and, taking away all of his restlessness, He gives him peace.

II.—The Interviews. In these interviews we see our Lord dealing with mental and spiritual conditions, as in His miracles He dealt with the physical. The first of these was with a Pharisee, in his own house, and on the Sabbath day. There Jesus had been invited "to eat bread." As He spoke of the different circumstances which arose either before or during that meal He used them to set before His host and the other guests such a glowing description of the heavenly feast that one of the guests involuntarily exclaimed: "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God:" (Luke, xiv., 15.) This led to the parable of "The Great Supper."

The next personal interview was with "the rich young ruler." The one absorbing thought which filled his mind and gave him anxiety was how to be sure of entering heaven. So he came running to Jesus, and, kneeling before Him, he said, with all earnestness: "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" (Luke, xviii., 18.) His earthly life had been without reproach. He had kept the whole law from his youth up, he said, and yet he did not feel safe for eternity. Jesus said that he lacked only "one thing," but when He told him what it was—to let go dependence on everything of his own and to follow Him, like the great world whom he represented—he would not do it. The very thought of it "grieved" him, and "he went away sorrowful." Many have followed in his footsteps.

CONVERSION OF ZACCHEUS.

The last interview was with Zaccheus, the rich publican of Jericho. In some way not explained in the narrative he had been awakened to have a longing desire "to see Jesus who He was." So when He came into Jericho, Zaccheus, overcoming every obstacle in his way, had his desire gratified. He not only saw Jesus, but he heard His gracious declaration: "To-day I must abide at thy house." (Luke, xix., 5.) So the sinner received the Saviour, and that day salvation came to that house.

Thus Jesus deals with the careless, the self-righteous, and the penitent, when they come into personal relations with Him. The careless. He would awaken to realize that there is more blessedness in heavenly things than in earthly. The self-righteous, He bids to follow Him. And to the penitent, He brings salvation.

III. The Parables.—In these it will be noticed that our Lord did not depict either the characteristic of the believer, nor those of the Kingdom of Heaven, as He did in some other parables, which we have considered. But He set before us great spiritual relationships, which belong to all men, and illustrated them by the common relations which all men bear to one another, and to the circumstances in which they are placed. They tell us, but not in the order in which we have studied them, of the obligations resting upon all men, of their responsibilities, of God's grace toward them, of their condition by nature, and how He meets it, and of their eternal destiny.

Thus in the parable of "The Pounds," we saw that every man, woman and child, in every age and in every condition, is intrusted with something which is to be used for the glory of God and the good of men. In this respect all stand on one common footing, for "He giveth to all life and breath and all things," (Acts xvii., 25.) as the "nobleman gave to each of his servants a pound, which he was "to occupy" until he came. Every man is at perfect liberty to use this trust as he pleases. He may "trade" with it or hide it in the earth, but he must answer for it. "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in the body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." II. Corinthians, v., 10.)

The great mass of men, however, have put a very slight apprehension of this obligation, or of their responsibility for it. While seeing clearly in their dealings with one another the necessity of rendering "to Caesar the things that are Caesar's," they see no necessity whatever of rendering "to God the things that are God's." When He is concerned, like "The Unjust Steward," they deliberately belittle their obligations to Him—they bring them within limits which they think that they can easily reach themselves. Their course is approved by all about them, and so they presume to satisfy God by simply satisfying men.

THE UNIVERSAL INVITATION.

But God does not leave men to themselves. He comes to them in infinite grace with the invitations of the Gospel, and His invitations are always to a "great Supper." He says to all: "Come, for all things are now ready." Having no valid reason why they should not accept this invitation, as they have with one consent belittled their obligations to their Lord, so now they "all with one consent" begin to make excuse" (Luke, xiv., 17, 18) for not coming, or they take "light" of the invitation itself. These "excuses" they "make out" of the very things which He has intrusted to their care as His stewards.

The grace of God, however, does not end with simply inviting men to come to Him. He seeks them, as the shepherd sought his sheep, and as the woman sought her coin. In fact, the invitation itself is based on all that is involved in this seeking, for, by it, all things are made ready. It includes the whole work of redemption, in which Jesus Christ "came to seek, and to save, that which was lost." (Luke, xix., 10.)

But the salvation of the sinner demands more than an atonement by the life and death of Jesus. There must also be an awakening, and a renewing, in the man himself by the Holy Ghost. This was brought before us very clearly in the way by which the woman found her coin. Although she swept her room carefully and faithfully with her broom, yet she could not find it, until it received the light of her candle, and then reflected it back to her.

So with the sinner. Like "The Younger Son," he must come to himself. It may be necessary for God's "broom" to sweep him, as it did this prodigal, but it is not until he is enlightened by the Spirit to see his lost condition, that he is willing to return. When, however, he can, and will, say truly, "I have sinned," that is repentance. And when he adds, "I will arise and go to my Father," that is faith. So, repenting and believing, he is received graciously, clothed with the best robe, and sits down at the "Great Supper" as a beloved son.

THE ELDER SON.

But "The Elder Son"—who had no real love for his father—who, to commend himself to his favor, depended upon fulfilling his own little ideas of what was due to him—who had no faith in him—and, because he said "neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment," had no repentance—this man "would not go in" to that supper. There are very many like him.

Then in the striking parable of "The Rich Man and Lazarus," our Lord lifted the veil that hides the life which is after death, from the life which is before it, and by this uplifting we had a glimpse into the destiny of men. That destiny for all eternity, was determined in time. During his earthly life, "The Rich Man" was "clothed in purple and fared sumptuously every day," and he was so satisfied with these "good things" that he neither sought nor desired anything better, although fully instructed by "Moses and the prophets." When he passed into the other life, all this came to an end. Then he was for all eternity a poor, suffering beggar, craving a drop of water to quench his thirst, but utterly unable to obtain it. In his lifetime he might have drunk of "the water of life" freely and fully, but when invited to do so, he made excuses and turned away. Now there was no water for him.

The beggar Lazarus, however, who lay at "The Rich Man's" gate when he lived on the earth, although poor among men, was "rich toward God." He, too, had heard "Moses and the prophets." With a humble heart he had confessed his transgressions against the law of Moses, and with a strong faith he had laid hold of the promises of the prophets. So, even in his sorrows he had found peace. When he died he was carried by the angels to rest forever in "Abraham's bosom."

Such are some of the great and blessed truths brought before us in the lessons of the last three months. In them, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake by the prophets, hath spoken unto us by His Son." (Hebrews i., 1, 2.) As He said on the Mount of Transfiguration to the Apostles, so He says now to us, "Hear ye Him." (Matthew xvii., 5.)

THE PROPOSED NEW DIOCESE.

Highland Clericus Listens to Address by Rev. Octavius Applegate.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, Dec. 21.—A well attended meeting of the Highland Clericus, which includes the Episcopal clergy of the Counties of Dutchess, Orange, and Ulster, was held in the parish house of St. George's, Newburg, yesterday, to listen to a paper by the Rev. Octavius Applegate, rector of St. John's, Kingston, on the proposed division of the diocese of New York.

The treatment of the subject elicited the applause of those present. Mr. Applegate declared that the only remedy for the present condition of affairs was to be found in a division—a division which would relieve the present diocesan and give to the parishes an oversight which they could not now secure.

The paper was followed by discussion. Considerable divergence of views was expressed.

THE INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Gen. Greene Chief Marshal—Ball to be Held in Pension Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Senator Hanna, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, has announced the appointment of Gen. Francis V. Greene of New York to be Chief Marshal of the inaugural parade March 4 next. Gen. Greene is a soldier of wide reputation and has long been prominent in the Republican ranks.

Secretary Hitchcock to-day granted the Inaugural Committee permission to hold the ball and entertainments incident to the coming inauguration of President McKinley in the Pension Building. The spacious court of the Pension Office, with its architectural beauty and enormous proportions, is well fitted for the inaugural ball. It has been used on former occasions.

CANNON TO CHECK HAILSTORMS.

French and Italian Wine Growers Report Successful Results.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—John C. Covert, the United States Consul at Lyons, France, has sent to the State Department a supplementary report upon the subject of the prevention of hailstorms by cannon firing, which is generally in use among the wine growers of France and Italy.

Before the present improved cloud destroyers were in use, vine growers shot powder from a sheet-iron case fixed in a strong box on the trunk of a tree. In some parts of France they rang, and still ring, church bells at the approach of a hailstorm, believing that the vibrations in the atmosphere serve to break up the storm clouds. But these methods have given way to a scientific system of combating the elements by means of a novel artillery service. The guns are the shape of inverted cones, the opening at the mouth being 28½ inches. They are about 6½ feet in length, made of thin boiler iron, and stand upright upon tripods three feet high. At the base is a forged breach, which holds a forged iron block. In the centre is placed a metallic cartridge containing 80 drams of blasting powder, wadded with a cork, and tamped like an ordinary miner's blast. It is discharged by a needle on a lever attached to the base of the forged iron holder. The detonation is very loud.

Wine growers generally, states Consul Covert, are emphatic in their belief as to the efficacy of fighting hail with gunpowder.

In localities where great losses from hail have been incurred every season, the cannon were used last Summer and no hail fell. Two or three miles distant, where no cannon were fired, the hail was very destructive.

A single cannon will protect nearly seventy-five acres of land. Time and again, it is stated, approaching hail clouds have either had their direction changed or been broken into shreds, bringing a copious fall of rain in place of the threatened destructive hail shower.

Dr. Paul Cazeneuve, one of the most distinguished scientists in France, believes that the question of the infallibility of the cannon is still in the domain of experiment. He thinks that no amount of cannon firing would influence great storms, and asks what the cannon could have done against the terrible cyclone at Galveston. The doubts of this and other learned scientists, says Consul Covert, will not, however, prevent many thousands of cannon from being used in the vineyards of France next Summer. In Italy the number of cannon used in cloud shooting has swelled from 2,000 in 1899 to 15,000 last year.

MORE TUNNEL BIDS OPENED.

Contracts for the Forty-second Street Section May Be Let Soon.

Bids for contracts not yet let on the last section of the rapid transit road, that portion between Forty-first and Forty-seventh Streets, running through Forty-second Street and up Broadway, were opened by Contractor John B. McDonald on Thursday. Five or six bids were put in, and it is understood that the name of the fortunate contractor will be announced in a few days.

For one cause and another, principally the difficulties in construction in Forty-second Street and the necessary connections with the Grand Central Station, the letting of this section has hung fire for months, but construction will be pushed with unusual vigor to make up for lost time.

As heretofore stated, Forty-second Street, from the multiplicity of car tracks, pipes, and other underground obstructions, together with the necessity for blasting, is a difficult section to tunnel. The contractor, however, does not anticipate that delay on this single section will delay the running of trains beyond the specified time of four and a half years allowed for finishing the tunnel.

COUNCIL APPROVES BOND ISSUE

The Sum of $2,000,000 to be Made Available for Repaving Streets.

The Municipal Council yesterday approved the issue of $2,000,000 of bonds for repaving streets in the five boroughs of the city. This bond issue has been held up in the Municipal Assembly for months. The Board of Aldermen at first refused to vote for the bond issue, but, after a hard struggle, Commissioner of Highways Keating induced the members to see that his department was entitled to the money.

At yesterday's meeting of the Council there was no discussion of the matter. To the surprise of all the members, on the roll call twenty-two voted in the affirmative. The only negative vote was that of Councilman Bodine of the Borough of Richmond. At previous meetings Councilmen Murray, Bodine, and several others opposed the bond issue.

The sum of about $1,000,000 of the $2,000,000 will be spent on streets in the Borough of Manhattan and the Bronx. Brooklyn will get over $500,000 of the sum, and the remainder will be spent in Queens and Richmond.

The Pig Iron Slump in England.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES, England, Dec. 21.—The pig iron slump is keenly felt in the Cleveland district. More furnaces will have stopped by Dec. 31 than have been known to shut down since 1886. The production of the district has decreased 35,000 tons monthly. The furnace owners assert that the price has fallen 18s. during the last six months, and that pig iron cannot be produced at a profit.

Successor to Justice Beekman.

ALBANY, Dec. 21.—Gov Roosevelt announced to-day that he was likely to appoint a successor to the late Justice Henry R. Beekman to-morrow.

John Proctor Clarke is regarded as Gov. Roosevelt's probable appointee to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench caused by the death of Henry R. Beekman. The appointment probably will be announced to-day.

Brief Railroad Items.

The dividend meeting of the Directors of the Lackawanna Railroad will be held on Dec. 2.

The Manhattan Railway reports a daily traffic this week of 650,000 passengers. The escalator at Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue is reported to have brought a large increase in traffic at that point.

C. G. Doyle has been appointed General Manager of the Chesapeake and Ohio, an office which has been vacant since G. W. Stevens was made President. C. C. Walker, formerly Division Superintendent at Hinton, West Va., has been appointed to succeed Mr. Doyle as General Superintendent of the Eastern Division at Richmond.

Traffic managers of Western lines have been informed by the Presidents of these lines that resignations will be asked for unless the rates are maintained. The Presidents themselves will be held responsible for all rate manipulation by the Advisory Committee.

STRANGE SYMBOLS AND UNFAMILIAR HANDS.

No Democrat will be in the least surprised to learn that Mr. CLEVELAND'S stirring adjuration is wholly unintelligible to W. J. BRYAN. Re-establish the old-time faith? I do not know what that means, says Mr. BRYAN. Mr. CLEVELAND must explain. Return from our wanderings? How could BRYAN be expected to understand that? He never saw the old home, and for the life of him could not tell where it stands. Nor can the nomadic adventurer comprehend the reference to strange symbols on banners borne by unfamiliar hands. He never stood beneath the old flag. Any banner, any symbols, will do for him, if they are changeable at his will, and the chieftain of a rabble army recruited on the march is never too particular about the hands that hold up the staff.

Yet how swiftly this compact and startling analysis of the party disaster penetrates the understanding of every Democrat who has studied the old creed and seen the flag:

> The culmination of Democratic woe was reached when its compact with these un-Democratic forces was complete, and when our rank and file were summoned to do battle under banners which bore strange symbols and were held aloft in unfamiliar hands. The result of such a betrayal was foredoomed. This abandonment of the principles of true Democracy, this contemptuous disobedience of its traditions, and this deliberate violation of the law of its strength and vigor were, by a decree as inexorable as those of fate, followed by the inevitable punishment of stunning, staggering defeat.

It was an alien horde that overbore the old leaders at Chicago in 1896. They seized the organization, they took the name. They were never Democrats. The observing read the truth in the mongrel roster of the defeated forces after that first battle. The second disaster has made it plain to every eye. We can now trace the origin and antecedents of these Populists who forced themselves and BRYAN and staggering defeat upon the Democracy.

It was Populism that confused and betrayed the Democracy, and Populism sprang from Republican loins. It is not Democratic in parentage or blood or behavior. It took its rise and reached its high and sudden development in those States and that part of the country where Republicanism was formerly supreme and Republican majorities overwhelming. The States that were rock-ribbed in their devotion to the party of GRANT and HAYES and GARFIELD were precisely the States where Bryanism raged like a prairie fire in 1896, overcoming the old Republican majorities and implanting in the minds of superficial observers the false and dangerous notion that the new doctrines had made tens of thousands of new Democrats, whose accession would insure ultimate triumph, even after a first defeat.

But these recruits were not Democrats, they never became Democrats, for when the causes that had made them Populists had ceased to be operative, when the hard times due to Republican silver legislation had given place to good times for the coming of which the way was prepared by the firmness and courage of GROVER CLEVELAND, in causing the vicious law to be erased from the statute book, they began to go back to the Republican Party, where they came from, reducing BAYAN'S pluralities everywhere and carrying some of the Populist States of 1896 once more into the Republican column. This swinging of old Republican votes from that party over to the Democracy, for its ruin, and back again to Republicanism, is exhibited by the figures of the votes cast in five Presidential elections in the three typical Republican-Populist States of Colorado, Kansas, and Nebraska:

	Colorado.	Kansas.	Nebraska.
1876—
Republican	.....	78,622	31,916
Democratic	.....	37,902	17,554
1880—
Republican	27,450	121,549	54,970
Democratic	24,647	50,801	28,524
1888—
Republican	50,744	182,904	108,425
Democratic	37,567	102,745	80,552
1896—
Republican	26,271	159,541	102,304
Democratic	161,103	171,810	115,880
1900—
Republican	93,072	185,955	121,835
Democratic	122,733	162,601	114,013

Here is a cycle of political change, in large part completed and evidently on its way to fuller accomplishment. Kansas and Nebraska have swung all the way back to Republicanism. In Colorado the Republicans have gained 67,000 votes, as compared with 1896, while BAYAN has lost nearly 40,000. The recruits whom BAYAN brought have deserted even him. They have no interest in the principles of the Democratic Party. They have for a brief time been Populists; they were and are Republicans. The shift over to Populism is exhibited, also, in the figures of the Presidential election of 1892. In that year the Democrats nominated no Electors in Colorado, having effected a fusion with the People's Party, whose candidate, WEAVER, received 53,584 votes, against 38,620 for HARRISON. A similar fusion in Kansas gave WEAVER 163,111 votes, against 157,237 for HARRISON. In North Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming also Democracy was ignobly yoked with Populism, and in all but Wyoming, Weaver Electors were chosen. In that year 1,122,045 Populist votes were cast, and it was the Republican West and Northwest that contributed the bulk of them, Minnesota, for instance, giving WEAVER 110,456 votes, CLEVELAND 100,920, and HARRISON 122,823. The hell-brew of Populism was then preparing that in the next two Presidential elections stupefied and strangled the Democratic Party. It was compounded of Republican elements and mixed by Republican hands.

It is natural and quite to be expected that a proclamation of the old-time principles of Democracy should be unintelligible to the ears of these Populist outlanders. It is not to be wondered at that their leader should be mystified when Democrats speak of the strange, false symbols that defile the flag.

But to Democrats the words of Mr. CLEVELAND ring with a clear meaning. To them he sends an awakening message.

THE CHINESE MUDDLE.

What is clear concerning the recent negotiations with China is that our representative in Peking has been forcing his own views into the discussion of the terms of peace with very scanty regard to the obligations he is under to carry out the instructions of his Government. In fact, the obstinacy he has shown has verged upon bad faith. His explanation of the manner in which he was induced to read into the dispatches from Washington the contrary of what they contained is said to be incredible to those who are in the best position to judge of its plausibility. Everybody can understand that Mr. CONGER'S own experience has exceedingly imbittered him against the Chinese Government. It seems that the time has come when we should have a representative at Peking who has no personal resentments the gratification of which will be prevented by a strict compliance with his instructions.

Of course, we dismiss as incredible the rumor that after finding that Mr. CONGER had signed the agreement of the Powers, containing stipulations to which his Government was opposed, his Government accepted the violation of its instructions as a compliance with them, and concluded to let itself be committed to the use of the word "irrevocable" in connection with the demands. It has already been explained, semi-officially, that our objection to the use of that word, in connection with demands which are made in great detail, of which some are of little importance, and of which others may be impossible of execution, was that on the occasion of the most trivial failure to execute any one of them we should be committing ourselves to enforce the whole list by war. The objection is sound and well taken. It did not go to the form of the agreement alone, but to its substance. It was our interest and our duty to maintain it. It is inconceivable that we have abandoned our interest and our duty, simply because Mr. CONGER declares that he has misunderstood his instructions and has signed the agreement according to that misunderstanding. By acquiescing in his blunder our Government would put itself in the position of having insisted for weeks, at the risk of breaking the concert, upon a point which, by yielding it finally, it would admit to be trifling.

That position is of course untenable, and we shall require much clearer proof than is now accessible to persuade us that it has been adopted. We have had the right of this Chinese business all along and have gained the lead because we were in the right. It would be a very sorry ending to our negotiations to abandon, by reason of a telegraphic mistake, a position which we have only to hold firmly in order to force the other Powers to come around to it.

MR. M'KINLEY AND THE CIVIL SERVICE.

During the recent meeting of the National Civil Service Reform League in this city a report was submitted from a committee practically covering the changes in the civil service since the first election of President MCKINLEY. It was a temperate and carefully guarded statement of facts as found by a committee composed of men from each party and without partisan prejudice. It was not flattering, so far as the service in the United States is concerned, while it was much more satisfactory as to the service in the new possessions, which is most directly under the charge of the President.

This is a curious condition of affairs. It certainly is not what might be expected in comparing a service immediately under the eyes of the American people and one in remote regions where laxness and irregularity might presumably escape detection. In those regions not only has the standard of appointment been higher, but there has been a more consistent and energetic attempt to apply the principle of the merit system throughout. At home the standard has been lowered as to the appointments within the gift of the President, and the requirements of the merit system have been persistently evaded. In fact, so general and so bold were these evasions in the first year of Mr. MCKINLEY'S first term that the rules were changed to cover them. So that it has come about that the principle of impartial appointments for tested fitness alone in the subordinate places of the service is not so generally applied and is not so honestly enforced as under either President CLEVELAND or President HARRISON. There has been at home a distinct and pretty long "backward step."

If we ask how this has occurred while the course of the President as to like matters in the new possessions has been in the opposite direction, we think that the answer must be that in the latter case Mr. MCKINLEY has felt and been made to feel more keenly his responsibility, while at home that responsibility is shared with the members of the Senate and the House and with the leading politicians of his party. It must be added that the American people generally have been much more sensitive as to the character of the service in the new possessions than as to the service in their own country. Of course, this is an explanation, not a justification, of the conduct of the President. We believe that he has tried to keep his pledges as to the service as far as he could without breaking with the party leaders and endangering plans which he considered of more immediate importance. That does not really excuse him for neglecting his pledges. We are convinced, moreover, that he has made a serious error in his estimate of the need of "keeping in with" the party leaders, and that if he had held to the straight way and appealed to the people, they would have backed him up and rendered the politicians utterly helpless. If the people have been indifferent, it has been partly because they were not informed and partly because the President made no appeal to them. Had he done so, instead of yielding to the pressure of the politicians, he would, we are sure, have been sustained overwhelmingly.

We wish he would change his course for the next four years. Surely he has nothing now to fear from those leaders of his party who are opposed to the principle of public office as a public trust. His own future is secure. That of his party is equally so for a long period, if it conducts itself decently. Nothing that he really cares for either for himself or for his party can be promoted by the continuance and extension of the wretched plan of political patronage to which he has given such aid. On the contrary, his own reputation and the hold of his party on the confidence of the American people will be much strengthened by the steady restriction of patronage and by the firmer settlement of the civil service on the basis of tested merit. This is absolutely within the power of the President. The law gives him the determination of the principle of appointment for every person in the employ of the Government, from the Cabinet officer to the humblest clerk. He may be sure that Congress will not change that law against his protest. He can in no way do his country a nobler service or win a richer reward of gratitude than by the abolition of party patronage and the establishment of the business of the Government on business principles.

THE CANTEEN.

One of the points in which the Army bill, as reported to the Senate, is a better measure than that which passed the House, is the partial restoration of the canteen. The Military Committee of the Senate proposes that the sale of beer alone shall be permitted in the post exchanges. Why the light wines which are now allowed to be sold are not also included does not appear. It is certain that, to many constitutions, pure wines are more wholesome than beer of the same alcoholic strength, and moreover they are commonly drunk diluted. There seems no reason why an enlisted man should not have his choice between two equally innocuous, or, if Mr. DUNNE and the W. C. T. U. will insist upon it, equally noxious beverages.

But that is a small matter compared with the importance of preserving the canteen, as the only method of preserving the post exchange, which an overwhelming majority of officers report to be a most valuable and even indispensable agency for promoting temperance, discipline, and contentment in the army. It is the enlisted man's club, and it does so much to mitigate the asperities of army life that it prevents desertions and encourages re-enlistments. This is practically the unanimous testimony of those who know its workings best and are most interested in the morale of the army. On the other side are the liquor dealers and the theoretical prohibitionists, who are now found working together, not for the first time. One party or the other of them is evidently taken in by this alliance. It behooves the theoretical prohibitionists to inquire which. Nobody else will believe that it is the saloon keepers. At least the W. C. T. U. is not now holding a convention in Washington. There is thus a fair chance that the amendment will be considered on its merits. That is a joyful prospect to those who are personally and officially interested in the promotion of discipline, contentment, and particularly of temperance in the United States Army.

MR. VANDERBILT'S TAXES.

Two of our contemporaries are disputing as to the amount of taxes on personal property the late Mr. VANDERBILT paid and ought to have paid on his personal property during his lifetime. They agree that he was assessed on only $400,000, but one of them insists that he ought to have paid on the whole $50,000,000 he is known to have possessed at the time of his death, while the other claims that all but $17,000,000 was exempt because it was invested in securities on which the issuing corporations were taxed. The difference in amount is considerable, but assuming that the smaller is correct it still remains true that the burdens of taxation borne by his fellow-citizens would have been sensibly lessened if this property had paid its share.

It is an old story. It is not worth while to examine too closely into motives or into the process by which men possessed of large amounts of personal property justify their evasion of taxation. The fact of evasion is notorious. Men incapable of dishonorable action in business and scrupulous in their respect for the rights of other individuals practice it. Whatever may be the explanation from the point of view of morals—and we confess that we can see little moral difference between evading taxes that others have to pay and taking money that belongs to others—the fact is that the collection of direct taxation on property, the title to which is not easily known and the ownership of which is easily concealed, is shown by long and varied experience to be impracticable.

The remedy for the injustice involved and for the unquestionably evil influence on the public mind lies in reaching this sort of property indirectly. This is by no means difficult. The way was pointed out years ago, and has been tried with success in other lands. It is simply to tax the rental value of real property. This is not an ideal method, but it is so nearly complete and efficient, and it is so infinitely superior to the present method that it ought to be adopted in this State without hesitation. The fundamental fact on which this method is based is that all profitable business requires the use of real property, and this use adds proportionately to the rental value of the property. On the other hand, the real property that is not used in profitable business has a rental value very evenly proportioned to the wealth of its owner or occupant. A tax on rental value, therefore, reaches substantially all the property to which the benefits of Government are extended and which ought to share in the cost of government. Such a tax is, moreover, very evenly and fairly distributed, and is collected with safety, ease, and certainty. Any agitation of the evasion of taxation by the owners of personal property that leads to the adoption of this equitable and thorough principle of taxation will do good.

A MAN OUT SHOPPING.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the first time in many years I have had imposed upon me the responsibility of Christmas shopping, and which I regret to say has proved to be anything but complimentary to the women of this city. A more brazen, impudent, uncouth, ill-bred, and indecent specimen of womanhood has never before been on public exhibition, than those I came in contact with at ——'s. In walking from one department to another, I was pushed, shoved, and knocked about like a rubber ball, being nearly thrown upon the floor on one occasion and trampled upon. At the elevator I tried Chesterfieldian mannerisms by waiting until three elevators had been filled, and then, on trying to get on to the fourth, the rush act was tried, and when I stood my ground I was assailed by a storm of uncomplimentary epithets. At one department one of these impudent vixens actually snatched a piece of goods out of my hands, and then proceeded to knock me away from the counter by punches in the ribs with her elbow under full swing from a pair of big shoulders.

At No. 2 there was simply a mob of women pulling, hauling, and crowding, affording just the kind of an opportunity sought by thieves and pickpockets. My watch was touched twice in going half way through the ground floor. On the —— Street entrance the mob was even worse, making pedestrianism impossible. The only policeman in sight was one on the avenue at the crossing helping to swell the mob. Pickpockets and thieves had their own way. It occurred to me, as well as to many others, whose expressions were public, that if the Captain of the police of this precinct was in the recent shake-up it would be well for the Chief to make another shake and get rid of him.

At No. 3 the crowd was largely from the country, consequently it was more orderly and decent, but at No. 4 it was similar to that at ——'s, besides some of the clerks showed more impudence than a grass-fed mule.

This experience, however, is well worth the expense and discomfort attending it, for it fairly demonstrated that a man has no rights which a woman respects in a department store, and therefore hereafter he cannot be expected to make Christmas presents. The only unfortunate coincidence in connection with it is that it has established a fact that the women of this city, for brazen effrontery, selfishness, and bad manners, are simply matchless and without a peer in any other of the cities of the world.

It would be well for the Committee of Fifteen, after reforming the slums, to extend their philanthropic movement to the higher classes and reform some of these women until they understand the common amenities due to the public, and especially in department stores. H.

A FROSTY MORNING.

From The Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times.

I love these frosty mornings,
When all the outer air
Is tingling with a freshness
And vim beyond compare.

The north wind in the tree-tops
Proclaims the coming dawn;
And sends the crisp leaves rattling
Across the frozen lawn.

From some adjacent farmyard
A watchful chanticleer
With raucous, joyous crowing
Assails the atmosphere.

Then, nearer home, a watchdog,
Awakened from his sleep,
Gives voice to his resentment
In tones prolonged and deep.

A wagon, bound for market,
Goes creaking down the road;
I hear the axles groaning
Beneath the heavy load.

The light grows at my window,
And on the pane, I see,
Jack Frost has limned a picture
Of silver tracery.

Now, from the servants' stairway
Slow feet pass down the hall;
And then a kitchen shutter
Clangs out against the wall.

I love, these frosty mornings,
To note these things, and then—
To draw the bedclothes closer,
And go to sleep again.

LODGE EXPLAINS TREATY

No Reason, He Says, Why Great Britain Should Object.

MEANING OF THE AMENDMENTS

Abandonment, for the Present, of Right to Fortify Goes to Last Verge of Concession.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Senator Lodge, who had charge of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in the Senate, to-day made the following statement:

"The Senate amendments are very important, but they are also very simple, although there seems to be some misunderstanding in regard to them, owing to the fact that all the debates upon the treaty took place behind closed doors. Now that the amendments and votes have been made public by order of the Senate, it may not be amiss to explain them briefly.

"Let me say first, that the amendments were not dictated by hostility toward England, and still less were they in any degree a reflection upon the Secretary of State, whose patriotism, purity of purpose, knowledge, accomplishments, and high achievement in dealing with our foreign relations, especially in China, are fully and cordially recognized by men of all parties and all shades of opinion in the Senate.

"The amendments were made by the Senate solely because in its opinion they were necessary for the interests of the United States, for the avoidance of any question as to the control of the canal, and consequently for the sake of peaceful and harmonious relations with the rest of the world on that subject in the future. The vote by which they were adopted shows this. The second or Davis amendment passed by a vote of 65 to 17, and the other two were adopted without division.

"The first amendment is a simple declaration that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty ceases to exist and is superseded by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. The object of the latter was to remove the former as an obstacle to the construction of the isthmian canal. Some good judges thought that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty did this completely as it stood. Others believed that certain portions of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty still remained in force. To allow this doubt to continue would have been a grave mistake. The American people desired to be rid of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty finally and beyond question. This is a reasonable and proper wish, and to fulfill it is the purpose of the first amendment.

MEANING OF DAVIS AMENDMENT.

"Under Article II. of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty as it stood, we were clearly bound, if engaged in war, to permit a hostile fleet, if it succeeded in getting inside the three-mile zone, to pass unmolested through the canal. This may or may not be a practical question, and it is of no consequence whether it is or not. It was a solemn promise to permit a hostile fleet to use the canal. That promise we either intended to keep or else we made it knowing that under the stress of war we should break it. If we meant to keep it, then it was a promise no nation ought to make. If we knew that we should not keep it in time of war, then it was only honest and fair to relieve ourselves of the obligation in the treaty itself.

This was the purpose of the second, or Davis, amendment, which entirely disposes of any such promise, and which follows exactly in principle, and almost exactly in words, Article X. of the Suez Convention, which reserved similar rights to Turkey, whose interest in the Suez Canal is trivial compared to ours in that proposed in Nicaragua.

"The third amendment strikes Article III., by which we engaged to invite other nations to adhere to the treaty and thereby become parties to it. Had there been no Clayton-Bulwer treaty, we should have negotiated with no one except Costa Rica and Nicaragua as to building the canal. With England, owing to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, we were obliged to treat, but, as we expect Europe to keep out of this hemisphere, it seemed to the Senate unwise, however excellent and liberal the intention, to invite European nations to share in an American treaty and thus give them the right to meddle in American affairs at any point.

"Such are the purposes of the three amendments, which in no way derogate from the intention of the United States that this canal shall be a neutral highway for the world's commerce."

GREAT BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE.

"Do you think England will accept or reject these Senate amendments?" the Senator was asked.

"That is a question I have been asked many times, and upon which I do not think it would be right or proper for me to express an opinion," was the reply. "But I think I can, with propriety, say a word as to our view of the amendments. It is well recognized in international law that, when the conditions under which a treaty has been made have radically changed and new conditions and new demands have arisen, this fact is an ample ground for seeking an abrogation or modification of the original instrument.

"The American people desire to build, and mean to build and control the isthmian canal. They recognize that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, made fifty years ago under conditions no longer existent, stands in the way. They have no desire to clear it from their path in a violent fashion by formally denouncing it, or by passing laws and taking action in contravention of its provisions. They wish to remove it by amicable arrangement in a suitable and becoming manner. The Hay-Pauncefote treaty was framed for this object.

"The Senate is part of the treaty-making power, and treaties sent to it for ratification are not strictly treaties, but projects for treaties. They are still inchoate. In the exercise of its undoubted rights, without the slightest reflection upon any one, and without a show of hostility to a friendly nation, the Senate, continuing the negotiation begun by Mr. Hay, offers three new propositions to England.

"They ask her to omit the clause inviting other nations to adhere, which does not touch her at all. They ask her to conform to our desires by agreeing in unmistakable language to the supersession of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which is the whole purpose of the negotiation. They ask her finally to accept in this treaty the reservation of rights in time of war which she granted to Turkey in the Suez Convention and of which as the present possessor of Egypt she is now herself the beneficiary. These propositions are all essential to American interests, and are fair, reasonable, friendly, and in no sense offensive.

THE RIGHT TO FORTIFY.

"England's interest in having the canal built, be it great or small, is second only to that of the United States, for she alone has, like the United States, large possessions in North America and both an Atlantic and Pacific Coast. We agree that all vessels of commerce and of war shall pass through the canal on the same terms as our own, and in war between other powers we agree to preserve the neutrality of the canal toward all belligerents. In deference to the wishes of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in regard to this treaty and not to us we may hereafter make with them, we relinquish the right to erect permanent fortifications, and, although there is no need of such fortifications the right to erect them is an important right, and its relinquishment goes to the last verge of concession.

"The vast expense of the canal is ours, the maintenance and defense of it are ours, and the American people will never permit a canal there which they do not control, because the defense of the United States overrides every other consideration. In building and maintaining the canal we assume a great burden by which the whole world will benefit, and if we bear the burden alone the power and the control must be ours alone also.

"We desire to dispose of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty in the most friendly way possible. We are most averse to any other disposition of it. England does not intend to go to war with us to prevent our building the canal, and if it is physically possible to build it we mean in any event to do so.

"Under these circumstances, we are very clear that it is as much for England's interest as ours to accept the new propositions in the friendly spirit in which they are offered and thus end a controversy over an outworn treaty, which is only a stumbling block to both nations. It is not to be doubted that the English Ministers, whose ability, experience, and reputation are known to all the world, will duly weigh all these considerations and rightly comprehend the purpose of the Senate amendments and the spirit in which they are presented."

TO SEND TREATY TO ENGLAND.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—There is no mystery at the Department of State about what is to be done with the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. When received it will be submitted to the British Government, without official comment. There is no other course to be pursued. The convention made by the Department of State and sent to the Senate by the President is now in the hands of the President, and as his clerk the Secretary of State will transmit it to the other party to the negotiations.

When ready for transmission it will be turned over to the British Ambassador to be forwarded to the Foreign Office. Its retention may be a matter of weeks or of months. Although it is a matter of great interest to both countries, it is believed that considerations of interest in the United States, or predictions of legislation, possibly without regard to the pendency of the convention, will not hasten its return either rejected or approved.

The State Department has no opinion as to what will become of it in Downing Street. There are individuals in the service who are confident that it will be rejected, just as Senators who voted for it as amended are confident that Great Britain will speedily accept it.

Along with this talk one hears at the Department of State the report that cannot be verified by conversation with the persons mentioned as originating the reports that Costa Rica and Nicargsua will not adhere to the protocol tentatively considered by which they were to accept the Hay-Pauncefote treaty as it was negotiated originally. The Ministers of the two countries cannot discuss the matter, but it is learned that they have expressed grave doubts about assenting for their countries to any convention between the United States and Great Britain that assumes the liberty of the United States to acquire territory or sovereignty in Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

This gossip, which it may be simply, goes further and suggests that in case Great Britain objects to the treaty just adopted, and still subject to British criticism, Costa Rica and Nicaragua may find a mutuality of interest with Great Britain in asserting and upholding the Monroe Doctrine against the United States.

BRITISH COMMENT BITTER.

London Weeklies Print Many Uncomplimentary Statements on the Canal Treaty.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The responsible weeklies discuss the Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty at considerable length.

The Saturday Review devotes a page to the "Nicaragua Scandal," saying uncomplimentary things about the United States Senate, President McKinley, and Lord Salisbury.

"The worst of it is," it says, "that we have only ourselves to thank for the whole pother. The policy of perpetual concessions to the United States and of overstrained eulogy upon her statesmen meets with no response from the other party, save fresh demands and increasing insolence. Our own statesmen have brought upon themselves humiliations which it is conceivable they may at last be induced to resent."

"Apparently the object of the United States Senate has not been to attain a particular object so much as to insult a friendly power, and to make it difficult for that power to negotiate in a conciliatory spirit."

The Speaker goes into the canal question historically, citing Nicaragua's treaties with Spain in 1858, France in 1860, Italy in 1868, and England in 1860, neutralizing the projected canal, pointing out that these are all in force now except the treaty with England.

"We foresee for the United States," it says, "grave diplomatic complications with other powers, unless they support America with the object of achieving Great Britain's discomfiture."

MUNICIPALITIES' LIABILITY.

Hearing on New Bill Before House Committee Jan. 11.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The Judiciary Committee of the House has fixed Jan. 11 for hearing the representatives of municipalities relative to the bill proposing to give the Federal courts means of enforcing their judgments against municipalities. An important departure from existing law is involved in the proposition, and one affecting all cities and towns which borrow money on bonds or otherwise.

At present there is no means of enforcing judgments from the Federal courts on these obligations, and many peculiar conditions have arisen in Missouri, Wisconsin, and Texas through efforts to enforce them. The United States Supreme Court has ruled that mandamus against the local tax officers to compel them to put the obligation on the tax rolls is the only remedy. But in several cases the local officials have avoided the mandamus by resigning. Several exciting incidents have occurred in some of the cases, the local officials taking to the woods to avoid service.

The judgment creditors, representing directly and indirectly many millions of dollars of claims against municipalities have been heard by the Judiciary Committee, and it is now desired to hear from the municipal debtor class on Jan. 11. The plan under consideration is to authorize the United States District Court at the place where a municipality is in default and the local officials fail to act, to appoint a special tax officer to assess the tax.

Representative Jenkins of Wisconsin, Chairman of the sub-committee having the matter in charge, says it is the first instance in which the power of the Federal courts is sought to be extended to municipalities. Aside from the many millions involved, Mr. Jenkins says the matter is specially important not only to municipalities in default, but to those desirous of protecting their credit and securing low interest rates.

Value of Beef Fat in Oleomargarine.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Testifying to-day before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, J. C. McCoy, a member of the Kansas City Live Stock Exchange, said that if the fat of beef cattle could not be manufactured into oleomargarine there would be an average loss of $2 per head, and on hogs of 20 cents per head. On the beef cattle of the United States at this rate there would be a total loss of $55,000,000 and of $7,000,000 on hogs. He pronounced the bill selfish and unjust and an effort in the direction of ultra-class legislation.

CHRISTMAS IN MANILA.

MANILA, Dec. 21.—An order of Gen. Otis, former Military Governor, has again been promulgated to the effect that members of the volunteer force imprisoned for military offenses may be released and sent home, in the discretion of the Colonels of their reapective regiments, provided they have not been dishonorably discharged.

All military and civil duties have been ordered suspended for Christmas Day and New Year's Day, with the exception of necessary guard and field duties.

Gen. MacArthur announces that he will hold a formal reception on New Year's Day. The members of the Philippine Commission, the Judiciary, the Archbishop, the Apostolic Delegation, the Consuls, the officers of the American and foreign navies and armies, and the heads of the civil bureaus and of commercial, civic, and religious bodies, together with the general public, are invited to attend. Army officers are directed to appear in the order of rank.

Philippine Bills Passed.

MANILA, Dec. 21.—The Philippine Commission has passed bills prescribing that English text shall be used in the construction of all laws enacted; authorizing the Provost Marshal to establish police and health regulations, with limited punishments for their violation; appropriating $75,000 for the immediate construction of a highway from Pozorrubio, Province of Pangasinan, to Bagalo, in Benguet Province, along the line surveyed for a Government railroad.

JURY SYSTEM IN PORTO RICO.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Dec. 21.—A bill introducing the jury system in Porto Rico has passed both houses.

Frederick L. Cornwell, a member of the House of Delegates, has introduced a House bill providing for an appropriation of $30,000 for an insular exhibit at Buffalo, provided the people raise $20,000 additional.

The House has passed a bill fixing the salaries of the five native Councilors at $4,000. This is considered excessive, as it exceeds the salary of some of the department heads. It is not likely to pass the Council.

C. H. CRAMP FAVORS SHIP SUBSIDY BILL

Says Merchant Navy Cannot Be Rehabilitated Without Aid.

UNITED STATES' OPPORTUNITY

Declares Assistance Will Enable American Shipbuilders to Compete with England.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—Charles H. Cramp, head of the Cramp Shipbuilding Company, appeared before the Industrial Commission to-day and gave some interesting testimony regarding marine architecture. He read a history of the industry in this city, during which he stated that from 1710 to the present time Philadelphia has led the country in shipbuilding. Mr. Farquhar of the commission wanted to know why it is that American money does not seek investment in transatlantic and Pacific trade.

"The first reason," Mr. Cramp replied, "is that it does not pay, and the second is that the people have not been educated to the business. A person cannot make money unless he has been educated in the use of it."

Mr. Farquhar asked if it were true, as reported, that the increased cost of building a ship in this country over that of a foreign-built vessel was responsible for the lack of American interest in the industry. Mr. Cramp said the first cost of a ship was scarcely worth consideration, but the cost of operating the vessel, which was a daily expenditure, was an important item.

Continuing, Mr. Cramp asserted that some Americans are buying cast-off British ships at bargain prices, and are denouncing the Subsidy bill because they will not benefit by it. Mr. Cramp said the cost of operating foreign vessels is less than that of American ships, and American people acquainted with the business can operate ships if they are given the difference.

"In order to rehabilitate the merchant marine so that American goods and return cargoes may be carried in American bottoms and the profit go to Americans, what would you suggest?" asked Mr. Farquhar.

"I am in favor of the Subsidy bill," replied Mr. Cramp. "The shipyards in either America or England cannot build ships enough to supply the demand. This being the case, and vessels being needed, I think if we can build more of our own by the introduction of free ships, we should do it. The merchant marine cannot be rehabilitated without a subsidy."

Mr. Cramp said he thought the subsidy named in the Hanna bill was "about right." He said also that there seemed to be some apprehension that only the big lines, notably the International Navigation Company, would secure the bulk of the subsidy. This idea, he asserted, was erroneous, because the large freight ships will secure a considerable portion of it.

Regarding the opposition to the Subsidy bill, Mr. Cramp said it came from numerous sources, one of them being certain Western railroads, which, he said, "have looted the United States Treasury through grants of land."

He believed that most of this opposition was the result of spite and jealousy.

Mr. Litchman asked as to the opportunities at present offered the American shipowner.

Mr. Cramp replied that they were never better. "The transatlantic industry of England has been ruined by the South African war," he continued. "The British Government took nearly all the merchant ships as transports. This has made an enormous demand for vessels. There is our chance; but we must be assisted."

Another reason why this country should have more ships, Mr. Cramp said, is the steadily-decreasing coal supply of Europe. Eventually, he said, all Europe will come to this country for coal.

Mr. Cramp said he had always favored discriminating duties, but that he considered as a benefit any methods by which shipowners may save themselves from the greater expense of operating vessels.

"Mr. Cramp," said Commissioner Kennedy, "is there any truth in the rumor as sent from London to-day of a combination between your firm and the English firm of Vickers Sons & Maxim?"

In answer Mr. Cramp read a published interview on the subject which he gave to the newspapers while in Washington, and supplemented it with this statement:

"These stories have arisen from the fact that I have been endeavoring to enlarge our plant in the hope of building a warship complete. I have asked people here and people abroad to help us increase the capacity of our works. Under the law Vickers Sons & Maxim cannot combine with us. The American control of the plant will not be abolished so long as I am connected with the company."

Mr. Cramp then explained that in building a warship it was necessary to secure material from various sources, and his object has been, if possible, to bring these different industries together in the one establishment. Under the old method, by which the hull of a ship was built in one place, the engine in another, and other portions in still other shops, a transatlantic vessel would cost double the amount that it would if all these industries were consolidated.

Continuing, Mr. Cramp said: "Great Britain's source of wealth in her shipbuilding is in the vessels she builds for other countries. The shipbuilding interests there are assisted by the Government, either directly or indirectly. I want to compete with England."

Mr. Cramp spoke of the enormous profit on armor plate. In building warships for Russia, he said, his company was compelled to pay the full rate of $600 a ton to Carnegie for armor. This, he said, was one-third the cost of the ship.

"If I could get the profit on armor plate," declared Mr. Cramp, "I would build a warship at cost."

"At what price could armor plate be furnished to the Government and give the producer a fair profit?" inquired Mr. Kennedy.

"I do not know," was the response. "I would not like to say."

Mr. Cramp said an enlarged plant would enable him to build the greatest merchant ships. It requires the same machinery to make shafting for merchant vessels as for gun and armor forgings. The steel-melting plant and armor plant are also similar.

Mr. Crapm will again appear before the commission to complete his testimony.

M. COQUELIN'S LECTURE.

Talks of "Art and the Actor" at Columbia University.

M. Coquelin delivered his lecture "Art and the Actor" yesterday afternoon in the Gymnasium of Columbia University before an audience which completely filled the 2,000 seats. On the platform were President Low, Prof. Brander Matthews, John Lafarge, Prof. Cohn, M. Thiébaut, First Secretary of the French Embassy; Carroll Beckwith, John Drew, and Théobald Chartran. Messrs. Lafarge, Cohn, and Chartran wore the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor. In introducing the actor, Mr. Low gave a brief sketch of his career.

In leading up to his own definition of true dramatic art, the lecturer cited passages from Victor Hugo, Alexandre Dumas père, and other writers for the stage to show the qualifications that had been given the words "art" and "actor." He also related actual instances to show how mere acting had been taken for reality. "But," he said in closing, "it is the illusion of reality, and not the imitation of it, wherein lies the actor's art."

THE CASTELLANE INCOME.

Adjournment of Case Enables Countess to Draw December Allowance.

The argument of a motion to vacate an injunction restraining the Trustees under the will of Jay Gould from paying any money to the Countess de Castellane was adjourned yesterday in the Supreme Court to the first Monday in January. The request for the adjournment was made by Samuel Untermyer, as counsel for Antem Dittmar, who holds a number of drafts against the Count and Countess made in favor of Asher Wertheimer, a bric-a-brac dealer of London.

Counsel representing the Trustees wanted an agreement by which the Countess could continue to receive monthly payments from her income at the rate of $250,000 a year until the case was disposed of. Mr. Untermyer agreed to allow her to have the income due for December, about $20,800, but insisted that the January payment should not be made until the motion had been disposed of.

ANOTHER HITCH IN THE PEKING NEGOTIATIONS

The Preliminary Joint Note Is Still Unsigned.

OBJECTION FROM WASHINGTON

Chinese Authorities Believe the Protocol Will Have to Be Drawn Up in Europe or America.

PEKING, Dec. 21.—Once more there is a pronounced hitch in the proceedings. The preliminary joint note has not yet been signed.

Mr. Conger, the United States Minister, says he does not believe that there are sufficient reasons why the protocol should not be signed in the near future, and Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the British Minister, takes the same view. Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, speaking for Germany, believes that the existing agreement will be signed soon r or later. The other Ministers also say that they consider the probabilities are in favor of signing.

Chinese sources of information, however, say there is reliable authority for the statement that there is very little chance of the note being signed for some time. As a matter of fact, the members of the staff of Li-Hung-Chang believe that the note will eventually have to be drawn up either in Europe or America, probably the latter, because they claim that the Washington Government has had most to do with the existing modifications of the various forms of harshness.

The United States is looked upon by the Chinese as the only power really desiring to retain the integrity of the Chinese Empire. The other powers are regarded as desirous of breaking it up, with the possible exception of Russia, who, the Chinese think, merely favors a postponement in order eventually to secure a larger share.

Grave fears are felt regarding the health of Li-Hung-Chang, owing to a severe cold that he caught on the day he visited Gen. Chaffee. It is said that he is better today, but there is a fear of pleurisy, which at his advanced age might be fatal.

It is generally believed that the Chinese get their information as to what is done at the meetings of the envoys through some one connected with the Russian Legation.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—"The delay in signing the preliminary joint note," says the Peking correspondent of The Morning Post, wiring yesterday, "is due to an objection from Washington. Mr. Conger, however, has telegraphed his Government urging speedy settlement, on the ground that foreign military control is worse than Chinese management.

"Prince Ching points out that the private and Government property seized in Peking is quite equivalent in value to the indemnity demanded by the powers.

"Sir Robert Hart saw Prince Ching yesterday, and advised him against dallying with the powers in regard to the punishment of the guilty officials. Prince Ching thought the execution of two or three possible, and the lifelong imprisonment of Prince Tuan quite certain."

TERMS OF THE PROTOCOL.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Dr. Morrison, in a long dispatch to The Times from Peking, dated Dec. 20, gives extracts from the joint note. According to Dr. Morrison's information, the clause referring to indemnity reads as follows:

"Equitable indemnity is to be paid to States, societies, and individuals, and also to Chinese who have suffered injury on account of their employment by foreigners. China will adopt financial measures acceptable to the powers to guarantee the payment of indemnity and the service loans."

The Times's correspondent says the note contains the following stipulations, in addition to those already cabled:

"Tsepanation to Japan for the murder of Sugiyama.

"Expiatory monuments erected in all foreign cemeteries where tombs have been desecrated.

"The posting of a proclamation throughout the empire for two years, enumerating the punishments inflicted upon the guilty officials and threatening death to any one joining an anti-foreign society.

"Air Imperial edict to be issued holding Viceroys and Governors responsible for anti-foreign outbreaks or violations of treaties.

"China to undertake negotiations for a revision of the commercial treaties."

Dr. Morrison goes on to say that in the discussion of the translation of the word "comply" in the British proposal not to remove the troops until the demands should be satisfied, one Minister suggested "accepter." The German Minister wanted "remplir." Finally it was agreed to use the expression "se conformer à."

The dispatch concludes with an expression of regret at "the delay caused by Mr. Conger's not signing, especially in view of Li-Hung-Chang's health and advanced age, which cause much anxiety."

EMPEROR ON WAY TO PEKING?

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Tien-Tsin to the Frankfurter Zeitung, dated today, says:

"Prince Ching's interpreter asserts that Emperor Kwang-Su, unaccompanied by the Empress Dowager, left Sian-Foo on Dec. 19, bound for Peking."

WU-CHANG OPENED TO TRADE.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The Daily News publishes the following from its Shanghai correspondent, dated yesterday:

"Chang-Chi-Tung announces the receipt of an edict authorizing the opening of Wu-Chang, opposite Hiam-Kow, to foreign trade. Wu-Chang is the centre of an important trade, and the site of the terminus of the Canton Railway."

GERMAN PUNITIVE ACTIVITY.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—A dispatch from Field Marshal von Waldersee, dated Peking Dec. 19, says:

"Guendell's column, marching from Shan-hai-Kwan, successfully encountered a force of Boxers on Dec. 14 at Yung-Ling, near the Eastern Imperial Tombs. Fifteen Boxers were killed.

"One thousand Chinese regulars, under Fang-do-Ling, have been driven out of Lu-Tai. They fled to the mountains, northwesterly, on Guendell's approach."

BEHAVIOR OF FOREIGN TROOPS.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The Tokio correspondent of The Times, in the course of a long letter, gives the views of Japanese observers upon western military methods in China, especially the conduct of the troops with regard to the graver crimes of robbery, incendiarism, murder, and outrage. He says:

"The Japanese agree in declaring the American troops free from all these excesses. The Germans come second in the list and the British third, the latter being charged only with petty pilfering, and being fully acquitted of murder, arson, and outrage. The French, who are fourth on the list, are given to loot and outrage, but not to murder.

"Of the Russians the Japanese speak with horror, as combining ferocity with lust and the love of plunder."

Maine's Last Voyage as Hospital Ship.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Mrs. George Cornwallis West, (who was Lady Randolph Churchill,) has received a cable dispatch from Hongkong saying the American hospital ship Maine will arrive at Southampton on Jan. 10 with 108 sick men on board. After consultation with the naval and military authorities in China, the Government has decided that the Maine will not be further needed, so on her arrival here the Ladies' Committee will wind up the business and hand her over to the owners of the ship.

STERNBERG TRIAL ENDED.

Rich Berlin Banker Gets Heavy Sentence—Suspended Chief of Criminal Department Dead.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—Sternberg, the millionaire banker, who has been on trial for a long time past, was found guilty to-day of immoralities, and was sentenced to two and a half years' imprisonment, with loss of citizenship for five years.

Von Meerscheidt Huellesson, the Chief of the Criminal Department, who was suspended owing to his connection with the Sternberg trial, died at noon to-day.

The end of the trial, after eight weeks, has come with great relief to the press and the public. It has been one of the most remarkable cases in Germany's legal history in length, in the number of witnesses examined, in the humiliating facts established, and in the number of reputations blasted.

The papers point out that eighteen persons have either been arrested, have fled the country, or are to be prosecuted because of some connection with the case. The death of Huellesson was due to nervous shock following the revelations of the rôle he had played.

It is announced by the Berliner Post that proceedings will be begun against Herr Werthauer, one of the leading lawyers for the defense, on the charge of having induced a witness to commit perjury.

Before the court retired for deliberation Sternberg spoke in his own defense, asserting that he was innocent of the worst charges, but admitting a moral lapse. He asked for an acquittal.

MAJOR CUIGNET SENTENCED.

Receives Preliminary "Disciplinary Punishment"—M. Lasies's Interpellation Shelved.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—The Minister of War, Gen. André, has inflicted on Major Cuignet sixty days' confinement in a fort. This is disciplinary punishment for, first, disclosing to a Deputy, M. Lasies, a confidential document of which Cuignet obtained knowledge while attached to the Secret Intelligence Office of the War Department, and, second, in writing directly to the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, to accuse the Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Delcassé, of falsehood, thereby transgressing the regulations, which require all officers of the army to forward letters of complaint through the proper hierarchical channels.

The Major will afterward appear before a council of inquiry, which will investigate his principal offense, that of divulging a document connected with the Panizzardi dispatch, which figured in the Dreyfus court-martial at Rennes.

The Chamber of Deputies to-day, at the request of M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the Premier, by a vote of 309 to 102, decided to postpone M. Lasies's motion to interpellate the Government on the Cuignet incident until the other orders of the day are disposed of, thus shelving the Nationalist attack indefinitely and giving the Government a vote of confidence.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau said the Nationalists' object in the interpellation was to revive the Dreyfus agitation. But, he added, the Government would not permit it. They refused to play the Nationalists' game.

Major Cuignet's arrest is attracting considerable attention. The Ministerialist newspapers contend that his behavior is merely part of a Nationalist scheme to prevent the appeasement expected from the amnesty measure, while the Nationalist organs assert that Cuignet possesses a number of documents embarrassing to the Government, which he has placed in safe keeping.

The Major is imprisoned in a cell at Fort Mont Valerien, adjacent to that in which Lieut. Col. Henry committed suicide. Nobody is allowed to interview Cuignet.

No News of Murder of R. D. Mohun.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The statement was recently made from the lecture platform in this city that R. Dorsey Mohun, who is building a telegraph line in Africa for the Belgian Government, had, with his entire party, been killed by the natives. The mother and sisters of Mr. Mohun live here and enlisted the aid of the State Department in ascertaining the truth of the report. An inquiry was cabled to Minister Townsend at Brussels, and the following reply was received: "Congo officially notifies me that they have not received information from any source regarding the killing of Mohun and party." Mr. Mohun, who is now an employe of the Belgian Government, was formerly United States Consul at Zanzibar.

New Irish M. P. Elected.

"AUNT BRIDGET" DROPS DEAD.

Was Well Known in Cherry Street, Where She Lived Many Years.

"Aunt Bridget" Donnelly, as she was known by every man, woman, and child in the neighborhood of 243 Cherry Street for the last twenty years, died suddenly on the street yesterday within a few blocks of her home. She was ninety-eight years old. "Aunt Bridget" was born in Limerick, Ireland, and came to America fifty years ago. Her husband died twenty years ago, and since that time she had lived alone in a small attic room at the address given.

A few weeks ago a new landlord gave notice that all the tenants of the house would have to move out on the first of the year to make room for a more modern block of tenements. The old lady was much affected, and some of her acquaintances say she died of a broken heart. Just plain heart disease is the doctor's verdict, however. After a short walk she was on her way home at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and while passing the public school at 149 Cherry Street, she fell to the sidewalk. Some one gave her a cup of water and another ran for a priest, but when the father reached her she was dead.

THE NEWS OF NEWPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 21.—A public meeting to consider the rental of Easton's Beach after the expiration next November of the lease held by the Newport Beach Improvement Association, was held in the City Hall this evening. The same concern wishes to secure another lease for a term of fifteen years. It was argued that the beach should be rented at a paying investment to the city, which is not at present the case, and that the beach should be saved from becoming anything like Coney Island. It was decided that nothing could be done in the matter until next Summer, when the cottagers will be here.

As a result of a meeting held by the ministers of Newport a census will be started immediately to ascertain how many men, women, and children there are here who are not attending any church. It is believed the number is 2,000 out of a population of 22,000. The pastors of two Catholic Churches and of the Zabriskie Memorial Church, where the Vanderbilt-French wedding is to take place, will not take part in the census.

Sidney Woollett went to New York yesterday.

Miss Rose Grosvenor closed her cottage to-day and went to Providence for the Winter.

RED CROSS APPROVES FRANK D. HIGBEE'S PLAN

Officials Decline to State the Nature of the Agreement Made.

TO RECEIVE COMPENSATION

Remuneration Will Depend Largely Upon the Degree of Success He Meets With.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—One Vice President of the Red Cross and one member of the Board of Control to-day unequivocally approved the scheme of Frank D. Higbee to raise money for the Red Cross Fund by a series of watch-night meetings, at which subscriptions are to be received.

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, Vice President of the Red Cross and a member of the committee that made the arrangements with Mr. Higbie, when seen, said:

"The Red Cross has approved Mr. Higbee's undertaking and has made an arrangement with him as its employe. He suggested the plan to raise money for the fund, and, as he had met with success in other business undertakings, it was considered desirable that he should be allowed to secure subscriptions in his own way. The Red Cross did not expect that Mr. Higbee would do this work for nothing. It has made an arrangement with him, but I do not see that THE NEW YORK TIMES has any right to expect us to reveal the nature of the agreement.

"The committee of which I am a member has had this matter in charge. Miss Barton, who lives in the country, and only comes to the city occasionally, when important business calls her, has sanctioned it, but does not know as much about it, possibly, as I do. We have no idea of the amount the Red Cross may realize from Mr. Higbee's venture. We know that hitherto it has had no fund until an emergency arose, and then it was sometimes necessary to wait until public sympathy had been aroused before it was possible to begin pressing relief work. Since Congress gave the Red Cross a charter it has acquired the right to give National extension to its work, and we hope this effort will be rewarded with success."

Capt. W. H. Michael, Chief Clerk of the Department of State, a member of the Board of Control, said that he had shared the responsibility of approving Mr. Higbee's selection to do the work he had suggested.

"When his name," said Capt. Michael, "was mentioned in connection with the proposition to raise a fund in a popular way, he was employed as an agent of the Red Cross. It was not expected that he would devote his time and energies to the work without compensation. From our conversation with him we gathered the impression that he would be successful. The agreement with him makes his remuneration depend largely upon the degree of success with which he meets. I do not believe that he will make a fortune by his efforts for the Red Cross. All money received for the organization must be paid to G. Francis Riggs of the Riggs National Bank, and he in turn accounts for all expenditures made on account of the Red Cross.

"To the members of the organization who have approved of this scheme it appears to be a proper one, in good hands, and the Red Cross has observed with surprise the disposition of some of the newspapers to give the impression that it hides some purpose on the part of Mr. Higbee to secure undue compensation for his labor."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The Saturday preceding Christmas is rarely one on which there are any formal entertainments, and Christmas Eve itself is a family festival. As was the case last year, many Christmas parties will be given in the country. There will to-day be a flight to the upper Hudson, Orange, Tuxedo, Morristown, and Long and Staten Islands. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs to-day will leave for Hempstead, to remain until after Christmas, and the majority of those who have kept their country houses open will also leave town, many of them to remain until after New Year's. The twenty-five guests that Mrs. George Gould has invited as members of her house party at Georgian Court will go to Lakewood on Thursday and Friday. Mrs. Gould is planning a number of novel features for the entertainment of her guests. She has interested herself in the play performance by her Columbia sophomore class of Leonidas Westervelt's comedy, "Profcsor Whimsical," to be given at the Laurel House, Lakewood, on Friday night, and will take her guests to see the production.

Mrs. Astor will give her second large dinner of the season at her residence, 842 Fifth Avenue, this evening. Townsend Burden, and by Miss Elizabeth Remsen of 17 West Fifty-first Street for Mme. Sembrich. The Junior Saturday Cotillion will have a meeting at Delmonico's. There will also be a reception this afternoon, to be given by Mrs. George McClellan Miller of 270 Madison Avenue for Mrs. William Bard McVickar. At Carnegie Hall, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, there will be a concert in aid of the George Junior Republic, at which Mme. Sembrich is to sing. The programme will consist of international folk songs, classical airs and songs, and German lieder.

The engagement is announced of Mr. Leviney, an Englishman, and Miss Edith Crosby, daughter of the late Howard Crosby, and a sister of Ernest H. Crosby, who married Miss Fanny Schieffelin. The wedding will probably be celebrated there in January.

Ex-Secretary Whitney, who has been spending the last fortnight at Aiken, left there yesterday and is due to arrive here to-day. It had been thought that Mr. Whitney would spend the latter part of the Winter at Aiken, but it is now announced that he has chartered a dahabeah for the Nile trip.

Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting gave last night at her residence, 24 East Seventy-second Street, a dance for her niece, Miss Caroline Wilmerding, daughter of Mrs. Cutting's sister, Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding. The dance was preceded by four large dinners, given, respectively, by Mrs. William D. Sloane, Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, and Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding, from which the guests, chaperoned by their hostesses, went to the Cutting residence. Mrs. Cutting, Miss Cutting, gowned in violet chiffon over silk, and Miss Wilmerding, who wore a white satin frock veiled with tulle, received. The house was decorated with American Beauty roses and other cut flowers, palms, and ferns. The dancing, which began early, was general until after supper, which was served at small tables. The cotillion was started about 1 o'clock. Worthington Whitehouse led, dancing with Miss Wilmerding. Lander's orchestra played. There were five favor figures, and the favors were arrows tipped with carnations, quivers, American Beauty roses on sticks, boutonnieres, muffs, old English in style, canes, and Japanese toys. There was also a cakewalk figure, a specialty of Mrs. Collins, in which there were two little pickaninnies, one gotten up as a dude and the other as a begarlanded belle, and in this figure darky dells and toys were distributed. There were about thirty-five couples in the cotillion. Most of the girls were débutantes. Among the dancers were the Misses Sarah Van Alen, Kathleen Neilson, Sophie Langdon, Norah Iselin, Eleanor Jay, Rosamond Street, Evelyn Blight, Alice Olin, Gladys Brooks, Helen Barney, Caroline Livingston, Sibyl Douglas, Florence Twombly, Lelia Sloane, Evelyn Parsons, Miss Kernochan, Esther Hunt, and the Misses Elsie, Ethel, and Edith Cryder, the last three gowned alike in pink silk veiled in pink tulle of different shades and trimmed with roses; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Auchmuty Tucker, Reginald Vanderbilt, B. Winthrop, Duncan Harris, Ogden Bishop, John Rogers, Townsend Lawrence, Arthur Iselin, R. Bayard Cutting, Hoyt, and Whitehouse.

EX-GOV. WOLCOTT DEAD.

Was Three Times the Chief Executive of Massachusetts—Other Services to the State.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—Ex-Gov. Wolcott died at 3:40 o'clock this afternoon.

Roger Wolcott was born in Boston July 13, 1847. He was the son of J. Huntington and Cornelia (Frothingham) Wolcott. He was a descendant of Roger Wolcott, who was in command of the New England forces during the War of the Revolution. Another ancestor was Oliver Wolcott, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Roger Wolcott received his early education in the Boston public schools. He entered Harvard in 1867, and soon showed a special inclination for the classics and literature. He graduated in 1870 among the first twenty-five in a class of 130, and was elected to the Harvard Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, in recognition of his scholarship. His classmates honored him by choosing him as class orator. After his graduation he became a tutor, teaching during the years At 1871-2. At the same time he was taking the Law School course, graduating from that department in 1874. He was admitted to the Suffolk bar the same year.

He practiced law but little, his time having been chiefly employed with his duties as Trustee of various estates, and with the management of financial matters. His public career began with his election to the Boston Common Council, in which he served three terms, 1877, 1878, and 1879. In 1882 he was elected to the Legislature. He served in the Legislature for three terms, and won distinction both for his constructive ability and his oratorical talent. In 1891 he was elected the first President of the Young Men's Republican Club, which was organized that year. In 1892 he found himself out of sympathy with Republican National policies, and voted for Cleveland. His action did not seriously injure his standing with his party. In the following year he was elected a delegate to the State Republican Convention.

Mr. Wolcott was elected Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts in 1893, when William E. Russell, the Democratic candidate, was elected Governor. He was re-elected, and on the death of Gov. Greenhalge, became Acting Governor. In November, 1896, he was elected Governor, and in 1897 and 1898 was re-elected. His successive administrations as Governor were regarded as very successful. At the end of his third term he declined a renomination. Last year he was offered the Ambassadorship to Italy by President McKinley, but declined it.

On Sept. 2, 1874, Mr. Wolcott was married in Boston to Miss Edith Prescott, granddaughter of William H. Prescott, the historian. Five children were born to them. Four survive, Roger, Prescott, Oliver, and a daughter.

Gov. Wolcott was a man of handsome and imposing presence. He was over 6 feet in height, and his frosted hair and mustache added to the dignity and impressiveness of his appearance, which was sustained by the nobility of his character.

F. W. PICKERSGILL DEAD.

For Many Years a Prominent Royal Academician.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Frederick R. Pickersgill, the artist, who was Keeper of the Royal Academy from 1873 to 1887, died yesterday.

Frederick Richard Pickersgill belonged to the middle century type of British artists—the school of Dyce and Maclise. He had dropped almost completely out of notice in recent years, and, as he had retired from the Royal Academy, of which body he was for so many years a full member, he did not have the right to send his pictures for exhibition at Burlington House.

Mr. Pickersgill was born in London in 1820. He studied under his mother's brother, W. F. Witherington, and afterward at the Royal Academy School. In 1843 he won a prize of £100 for an immense cartoon of the "Death of King Lear" in the competition for the Houses of Parliament wall paintings, and two years later a prize of £500 for his painting of the "Burial of Harold," which was bought for the same building. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1847 and a Royal Academician in 1857. All his important works are representations of historical subjects.

The storm of criticism of the pictures by certain Royal Academicians allowed to hang at Burlington House about fifteen years ago was principally directed at the works of Messrs. Pickersgill and Herbert.

VERE FOSTER IS DEAD.

Well-Known Philanthropist Expires at Belfast, Aged Eighty-one.

BELFAST, Dec. 21.—Vere Foster, the well-known philanthropist, died here today.

All the children in the United Kingdom, and a large proportion of those in the United States, who have learned drawing within the last few years, know "Vere Foster's Drawing Books," which have had a sale compared with which that of the most popular novel is as a drop in a bucket. Most people have supposed that Vere Foster was a successful drawing master, but he was not even an amateur artist. His drawing books were only a detail in the work of a life devoted to education and philanthropy.

Vere Henry Louis Foster was born at Copenhagen in 1819, his father, Sir Augustus H. Foster, Bart., being at that time British Minister to Denmark. The son was educated at Eton and at Christ Church, Oxford, and afterward entered the diplomatic service, taking part in missions to South America.

On his return in 1847, Vere and his eldest brother, Sir Frederick Foster, visited Ireland. The famine consequent on the failure of the potato crop was raging at the time, and the two brothers set to work at once to relieve the distress. This was the beginning of Vere Foster's career as a philanthropist.

Soon afterward he made three voyages to this country as a steerage passenger, and was so impressed by the badness of the accommodation and the ill-treatment of the emigrants that he called the attention of Parliament to the matter, and the passage of the emigration law as a result of his efforts made similar abuses in the future impossible.

Later Mr. Foster turned his attention to the improvement of education in Ireland, and, largely at his own expense, provided furniture for 1,300 national schools. In the great Irish famine year, 1879, he resumed his plan for assisted female emigration to the United States and the British colonies, with the co-operation of the clergy of every denomination in the west of Ireland. The number of young women thus assisted, largely at Mr. Foster's own expense, has been about 25,000.

MRS. WILLIAM P. FRYE DEAD.

Wife of President Pro Tem. of the Senate Expires Suddenly in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Mrs. William P. Frye, wife of the President pro tem. of the Senate, died suddenly at the Hamilton Hotel this morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Frye, on Tuesday last, sufered an acute attack of indigestion, and had since then been ill. When she arose this morning her condition was apparently much improved, and she partook of breakfast. Shortly after she left the table the end came without the slightest warning, heart disease causing death.

It has been arranged that the funeral shall take place on Sunday afternoon from the home of Senator Frye, in Lewiston, Me.

The only members of Mrs. Frye's family in the city, other than her husband, at the time of her death were two grandsons, William Frye White and Wallace H. White, both of whom will accompany Senator Frye to his home city.

CONGRESSMAN WISE DEAD.

He Expires Suddenly at His Home in Williamsburg, Va.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 21.—Richard A. Wise, Congressman from the Second Virginia District, died suddenly at his home in Williamsburg this morning. He had been long a sufferer from Bright's disease.

Dr. Wise was seated on each of two terms in Congress after a contest, his opponent on both occasions being William A. Young, who had received the certificate of election. Dr. Wise first took the oath as a Congressman April 26, 1898, and was again seated on March 12 of the present year. He was defeated in the last election by Harry Maynard, but had given notice that he would contest the seat.

Richard Alsop Wise was a member of the famous Virginia family whose name he bore, and was a brother of John S. Wise of New York. He was born in Philadelphia Sept. 2, 1843; his father was Gen. Henry A. Wise. After spending part of his boyhood in Brazil, to which country his father went as United States Minister, he entered Williams and Mary College at Williamsburg, but abandoned his studies to enlist in the Confederate Army, with which he served throughout the war, part of the time as a private in Stuart's Cavalry. He was Assistant Inspector General of Wise's brigade when he surrendered with Gen. J. E. Johnston's forces at the close of the war.

He then studied medicine in Virginia, receiving his diploma in 1867, and after practising in Richmond for two years became Professor of Chemistry and Physiology at William and Mary College until 1880, when he resigned, and was from 1882 to 1884 Superintendent of the Eastern Lunatic Asylum in the same city.

Dr. Wise became active in politics in 1877 and was an uncompromising Republican, having been Chairman of his County Committee for twenty years. A few years ago he created a sensation by declaring on the floor of the Virginia Legislature that Appomattox was a great blessing to that section of the country, and that the people of the South should unite in paying the pensions of the men who saved the Union. He served three consecutive terms in the State Legislature, being first elected in 1885. He then became Clerk of the Circuit and County Courts of Williamsburg for six years.

He married Miss Mittie D. Peachy of Williamsburg Dec. 14, 1870, and she bore him several children.

Want Municipal Lighting Plants.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., Dec. 21.—There is a scheme on foot among several cities and towns in this State to fight the law restricting the establishment of municipal lighting plants in the General Assembly and to secure its repeal if possible, or else override it by amendments to their charters which will allow cities to control and operate plants. The Committee on Municipal Lighting recently appointed by the Norwalk City Council has heard from some of the towns, and they would like to have Norwalk's co-operation in the movement. The principal towns agitating the question are Wallingford, Willimantic, New London, and New Britain. The municipal plant now in successful operation at South Norwalk has been visited by various committees from these towns.

New Massachusetts Police Bill.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—The session of the Legislature of 1901 a bill, sweeping in its character, will be presented providing for a permanent police force for all cities of the Commonwealth, and the retirement of police officers on pension after twenty-five years of active service. The bill is now being drawn, and will include within its provisions the police of every city in the Commonwealth, with the exception of Boston and Lowell, where the police are now a permanent body.

He sat beside President McKinley when the latter was a member of the House of Representatives. Mr. Brewer aided Mr. McKinley in his work and became his close personal friend. When Mr. McKinley became President he appointed Mr. Brewer an Assistant Appraiser for the Port of New York, a position which he held up to the time of his death. He leaves a wife, but no children. TO THE SECURITY HOLDERS
OF THE New England Gas & Coke Co.

I have this day received from the Auditor a full report of our business for the year ending December 1st, 1900.

We began operations on the 3d December, 1899. During that month we made and sold 15,967 tons of Coke. The output has been gradually increased from month to month, until in the last month of the year, namely, November, 1900, the sales were 39,770 tons.

The sales of Tar and Sulphate of Ammonia have proportionately increased.

Beginning with the sale of 200,000 cubic feet of gas on the 3d December, 1899, it was gradually increased from day to day during the month, the total sales for the month being 43,000,000 cubic feet. This has increased correspondingly with the increase in the sales of Coke, until in the month of November, 1900, the sales were 163,000,000 cubic feet.

The net income from the business of the Company during the year, in addition to the income from its investments, has, within only $8,174.49, been sufficient to pay the fixed charges of every kind, including taxes and incidental expenses.

Considering that this is the first year of our operations, and that the whole expense of starting the business and creating a market for its products, with the incidental expenses always attendant on a new business, are included in the expenses for the year; and considering that not until the 5th of March, 1900, were all the ovens in operation, I regard this as a very satisfactory showing.

The plant is now complete, and the construction work done. The business is now established, and in course of steady, profitable growth.

The Company is now more than earning its interest, and each month hereafter will, out of its income, make a special deposit with Trust Companies of a proper proportion of its bonded interest, which will be held sacred to that purpose.

HENRY M. WHITNEY,
PRESIDENT BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
NEW ENGLAND GAS AND COKE COMPANY.

TRADE DEVELOPMENTS.

All the reports this week in relation to trade and business conditions tell of increased activity and general improvement. Testimony from many sources and by many people shows that, as compared with last Christmas, trade is much better—manifests actual aggressiveness.

In iron and steel helpful and healthful conditions continue to prevail. Large orders are steadily being placed, and, instead of shut-downs, not infrequently reported in those industries at this season of the year, the news is rather of new mills and furnaces opening or put in blast.

Collections continue good, and there seems to be an abundance of money for business purposes.

Along general lines Bradstreet's says:

Seasonable conditions rule in trade at present. Holiday trade activity is widespread, and comparisons with previous years are favorable at most markets, with the possible exception of some parts of the Northwest, where the Spring wheat shortage and unseasonable weather have checked distribution. Notably cheerful reports come, as usual, from the West, who have been called on for reassorting orders, and who report collections good. Quietness in wholesale lines is usual at this period, but it is to be noted that specially good advices come from the iron and steel, hardware, groceries, fancy goods, toys, and confectionery trades, while a distinctly cheerful tone is found in shoes, leather, and lumber, although Eastern shipments of the first named are still considerably smaller than last year.

Industrial lines are fairly well employed, and strikes are few and far between. Bank clearings are little below those of last year, which it will be recalled were the heaviest of any week in 1899, because of the swelling of bank operations by the short-lived December panic of last year. Prices show few changes, most staples being steady, but it might be noted that most farm products are slightly higher than last week and well above 1899.

***

In much the same way Dun's says:

Better weather conditions on the Atlantic seaboard, and pronounced activity in distribution of all staple lines of merchandise at Southern cities, have imparted a slightly more aggressive tone to general business, but for the hesitation always seen in the larger cities in the holiday season, the gain would have been quite pronounced, but, as it was, New York bank clearings last only 1 per cent. compared with the same week of 1899, while they show a gain of 41.2 per cent. over 1898. Outside of New York the gain in clearings for the week reached 1.3 per cent. compared with 1899, with 17.2 per cent. gain over 1898.

Distinctive holiday business, which at this period of the season means retail distribution, has shown further improvement, and no complaint is heard from any quarter, while the jewelry trade is much more active than for several years past, a reflection of the increasing confidence in business since election is found in the larger calls upon the banks at most of the leading cities for funds to finance new enterprises all over the country, but particularly in the South.

***

Of Iron and Steel Bradstreet's says:

New business in pig iron is small, but values are steady, which indicates confidence in the future outlook in spite of the attractive offers of a large cut in ore prices next season, the probability of which is being denied. Bessemer pig and steel billets are firm, and the latter market is reported well under control. Here production is increasing, but stocks are smaller. Finished products are a trifle quieter, but much more active than usual at this time of year. Plates are active and hold all the late advance.

Business in hardware is very active, and at leading Western points the season's business is reported the best on record. In structural material an immense amount of business is still being placed, and specifications are coming forward freely. Export trade is quieter, and there are cabled reports of shutdowns of Scotch iron producers. The other metals are steady, except tin, which is weak on reports of larger shipments from the far East.

***

On the same subject Dun's says:

Unchanged conditions in the leading manufacturing industry during the last week before the holidays mean much. At this time in ordinary years furnaces close down in large numbers, and dullness is general at mills and shops where iron and steel are handled. Instead of reduction, of working force or concessions in price this year, however, reports from the principal cities indicate the existence of contracts that will take months to fill, and new sales are made at the former level, despite much talk of cheaper ore next year. Fuel declined about 25 cents a ton recently, but this is as far as the cost of raw material has been reduced.

It is seldom possible to secure prompt delivery of partially manufactured forms or finished products, and each week brings more orders from abroad, while the November statement of British exports shows another decrease compared with last year in these products. Tin again dropped sharply, taking the price about 10 cents below the top and almost to the level prevailing a year ago.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The supply of money was fairly large to-day. The demand seemed to be increasing.

With the approach of the settlement and the holidays there was little doing on the Stock Exchange, except the carry-over of mines. Consols were fairly firm. Home rails were irregular.

Americans, at the opening, were unsatisfactory, weak, and irregular. Afterward they improved. The feature was the strength of Northern Pacific common on rumors respecting the retirement of preference shares at about 90 and talk of common going to 100, and even much higher. A further rumor current in Erie is attributed to the support of the Morgans. Grand Trunks were firm and in demand.

Spanish 4s closed at 69 13-16.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Prices on the Bourse today opened firm, Parquet stocks rising slightly. Industrials were in better demand. Rio Tintos were neglected at first. Later rentes were strong, on repurchases, and Rio Tintos grew firmer. Kafirs recovered somewhat on London advices.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 41¾ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates—Short bills, 4 per cent.; three months' bills, 4¾ per cent.

At the meeting of the Central Committee of the Reichbank to-day, President Koch announced that an advance in the bank rate was not necessary, and probably would not be necessary at the end of the year, unless there should be unexpected changes in the international situation. He said that the situation occasioned by the embarrassments of the mortgage banks necessitated special caution.

MADRID, Dec. 21.—The gold quotation to-day was 34.35.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—The holiday feeling got into the Philadelphia market to-day, and the changes in prices were inconsequential. Eliminating the Coalers, Marsden and Cambria Steel, business bordered on the verge of stagnation. Exceptional activity was seen in the Cambria Steel, some large blocks changing hands around 20. It had been manifest since Tuesday that consideration of this stock was hanging over the market. It was lifted to-day by interests close to the management. There was good buying of Union Traction, Lehigh Valley, and the Readings, all of which closed strong. Pennsylvania was quiet, moving in harmony with the New York market, and was on a level with the price in Wall Street all day. Early in the day Marsden declined ¾, to 7, on more support around 7@7⅛. It was the dullest day experienced this week, and most issues closed without any variation from last night.

The market closed steady at the following bid and asked prices:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—Boston had a great market, principally in the stocks possessing a Wall Street market. Sugar sold to the extent of some 12,000 shares in the morning dealings, with some 3,000 Atchison and 2,500 Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. Among the copper stocks Tamarack rose $36, to $326, later $320. Some of the low-priced specialties, like Elm River, Rhode Island, Winona, and Victoria, maintained activity and strength; Quincy also was in demand for investment. Most of the medium and high-priced shares were neglected. Only 10 shares of Parrot, 20 of Butte, 12 of Osceola, 10 of Eureka, 110 of Isle Royale, 235 of Old Dominion, 115 of Massachusetts, and 45 of Wolverine changed hands in the morning. Montana was comparatively active, but lost 3, to 820. Gas and Coke strengthened, to 12, and 5s touched 62¾.

There was a good demand for bonds, especially good issues selling just under par. Sales of General Electric 5s were made at 160, a rise of 10 from yesterday. Massachusetts Electric yielded ½, to 26½. American Telephone rose 2½, to 156½. The closing was firm generally.

At the Clearing House loans between the banks were made at 3½ and 4 per cent., and New York funds were still in good demand at 5 and 10 cents premium.

The increased speculative activity has created a slightly better demand for call money, and rates are quoted at from 5 to 6 per cent., with, however, the most of the business doing at 5 and 5½ per cent. Time money is in somewhat better supply, though rates are firm. Banks generally ask 5 per cent. for all dates on acceptable collateral.

New Issue of Directory of Directors.

The Audit Company, which issues "The Directory of Directors in the City of New York," has just issued a "Directory of Directors in the City of Chicago." The third issue of the "Directory of Directors in the City of New York" will soon be given to the public. The directory of directors idea is copied from a London publication which is now in its twentieth year. The New York Directory of Directors has proved a useful publication for reference.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was an exception to the general course of the market, and was strong as well as active. The preferred stock in particular was in large demand, and on trading in about 3,000 shares the price advanced to 27¾. The stock closed at 27½ bid, showing a net gain of 2 points. The common stock was much quieter, and enjoyed a smaller net gain. The principal buyers of the stock were brokers who have been active in these issues for some time past, and who bought them during the recent advances which occurred in them.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred was much quieter than on Thursday, but it continued to show strength and sold fractionally above the previous day's price. Sales were made as high as 73, ex dividend of 1¾ per cent. Several of the other steel stocks were traded in to some extent, and closed with fractional net gains.

***

UNION COPPER was actively traded in at 5¼. About 3,000 shares changed hands at that price. It was the most active of the copper shares yesterday.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER sold as high as 21½, and closed there, with a net gain of three-eighths of a point. Trading in the stock amounted to about 1,000 shares.

***

BANK STOCKS.—Further advances occurred in several of the most active bank stocks, as well as in others less frequently traded in. In none, however, was the volume of business large. Sales of National City Bank as high as 560 were reported, and National Bank of Commerce stock advanced to 326.

***

ELECTRIC BOAT opened at 30, but on light transactions sold down to 28½. It closed unchanged for the

ANOTHER CUP DEFENDER

Syndicate to Build a Centreboard Yacht for Trials.

OPINIONS OF YACHTSMEN

The New Boat Will Be Built in Massachusetts, and Will Be Constructed of Wood.

QUINCY, Mass., Dec. 21.—C. C. Hanley of the Hanley Construction Company of this city, builders of many fast yachts, among them the American defender Genesee, in the Canadian cup races of 1899 and 1900, at Chicago and Toronto, has entered the America's Cup defender lists and will form a syndicate to build a wooden centreboard yacht to compete in the trial races to decide which yacht shall defend the America's Cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock II.

Mr. Hanley admits that the syndicate is under way, and that the prospect was that the yacht will be built by the Hanley works at Quincy Point.

Mr. Hanley said to-day that while he had no desire to conceal the fact that a syndicate was being formed with every prospect of success, any discussion of details at this time would be premature. He talked on yachting in general, however, and left no chance for doubt that he is a firm believer in centreboard boats.

"Since the time of the Vigilant," he said, "American and English designers have been trying to defeat keel yachts with keel yachts. The Vigilant was an attempt at a half-and-half boat, being neither keel nor centreboard, but a combination of both.

"The result is, in trying to beat keels with keels, that the challenging and defending yachts are coming to be alike as two peas."

Mr. Hanley holds that the history of international races shows the superiority of the centreboard type, although in late years, for lack of any one to push that kind, the keel boat has come to the front. He says that several gentlemen are ready this year to build and enter a centreboard yacht in the international contest, believing that it will outsail any keel boat in its class that can be built.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—B. B. Crowninshield, who is the designer of the Lawson cup defender, was asked to give his views about the proposed new yacht to be built at Quincy to compete in the America's Cup trials. He said that he would like to see such a boat built, as it would be of immense advantage in determining whether an outand-out centreboard boat was still able to compete successfully with a boat of the keel type.

In reply to a question as to the cost of building and maintaining a yacht such as Hanley proposes, Mr. Crowninshield said: "I believe that such a yacht, constructed entirely of wood, with no outside ballast, could be built and maintained for one season at a cost not exceeding Mr. Hanley's estimate of $75,000."

Kenneth Horten, a prominent yachtsman, expresses the opinion that such a yacht as Hanley proposes is impracticable for the defense of the America's Cup, as she would pound herself to pieces in a seaway.

Gen. Charles J. Paine, who three times successfully defended the America's Cup with a centreboard yacht, declared that he thought it would be wise to have such a boat.

Knickerbocker Yacht Club Officers.

The Knickerbocker Yacht Club held its annual meeting last night, when the reports of the officers and various standing committees showed the club to be in a very prosperous condition. Over 70 boats and a membership of nearly 200 were shown on the club's books. The following officers were chosen for the year: Commodore—S. H. Mason; Vice Commodore—Louis H. Zocher; Rear Commodore—Edward F. Hawes; Treasurer—George H. Cooper; Secretary—J. O. Sinkinson; Measurer—John G. Honey; Fleet Surgeon—John B. Palmer, M. D.; Members of the Board of Directors—F. E. Barnes, H. Stephenson, Rodman Sands, Charles W. Schlesslinger, and Thomas Wilson, Jr.

The Hampden class, which created so much sport last season, will be one of the features of the club's weekly events next year.

VACCINATION AND GOLF.

Sore Arms Interfere With the Proper Indulgence in the Royal and Ancient Game.

Vaccination, as a golf deterrent, has been the most characteristic feature of the links during the past few days. No man who has not tried it can possibly realize how difficult it is to play the royal and ancient game while going through the probationary period which is to render him proof for several years to come from the terrors of smallpox.

"Why didn't this smallpox scare wait until every miserable bunker was covered several feet deep with snow?" was the plaintive lament of an enthusiast at his club one day last week. "It's an absolute disgrace to be compelled to have a sore arm in this glorious golfing weather, and I suppose that just as soon as I get so as to swing a club comfortably we'll have a genuine Winter blizzard, and I won't be able to see the natural color of a golf course this side of Florida."

Frequenters of the popular local clubs that keep open house all Winter have noticed a decided inclination to play the part of an impatient spectator by many of the members who pride themselves on their record as all-year players. One of these men could not resist the temptation to take a try at the game last week, and all went well for two or three holes, when, nerved up to do his best through a particularly good drive of his opponent, he let himself out for a full swing, and a second later gripped his arm as though a double-calibre bumblebee had suddenly stung him, while the expression of his face was one of indescribable agony.

"Gee, but I mustn't do that again!" groaned the unfortunate golfer, as he slowly walked after the ball. He only continued the fun for two or three holes more, and then wended his way disconsolately to the clubhouse.

The genial steward of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club admitted that the number of players had been considerably less for the last ten days than is customary at this time, and at the public links at Van Cortlandt Park, there has been a noticeable falling off in competitors. The cold weather last Saturday and Sunday kept some of the regulars in their homes, it is true, but the professional, Val Flood, has been surprised that the players have not been more numerous during the mild days of the week.

"It has been ideal for golf," added Flood; "not cold enough to nip the hands and stiffen the knuckles in holding the clubs, but just right in every respect for the enthusiastic lover of the game. The course is in good condition for play, and I believe that vaccination is wholly to blame for the dearth of golf activity."

It is fortunate for the golfers that the competitive season is over, for otherwise the number of hard-luck stories would be so prodigiously augmented as to make the game unendurable for a peaceful-minded player.

Women's Golf Handicap at Lakewood.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 21.—Four cards were completed in the women's golf handicap at the Country Club to-day, snow causing the withdrawal of several late starters. Miss Eleanor Ferris won both net and gross score prizes. Summaries:

Miss Eleanor Ferris	117	8	109
Miss Sophie Downer	129	18	111

Golf Notes of Interest.

H. Kenaady Hill won the golf championship of the University of Pennsylvania on Wednesday, beating Thomas D. Smith in the final round by 4 up and 3 to play. This university golfers will hold a Christmas handicap tournament to-morrow, at the links of the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Donald Ross will have charge of the Pinehurst golf links this Winter, in North Carolina. The course is one of the few in the far South having eighteen holes, and improvements have been made to the greens during the Summer. Later in the season two or three big tournaments will be held.

Dr. William Jarvie has offered a cup to the Dyker Meadow Golf Club for handicap competition at both medal and match play. The qualifying round will be held to-morrow, at 18 holes, and the players making the four best net scores will continue at match play, the semi-final round coming on Christmas Day, and the final round on Saturday, Dec. 29.

The Richmond County Country Club of Staten Island has announced a club handicap for New Year's Day. Fox Hills, on Staten Island, will also hold a club match on the opening day of the new century, but the pick of the players will go to Atlantic City to play the Country Club there a team match. Over a dozen players will be on a side.

The Chicago golfers have reached the conclusion that the East is better qualified to manage the three National championships next season, and the Midlothian Country Club has decided not to bid for the women's tournament. A rumor has been started that, however, that Hubert Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor may be elected President of the United States Golf Association in February. There are one or two other prominent names in the field.

The news comes from Baltimore that Findlay S. Douglas may take up his permanent residence in that city as the Baltimore agent for an electric company. Local golfers would be sorry to lose the former champion as a metropolitan resident, but, on the other hand, it would be Baltimore's gain, and E. H. Burton, Chairman of the Golf Committee of the Baltimore Country Club, is reported as saying that he hopes Douglas will come to Baltimore, as his presence would have a good effect on golf in that city.

Plans of Columbia's Swimmers.

At the annual meeting of the Columbia University Swimming Association, held in the gymnasium yesterday, J. W. Spencer, 1901, Science, was elected President, with William E. Duden, 1902, Law, Treasurer, and Clinton G. Abbott manager.

J. W. Spencer was unanimously re-elected Captain of the relay and water polo teams. It was decided to enter both teams in the coming sportsmen's shows in Boston and this city, and to begin negotiations for races and water polo games with Princeton, Yale, and Pennsylvania. Columbia defeated Pennsylvania for the intercollegiate championship at Madison Square Garden last year, and has lost but two men of her team. There is, however, an abundance of good material in the freshman classes. For the first time this year swimming has been required of all first-year men by the Faculty as a part of their college work, and Prof. Holroyd, the instructor, has developed some excellent swimmers. Two 'Varsity teams, a scrub team, and a freshman team will be organized.

CLOSE WRESTLING BOUTS.

Parker and Piening Get Championship Decisions After Hard Contests.

Some spirited wrestling bouts were seen last night in the Grand Central Palace, Lexington Avenue and Forty-third Street, during the final bouts in what was announced as the international world's champion series. Owing to the extreme lateness of the hour when the first bout was started, the events were not concluded until nearly midnight.

Harvey Parker of Brockton, Mass., and George Bethner of the Pastime Athletic Club were the first to meet. This bout was for the lightweight championship, Parker weighing the limit, 133 pounds. The two men had a desperate tussle, wrestling to the twenty-minute limit without either getting a fall. After a brief intermission they had a ten-minute round, but still neither could pin the other's shoulders to the mat. Referee "Charley" White, however, awarded the decision to Parker for superior aggressiveness.

Announcer "Johnny" Dunn gave notice of the receipt of a challenge from "Lou" Hausman of Chicago offering to back Fred Denton of that city, and who was termed the light-weight champion of America, against the winner last night for $500 a side. Parker said that, if proper references were forthcoming and a forfeit placed with responsible authorities, he would meet it; but he will insist that the match be held in the East.

Owing to the withdrawal of one of the heavy-weight competitors, John Piening and August Faust were the only opponents for championship wrestling honors in that class. The referee announced that they would wrestle for the best two out of three falls. The men were well matched, and gave a thoroughly scientific exhibition of the art. After twelve minutes of hard work, the first bout went to Piening. The second bout ran to the limit of fifteen minutes, without either gaining the advantage which it was called. A ten-minute bout concluded the contest, but again neither could force the other's back upon the mat. The decision, for aggressiveness, was awarded to Piening, and he was loudly cheered.

Roeber and Pons Matched.

Arrangements have been completed for the heavy-weight championship wrestling match between Ernest Roeber and Paul Pons, to take place at the Madison Square Garden on Jan. 1. The French champion and his American opponent will wrestle, best two in three falls at Graeco-Roman style, for the heavy-weight wrestling championship of the world and 50 per cent. of the gross receipts. Pons has started training at Woods's Gymnasium. Roeber will prepare himself for the bout at the Yorkville Athletic Club rooms, Seventy-sixth Street and Second Avenue. The principals have agreed to give each other the right to use the strangle hold.

SENATOR KILLED IN FIGHT.

Shooting Affray at Sopchoppy, Fla., Fatal to Two Men.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Dec. 21.—At Sopchoppy, thirty miles from here, a shooting affray over business matters occurred between State Senator Rouz, Edgar Nims, W. F. Edwards, and Frank Walker.

Rouz and Nims were killed. The other two were badly wounded.

COULDN'T MARRY, TOOK HIS LIFE.

Suicide Wrote Minnie Wolferman He Had Been Unable to Find Work.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 21.—Some boys going skating this afternoon found the body of a man near the foot of Linden Avenue. Beside it was a bottle that had contained laudanum.

In his pocket was a letter addressed to "Minnie Wolferman, 1,509 Livingston Avenue, New York." The writer said he was unable to obtain work, and the hopes which he had entertained of marrying the addressee were shattered. He was sorry, but thought it best to end his life.

The only other articles found in his pocket were a silver watch and a gold-plated chain.

EXTREME PENALTY FOR ZEIMER.

Divorce Mill Man Sentenced to Ten Years In State Prison.

Henry Zeimer, convicted of subornation of perjury in obtaining for Mrs. Byrde G. Herrick a divorce upon false evidence, was yesterday sentenced to ten years in State Prison by Recorder Goff. Zeimer's plea for a light sentence was unavailing, the Recorder stating that he was a lawyer and an officer of the court, and that it was his duty to see that the laws were obeyed and not violated. Ten years is the extreme penalty for Zeimer's crime.

Frank Wilson, who was also implicated in the divorce mill, and who turned State's evidence, was given three years. Hugh O. Pentecost, counsel, said that Wilson's blind mother was solely dependent upon him for support. The Recorder imposed the lightest sentence possible. Mrs. Byrde G. Herrick and Mary Thompson, the co-respondent, were discharged with a warning and admonished from the Recorder. They left the court weeping. Recorder Goff stated that in Zeimer's office there had been found the papers in fifty-two other cases.

BROKER PELLETREAU ARRESTED.

Charged by Thomas Gallagher with Defrauding Him of $100.

Arthur M. Pelletreau of the defunct brokerage firm of Pelletreau & Yale, who was expelled from the Consolidated Stock Exchange in May last, was arrested in the Aster House dining room yesterday by Central Office Detectives Funston and McConville, charged with defrauding Thomas Gallagher of Plainfield, N. J., of $100.

Gallagher, who lives at 115 Richmond Street, secured from Magistrate Deuel in the Centre Street Court Thursday a warrant for the former broker's arrest. Gallagher claimed that in answer to an advertisement for a cashier, he deposited with Pelletreau & Yale on May 15 last $100 as surety for the faithful performance of his duties as cashier. He declared that he received no return of his money. The detectives accidentally met the former broker in the Astor House.

According to the officers, Pelletreau & Yale conducted a discretionary brokerage business at 20 Broad Street until some months ago, when they suspended. With a clerk named Connolly, the detectives state, the brokers resumed business at 50 Broadway. In 1898, they claim, Pelletreau was arrested on a similar charge, but escaped prosecution.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

W. D. Sloane Buys Four Lots from Andrew Carnegie.

WILL BUILD TWO RESIDENCES

Reported Sale of Fulton and Gold Street Corner—Active Dealing in Many Classes of Property.

William D. Sloane has bought from Andrew Carnegie a plot of four lots on the north side of Ninety-first Street, about 100 feet east of Fifth Avenue. Beyond admitting that he had made such a purchase, Mr. Sloane declined last evening to say anything about the transaction or his plans for the future of the property. It is said, however, that he has bought the lots as the site for two fine residences which he will build for members of his family. In this connection it will be recalled that at the time of the sale of the large plot at the northeast corner of One Hundred and Second Street and Fifth Avenue, something over a year ago, it was reported that Mr. Sloane's sons-in-law, James Abercrombie Burden, Jr., and John H. Hammond, would build handsome residences there. There houses have not yet been erected, and the purchase just made by Mr. Sloane makes it appear probable that the One Hundred and Second Street site may be abandoned for that on Ninety-first Street.

The Carnegie mansion, now in course of construction, occupies the block front on Fifth Avenue, between Ninetieth and Ninety-first Streets. Mr. Carnegie's original purchase at that point covered the two block fronts from Ninetieth to Ninety-second Street. Subsequently he acquired several adjoining lots on both sides of Ninety-first Street, and the sale just closed is of interest as being the first resale of any of Mr. Carnegie's holdings in the two blocks.

Negotiations are pending for the sale of the seven-story building, 483 and 485 Fifth Avenue, 39.9 feet north of Forty-first Street, 35.6 by 100. Representatives of the owners, the estate of Moyer Kahn, said yesterday that contract had not yet been signed.

John Jacob Astor has bought the four-story dwelling, 55 West Twenty-fifth Street, 25 by 98.9, adjoining the northwest corner of Sixth Avenue.

It is reported that the six-story building at the northeast corner of Fulton and Gold Streets has been sold.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

TO GO OUT OF BUSINESS.

Pneumatic Horse Collar Company Has No Funds—Claims Against It Filed.

The Pneumatic Horse Collar Company, whose stock has been more or less traded in on the curb recently, will go out of business, owing to having no money in the treasury with which to continue the manufacture of its collars. The recent issue of 150,000 shares of preferred stock authorized found no buyers among the public, and the stockholders themselves subscribed for less than five per cent. of the issue.

A meeting of the Directors called for next week will take up the subject, but in the meantime it was stated yesterday by Mr. R. Brooke, President of the P. H. Brooke Company, whose brother was the inventor of the collar, and in whose offices the transfer office of the collar company is located, that the company would suspend and the transfer office will be closed after to-morrow.

Following the announcement of the condition of the company, a number of claims were filed against it yesterday. Mr. Brooke said that one note for $5,000 had gone to protest, and that he expected a number of judgments would be entered.

Referees' Notices.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —JOSEPH C. LEVI, as trustee, against FRANKLIN BIEN, as substituted trustee, &c., and others.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the second day of January, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 16th day of January, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Peter F. Meyer, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot of land, situate in the City of New York, on the northeasterly side of Seventeenth Street, between the Second and Third Avenues, being part of a lot known and designated by the WOMAN GIVES POLICE A FIGHT.

Mary Stein Makes a Display of Physical Prowess in a Police Station.

Mary Stein, a muscular servant girl, visited the East Eighty-eighth Street Police Station yesterday with a grievance. During the course of her discussion with the Sergeant her attitude toward that official became so menacing that the Sergeant ordered her ejected. When the order had been carried out the doorman swept up from the station house floor six detached buttons bearing the insigna of the Police Department, one large piece of a policeman's coat, three "stripes," an assortment of hairpins, one lot of miscellaneous furniture, one quire of blank warrants, an assorted lot of human hair, and several broken collar buttons.

Miss Stein, when she appeared in the police station, was laboring under suppressed excitement, but the Sergeant did not notice it at the time. She said she had been discharged from the employ of Mrs. Rockwell of 918 Park Avenue, and that Mrs. Rockwell owed her money for wages. She wanted Sergt. Todd to go with her and demand that she be paid. She was advised to bring suit in a civil court. She then became abusive, and the Sergeant decided upon firm measures. He ordered Policeman Wasserman, who was standing near, to put Miss Stein out of the station house.

"Lock her hold of her," said the Sergeant grimly to the cautious Wasserman, who was employing and watching for an opening. "No half measures here."

Wasserman thus spurred on, rushed, and was met by a blow on the chin that felled him to the floor. Miss Stein then reached across the desk and attempted to clutch Sergt. Todd, but the Sergeant side-stepped nimbly, calling out the reserves as he did so. Three other officers came out to aid Wasserman, and advanced on the now thoroughly aroused woman in a body. Miss Stein met them more than half way. Pushing open the door of the Captain's room, she had seized a chair, with which she charged the attacking force, and went through their lines repeatedly, scattering helmets in every direction.

Time and again the attacking force, under the command of Sergt. Todd, re-formed and advanced in close formation, only to be broken and scattered. Wasserman had arisen, but was again felled. Again he arose and renewed the struggle. Finally, by a brilliant dash, he captured the enemy's weapon, after which the contest was carried on at close quarters for several minutes, at the end of which the five battered and scratched policemen, with bare heads and disordered uniforms, triumphantly lugged their Amazonian prisoner into a patrol wagon and took her to the Harlem Police Court.

There Magistrate Brann, remarking that the girl had probably been laboring under strong excitement, made her promise to behave herself in the future and discharged her.

CHILD THWARTS A BURGLAR.

Thirteen-Old Jennie Griffith Makes a Housebreaker Give Up Plunder.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 21.—Thirteen-year-old Jennie Griffith proved conclusively last night that coolness and bravery are not confined to grown-up people, or even to boys. She ran across a burglar in the house, and, instead of screaming or fainting, she armed herself with a revolver, and, "getting the drop" on the intruder, compelled him to disgorge his plunder.

Jennie was in her home alone on the lower floor of the house when she heard a noise as of some one moving about up stairs. She concluded at once that burglars were in the house, and acted accordingly. Going into the dining room she took the family revolver from a shelf and stole quietly up stairs. Entering a bedroom on the second floor, she found a man ransacking the room. He had just taken a quantity of jewelry and $12.35 in money from a drawer when Jennie entered.

"Here, you!" But that right back where you got it!" was the command, given in a high treble, but without a quaver in the voice.

The astonished burglar turned and beheld a diminutive figure in white, standing behind a large revolver, which was pointed at his head. The intruder took a hurried glance at the revolver and another at the determined face of the girl behind it.

"Well, I'll be blowed," he said, and carefully replaced his booty in the drawer.

Then he took a chance and jumped out of the window. The girl would probably have fired at him as he ran away, but the pistol was not loaded. She gave a good description of him to the police.

TEMPTED BY ODOR OF BREAD.

Desperate from Hunger, Pakich Purloins a Hot Loaf and Is Arrested.

After having walked all the way from Philadelphia, begged his way across the ferry from Jersey City, and walking the streets of New York all Thursday night, Luke Pakich passed the delicatessen store of David Elliott at 521 Lexington Avenue early yesterday morning, and was regaled with the delicious aroma arising from freshly baked bread. He halted, and for a moment indulged himself with the odor. Looking about he found himself confronted with a heaping basketful of long, delicately browned, and crisp-looking loaves hot out of the oven, standing conveniently just inside the open door of the shop.

A few moments later the proprietor of the shop found Pakich sitting on the curb a short distance from the place, hungrily devouring one of the loaves, and had him arrested.

In the Yorkville Police Court the prisoner told of having lost his job in Philadelphia. Unable to obtain another, he had tramped to New York in search of work and had walked the streets all night.

"I'm not a thief," he told the Magistrate, "but I was hungry. Yes, I stole the bread. Only one loaf, though."

The charge was changed from larceny to disorderly conduct, and the prisoner was sent to the Island for three months.

"You will be better off there for the Winter," said Magistrate Hogan.

The Stearns Indictment Dismissed.

Judge Foster yesterday dismissed the indictment against Lawyer Edwin F. Stearns for participation in the alleged swindling of numerous wholesalers. Ignatz Kornfeld was indicted for fraudulently securing cigars from a Fulton Street merchant. He gave Mr. Stearns as reference, and Mr. Stearns stated that, so far as he knew, Kornfeld was financially responsible. In dismissing the indictment Judge Foster said that no testimony had been presented proving Mr. Stearns's statement to be false, and that the indictment was an abuse of the Grand Jury's power.

Stereotyper Dies of Burns.

Charles F. Hennessey, a stereotyper in the employ of The Herald, died yesterday morning in the New York Hospital from burns received last Wednesday night in an explosion which occurred in The Herald's stereotyping Department. Hennessey was thirty-eight years old, and lived at 722 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn.

Topics of the Week.

We are inclined to think that "An Englishwoman's Love Letters," just published by Doubleday, Page & Co., will be the literary sensation of the season. What these letters purport to be has already been related, and, aside from the questions of authenticity, they touch human nature at so many and varying points that no one can read them without being deeply impressed. Then, too, public curiosity will be piqued to the utmost to discover who could have furnished so piteous a love tragedy. And mingled with the deep human interest in the epistles the following questions must arise in the reader's mind: Do not the coherence and literary art displayed show a practiced hand? What was the reason of the breaking off of the engagement and the abandonment of the girl by a lover who was evidently deeply in love? Is any solution to be found in the personality of the young man's mother, which is quite contradictory according to the letters? These are some of the questions that we shall hear persons attempting to answer before long.

"A History of Chinese Literature," by Herbert A. Giles of the University of Cambridge, will be added to the Literature of the World Series published by D. Appleton & Co. early in January. This is perhaps the first attempt made in any language, including Chinese, to produce a trustworthy history of Chinese literature. A considerable portion of the book is devoted to translations, which will enable the Chinese author, so far as translations will allow, to speak for himself. In several instances, moreover, remarks by native critics have been added, so that the reader may form an idea of the point of view from which the Chinese regard their own productions. But particularly is the book interesting and welcome at this time, since it furnishes suggestions as to the modes of thought, the culture, and the manner of expression of a people who are at this moment engaging a large share of the world's interest.

A series of twelve novels, one appearing each month, will be published during 1901 by Harper & Brothers, which, to borrow a suggestion from Balzac, might be called "La Comédie Américaine," for the stories will deal with various phases of contemporary life [illegible]

ments with George Newnes. The four volumes so far arranged for treat of French, German, Russian, and Dutch life in rural districts and in small town communities. The first volume, which will appear in January, is entitled "French Life in Town and Country," by Hannah Lynch. This it is to be hoped will be read by many persons who have been taught to believe that "Paris is France," for they will therein discover their mistake.

Following the appreciative welcome given to Mr. Mabie's book on Shakespeare, The Macmillan Company will shortly present another volume which is intended especially as an introduction to the study of the Shakespearean plays. It is entitled "Shakespeare, Artist and Man," and is by L. A. Sherman, Professor of English Literature in the University of Nebraska. Prof. Sherman's method is said to be synthetical rather than analytical, for by an examination of certain characteristic plays he traces the ideas and ideals that have inspired them and from this basis builds up what he considers to be the real character of the poet. The book, however, is essentially an introduction to the plays, for Shakespeare's principles of dramatization and their application to other forms of literary construction are fully set forth.

Since the Appletons' Cyclopedia of American Biography was completed in 1899, many men then comparatively unknown have become famous, and for this reason Gen. James Grant Wilson, senior editor and projector of the original cyclopedia, has prepared a new supplementary volume covering nearly 2,000 names of Americans and adopted citizens who have attained distinction in every walk of life during the past twelve years. The forthcoming volume will be similar in form to its predecessor and contain a dozen full-page steel portraits and five general illustrations, besides several hundred vignettes executed by Gribayedoff. A particular feature of the new work will be found in the complete list of pseudonyms mentioned in the other volumes.

The Nature Series, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., will soon receive an additional volume under the title of "The Mushroom Book," by Miss Nina L. Marshall. Like "Birds That Hunt and Are Hunted," "Nature's Garden," and "The Butterfly Book," the new work will have many accurate and beautiful illustrations in color, together with several score black-and-white plates from really remarkable photographs. Great care has been taken to present a work on the subject which shall particularly appeal to the unscientific reader, enabling him readily to identify the edible and poisonous varieties.

A new edition of the complete works of Bishop Berkeley has been prepared for the Clarendon Press by Prof. A. Campbell Fraser. The editor has thoroughly revised and recast his large octavo edition of the works published in three volumes in 1871, and now out of print, and has added to the text the posthumous works. The introduction and notes have been practically rewritten, and a brief new biography will be prefixed. All fresh material that has come to light within the last thirty years has been incorporated throughout, and this may be regarded as the final Oxford edition of the Irish philosopher—so important a factor in the development of modern thought in Europe and in America, with which his name is closely associated—who spent his last days in Oxford, and lies buried in its cathedral church. Prof. Campbell Fraser's book will be published in four crown octavo volumes early in 1901.

An interesting volume "About the Bible" has been written and compiled by Charles L. Hammond, a graduate of West Point and retired officer of the United States Army. The subject is treated of from many points of view, extending from criticisms of the "King James's Bible" and of the "Revised Version" to a statement as to what the average public school student knows about the book. There is one interesting chapter concerning the life, death, and works of Dr. St. George Mivart, the eminent English Roman Catholic scholar and writer. There are also pertinent extracts from "Who Wrote the Bible?" by the Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, and from Ambassador White's book, "The History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in Christendom." The publishers are Cooke & Frye.

Owing to the fact that many persons have inquired whether "Ye Wisdom of Confusius; or, Ye Mummy-fyed Fynger," by Lord Gilbooley, was entirely authentic, we are obliged to say that it is a literary hoax, which is good enough to be a reality, perpetrated by ITALIAN CITIES.*

The outside of these volumes decorated with the coats of arms of the Italian cities is so charming as to put the reader in good humor before the first page is turned, and this complaisance endures to the end of the second volume, where Mr. Blashfield reviews his own young impressions of the early Italian masters, gained at a time when "fat" brushwork was the vogue in Parisian ateliers, and no one before Rembrandt or Velasquez was considered worthy of discussion by the students. Sliding over the slippery floors of the Louvre, he paused before Mantegna's "Madone de la Victoire," liking it because even then he liked armor and had tried to draw it, and this primitive Italian seemed to know how it looked and should be worn. He has seen many pictures since then, and learned to love many masters, and to travel with him and his wife through the storehouses of Renaissance and pre-Renaissance art is to see with the eyes of critic, historian, and artist, so thoroughly trained and informed as to leave no chance for sentimentality. We remember the confession of Mr. Howells as to what he called the "foolish and lying literature" that shaped itself in his mind before he explored the dungeons under the Ducal Palace, and that he fondly hoped might be written out afterward as his "Emotions," and acknowledge with gratitude the immense gulf between the foolish and lying literature of the average sentimental or flippant traveler and the rich and sturdy sentiment of these delightful pages.

Incidentally the reader learns not only a great deal about the growth and decline of the cities he is reading of, but many of Mr. Blashfield's ideas concerning art in the abstract. There is hardly a chapter that does not tempt to quotation, but perhaps the following will serve to show the writer's acuteness in analyzing that most baffling of all mental phenomena—the critic's taste in pictures. He is discussing the popularity of the Sienese masters, whose mediocre art has moved schools of criticism to eulogy.

We suspect, he says, that the panegyrists of the Siencse masters regarded them from the aesthetic rather than the plastic point of view; that they confused the material of representation with the manner of representation, the aspect of an actual object pleasing in itself with the pictorial presentation of such an object. There are many different degrees of visual pleasure: iridescent glass, the changing light of jewels, masses of gold and color, the mere splendor of gold itself, and of "pure color unspoiled by meaning," are pleasant to look upon and possess intrinsic charm and value, a charm which appeals to the savage and the child as well as to the aesthetically cultivated, and which is "unvexed by thought."

There is joy for the eye as well in beautiful objects, which are more highly differentiated, wherein color is wedded to design; in glistening tissues, and in dusky webs of Oriental needlework, and in intricate mazes of tooling and damascening. But there is a still sensuous, but higher delight—higher in the sense that it demands far more of the beholder as well as of the artist—in color subordinated to form and meaning. It is undeniable that a nobler quality of appreciation is required to admire Titian's "Flora" or Veronese's "Family of Darius" than to appreciate a Persian tile or an Indian carpet. It is to the more primitive aesthetic sense that the Sienese painter appeals. He was a cunning craftsman in the use of the gilder's tools. He could chase and damascene the most labyrinthine and exquisite of patterns. He had an Oriental's feeling for textile design and a goldsmith's love of minute and elaborate ornament. His inventiveness, limited to accessories, manifested itself in his treatment of them. The undeveloped artist, unable to paint beautiful pictures, loves to paint beautiful things—things beautiful in themselves—and he offers them (quite unconsciously) as substitutes for competent painting. Madonna's face may be a flat mask, her body a "simulacrum," but her halo and mantle clasp, modeled in plaster, gilded, and stuck on to the painted panel, will be admirably designed. The painter, limited in his powers of expression, gathers into his picture the material which in real life pleases him and his townsfolk, substituting suggestion for plastic realization. It is indisputable that suggestion is more stimulating to the art critic than actual pictorial achievement, which, possessing the means of complete expression, stands in far less need of being helped out, interpreted, and expounded than the imperfect or undeveloped work of art which is necessarily obliged to leave much to the imagination of the spectator. In the last instance the field is open to individual interpretation and for the formulation of theories.

This explanation, calculated to annoy the so-called "literary critic of art," is rounded out by a recognition of the difference between instructed simplicity and the simplicity of ignorance, corresponding to the difference between a real "Ingres" and Bernhardt's representation of an "Ingres," for example. Logical as Mr. Blashfield's argument is, however, and true to the finer provided they do not seek to obtain admiration upon any superiority of workmanship on the part of the Sienese masters.

Babylonia and Assyria *

The increase in the knowledge of Babylonia and Assyria during the last twenty years has been such that it is not too much to say that anything written upon this subject before 1880 is now "hopelessly antiquated." The history of research into the antiquities of these countries may be divided as follows: 1320 A. D. to 1820, 1820-1872; 1872—. About the year 1320 a wandering friar, Odoricus, who was traveling overland to Cathay, passed between Yezd and Huz and saw the ruins of the City of Persepolis. His account, published in Hakluyt's Voyages, is as follows: "I came into a certaine citie called Comum, which was an huge and mightie city in olde time conteyning well nigh fiftie miles in circuite, and hath done in times passed great damage unto the Romanes. In it there are stately palaces altogether destitute of inhabitants, (?) [palacia adhuc integra,] notwithstanding it aboundeth with great store of victuals." Such is the brief testimony of the first European who saw these now famous remains of a great city and a vanished civilization. During the reign of Shah Abbas the Great, (1686+,) Persia came for the first time into direct diplomatic connection with Europe. The first Ambassador to arrive at the Persian Court was from Portugal. This man, a friar, Antonio de Gouvea, visited Persepolis and its ruins. He learned that they had been built by the ancient Persian Kings, and realized that the inscriptions which he saw were not written in any language known at his time. "The inscriptions—which relate to the foundation of the edifice, and, no doubt, also, declare the author of it—although they remain in many parts very distinct, yet there is none that can read them, for they are not in Persian, nor Arabic, nor Armenian, nor Hebrew, which are the languages current in those parts." In 1621, Pietro della Valle, an Italian traveler, in a letter to one of his friends, described the appearance of the inscriptions and even copied a few of the letters. On the publication of his travels, Europe saw for the first time the mysterious characters which no one could read. Sir Dodmore Cotton, the first English Ambassador, went to Persia in 1627. In his train was a boy of nineteen years of age, Thomas Herbert. In the second edition of his travels, (1638,) Herbert alludes to the inscriptions as follows: "In parte of this great roome, (not farre from the portall,) in a mirrour of polisht marble, wee noted above a dozen lynes of strange-characters, very faire and apparent to the eye, but so mysticall, so odly framed, as no Hieroglyphick, no other deep conceit can be more difficultly fancied, more adverse to the intellect. These consisting of Figures, obelisk, triangular, and pyramidall, yet in such Simmetry and order as cannot well be called barbarous. Some resemblance, I thought some words had, of the Antick Greek, shadowing out Ahasuerus Theos. And though it have small concordance with the Hebrew, Greek, or Latine letter, yet questionlesse to the Inventer it was well knowne; and peradventure may conceal some excellent matter, though to this day wrapt up in the dim leaves of envious obscuritie." This was the first account in English of the cuneiform sculptures. Interest in these inscriptions rapidly increased, but it was not until well into the present century that they were accurately deciphered and found to be written in the Old Persian language. They relate the deeds and conquests of Artaxerxes, Darius, and Cyrus. The identification of these letters made possible the unfolding of the history of Babylonia and Assyria which was found inscribed in a different language, but in the same characters, upon rocks, tablets, bricks, and many other things taken from the buried ruins by generations of patient seekers.

But it is only during the last twenty years that data have been obtained which allow the history of Babylonia and Assyria to be traced many centuries further than was ever thought possible for history to extend. What was formerly called the dawn of civilization is now the late middle age of the world's history.

The first volume of Dr. Rogers's work will probably be found more interesting reading than the second, which includes the real history. It is not possible here to go into a discussion of his results, but it suffices to say that he has rendered accessible in a very readable form the present state of knowledge of the history of Babylonia and Assyria.

Paris.*

"Paris," writes the author of "Paris in Its Splendour," "like London and Rome, is not only the political, commercial, social, and intellectual centre of France, but it is an epitome and reflection of the national life and an illustration of the past history." It is in the carrying out of this idea that the book before us has been written. In it an attempt has been made to explain the *HISTORY OF BABYLONIA AND ASSYRIA. By Robert William Rogers, Professor in Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J. In two volumes. New York: Eaton & Mains. Cincinnati: Jennings & Pye. 1900. Pp. xx.-427-xv.-418. $5.

*PARIS IN ITS SPLENDOUR. By E. A. Reynolds-Ball, author of "Cairo, the City of the Caliphs." In two volumes. Illustrated. 8vo. Vol. I., Pp 354; Vol. II., 406. Boston: Dana Estes & Company. Cloth and gilt, $5; leather, $10.

are treated of. For those who wish to carry their reading further or who may desire to study a particular subject more fully than the book permits there is a chapter devoted to the bibliography of Paris, which, although far from complete, is, nevertheless, useful for most present needs.

As a piece of useful and entertaining literature, augmented by carefully selected illustrations, "Paris in Its Splendour" is well worth reading and preserving. The author combines the best qualities of an observing traveler with those of an antiquarian and historian. He does not hesitate to give "impressions," nor is he sparing in the employment of the opinions and judgments of others. He writes history with a free, graphic hand, and relates what he has seen with a fine appreciation of past and present conditions. The result is an altogether charming work—literary, artistic, useful.

Short Stories by Ellen Thorneycroft.*

Four inches square may be the limit of the miniaturist and ten feet that of the more ambitious painter, and each one proficient in his art. It might be argued that there is some similarity between artists and writers of the short story and makers of the novel. Supposably, condensation, and that the climax be soon reached, are two necessities of the short story. Descriptions of scenes and of personages—those long preambles—find no room in the short story. The habit of mind differs with the writers. It is, however, absolutely possible for the manufacturer of the long romance to construct a good short story, but it is rare that the short story writer can turn out an acceptable long romance. In "Cupid's Garden," the author has a decided liking for the surprise. The unexpected is within a brief space sprung on the reader. In "An Old Wife's Tale," Mr. Weatherley lives a lifetime with his wife, and he calls her his Rachel. Once there was a dreadful fire, and Weatherley saved Rachel's life, while her sister, Naomi, was burned to death. In his effort to rescue the sisters, Weatherley lost the use of his eyes. For long years the husband cherishes his wife, and Rachel's devotion to her blind husband is touching. When Weatherley dies, it is then that Rachel declares that she is Naomi.

How poets behave themselves is a theme Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler likes to show up. The lady is right in making these poets pretty much like other people, only if anything they are more prone to blunder. You follow some of these stories, expecting to reach the same old weather-beaten landmarks, as of virtue rewarded and vice punished, when you arrive at quite a different conclusion. Silly Amy ought to have seen and respected the fine qualities of Theophilus Grigson, who was every inch a man, and a rich one to boot, but he wore a second-class hat, and his shoes were badly made. Amy married the elegant Maurice Maynard. He always was rigged out in the most splendid attire. Of course Mrs. Maynard had a worthless husband. Looking over her troubles brought about by her finely made-up husband, Amy declares: "The something I wanted was a smart, stylish, good-looking husband; and I never hankered after pompous excellence or unattractive wealth. The something I wanted is the something I have; therefore, I am a happy woman." Here are two extracts from the volume worth remembering: "We have more love stories than we used to have, but less love; just as we have more dentists than we used to have, but less teeth." The other smart saying is: "Patricia was hungry for affection and approbation, and believed that nobody really cared for her unless they told her so every day, wherein she resembled the majority of her sex. Love, like soap or pills or mustard, depends largely upon advertisements for its success."

From the Euphrates to the North River, who can count the steps of the camel? It is a long way from Damascus to New York, but from the caravans there come many strange men, true Orientals, who for a season at least pitch their tents in the great cosmopolitan city. We know of them as the Armenians. These people live in the neighborhood of the Battery, in certain old streets. The Armenians are clannish, for there is a Christian Ghetto. They may not be very clean, nor familiar with water and soap, but they have their good qualities. These newcomers are not a whit less honest than their neighbors. Orientalism bred in the bone (for, despite the mixing of their blood, they are of the most remote antiquity,) precludes assimilation.

In "The Soul of the Street," Mr. Norman Duncan has written a most sympathetic book, having to do with the Syrian quarter of New York. Very touching is the description of that old man, who is the editor of the daily the name of which is The Kawkab Elhorriah; which, translated from the Arabic, means "The Star of Liberty." Khakil Khayat, who lives only for his paper, preaches of freedom. Turkish thraldom, he believes, ought no longer to be possible. He never tires holding up Abdul Hamid as a murderer. Some day, the old enthusiast thinks, he may arouse the United States to a sense of the injury the Sul-old man has but a pittance he offers Salim to take less salary for years to come so as to make up the sum offered by the enemy of the Armenians.

The old fellow is a lover of children. In the dingy tenement where he lives, there is a crippled child, Billy Halloran. The poor little fellow's mother is a drunkard. Khayat nurses the crippled boy and tells him lovely Eastern stories.

A clever sketch is "The Greatest Player in the World." There is one of the Syrian colony who is a violinist of merit. Khakil is anxious that the instrumentalist should not hide his talent under a bushel, but should make his début before an American audience. The violinist plays in MacNamara's groggery, and MacNamarra is an Alderman and the elect of Tammany Hall. It is an Oriental rhapsody the violinist performs, the "Song of Love to Lali." Has the musician an appreciative audience? Some one cries out: "Fellers! Hi-li! MacNamara's killin' pigs!"

How pretty is the story of Haleem, the beauty of the Syrian quarter, who throws over the gentle, spiritual Alois and marries the great, big, strapping Jimmy Brady. There springs up between the reader and Khakil Khayat a real affection. Sometimes the old editor doubts of his success as an awakener in the cause of human liberty, but he finds his consolation, for he says, thinking of Billy, the little cripple: "And concerning blessedness, this I know—know for truth, though it be all I have wrested from the eternal in a long life—that it is more blessed to lighten the life of a child than—than—any other thing." Mr. Norman Duncan has written a charming book, and replete with human sympathy. A word should be said as to the nice make-up of the volume.

A Depressing Story.*

There seems to be one difficulty in the comprehension of Florence Stuart's "Punchinello." You are in a measure at sea as to the period when the incidents in the romance take place. Anthony Dallas is a musician, but exactly when he exercised his calling is at the best but vague. There are some references to the musicians of the remoter past, and then Beethoven comes in. Then every now and then, with the talk of the middle of the last century, there are modern turns of expression. The author has tried to put into action a kind of Quasimodo, a sadly misshaped person, who is Anthony Dallas. Early in his days of boyhood Anthony believed that he looked like other lads. His awakening was a sad one. Crippled as he was, Anthony was not backward in paying court to the ladies. Engaged in musical composition, despite "chromatics and harmonics," he has many love adventures. Finally he marries the beautiful Nan. Whether Nan plays her husband false or not is not easy to determine. Anyhow Anthony suspects Cosmo Granby. The climax is reached when Anthony finds Cosmo dead and then the savage husband scars Cosmo's face with a stiletto. A most depressing story is "Punchinello," uncanny and distressful.

"Uncle Terry."*

Uncle Silas Terry, the honest old keeper of the lighthouse, the author has drawn in a most natural manner. Silas has his peculiarities, and one is an antipathy for lawyers. Once one of the legal fraternity swindled Silas out of his hard-earned money, and he has not forgotten it. One stormy day Uncle Silas sees a stranded ship and witnesses the foundering of the vessel. All hands seem lost, and yet there comes ashore a bundle. The keeper of the Cape Light finds in the bundle a child. With the assistance of his wife the infant is brought back to life. There are some few trinkets found with the child. These Silas and his wife carefully preserve. There is, too, a letter, scarcely legible, and it bears what the old people think is the name of the child, "Etelka Peterson." For short the little girl is called "Telly." All through her young life she is tenderly cared for. She knows, too, the sad story of her rescue.

The Cape Light is off the coast of Maine, and near it is a settlement. Somewhere, too, in Maine there is the small town of Sandgate. Here live Albert and Alice Page. They are orphans, and without means. Albert, who is well educated, goes to Boston to practice law. Here he is thrown in with a rascally lawyer, Frye by name. Albert's best friend is Frank Nason. Frank, who has plenty of money, is at first careless, and inclined toward a dissipated life. Fortunately for him he becomes acquainted with Alice Page, who is a schoolmistress. He falls in love then with Albert's sister. Frank is made to feel what a useless life he is leading. Albert's example produces its effect. Then Frank studies law and becomes Albert's partner. Uncle Silas finds an advertisement in the Boston papers asking for some information relative to a Swedish vessel wrecked off the Maine Coast some nineteen years ago. If there was a survivor bearing the name of Peterson there was a fortune to be inherited.

Lorna Doone.*

In spite of what the late Mr. Blackmore considered to be an "American idiosyncrasy" "Lorna Doone" continues to be this author's most popular book, in America at least. While his own desires were directed through a different channel for public approbation "Lorna Doone" succeeded in spite of his indifference toward it. Last year we had an authorized edition of the work from the press of G. P. Putnam's Sons, with a new preface written specially for it by the author, and with beautiful photogravure illustrations. This year there are two editions, one by Harper & Brothers, Mr. Blackmore's original publishers in this country, and the other by Rand, McNally & Co.

The latter is a two-volume edition containing simply the original text of the story and illustrated with half-tone pictures reproduced from photographs of scenes with which the tale is associated. The illustrations include good pictures of "The Road from Porlock Market," "Doone Valley," "The Devil's Cheesewring," "The Slippery Water Course," "On the Bagworthy," &c., while a cover design in white, gold, and pink, by Miss Mary E. Phillips, makes the volumes particularly attractive.

In the Harper edition, besides the reproduction of Exmoor scenery, we have drawings illustrative of the story from the pencil of W. Small. Mr. Clifton Johnson, who took photographs of the scenery expressly for this edition, has given a brief introduction descriptive of the Doone landscape and the Doone people. "Mr. Blackmore," he says, "could hardly have chosen a more fascinating background for the scene of those adventures of the olden times that are the theme of his famous novel. In their way the big, brown barrens have a beauty which makes one love them, but at the same time there is about them a suggestion of primeval savagery, a loneliness, and mystery and gloom almost oppressive." The frontispiece of this edition is a portrait of the author, which, we understand, is the reproduction of a very old and rare photograph. It represents the author, for all the world like the skipper of a Dutch lugger. Then, too, we have Mr. Blackmore's introduction, which consists of a dialogue in verse carried on between Lorna and the Gentleman from the West. It was written for the Harper edition in October, 1890. This edition will appeal to many because, in spite of many obstacles, it is the attempt not only to bring the country of Exmoor near the reader, but to bring the author also within the same range of sympathy.

By Maurus Jokai.*

There can be no better review of this grim romance than has been already written by Mr. Bain in his admirable preface to the translation of Jokai's "Szomoru Napok." Mr. Bain explains the point of view of the novel by the circumstances under which it was written, "shortly after the collapse of the Magyar revolution of 1848-9, when Hungary lay crushed and bleeding under the heel of triumphant Austria and her Russian ally." Jokai, who had taken an active part in the revolution, was proscribed, and amid the ruins of his own career and the wreckage of his patriotic dreams, he wrote "The Day of Wrath"—and wrote it in characters of blood and fire. Naturally, it is no tale for the recreation of the superficial reader. It reminds one of another cry of a heartbroken patriot, Dr. Rizal's "Noli Me Tangere." It is a story of suffering, of crime, of punishment; also it is "a bitter satire on the crying abuses and anomalies which have prevailed in Hungary for centuries," upon "the brutal ignorance of the common people, the criminal neglect of the gentry which makes such ignorance possible, the imbecility of mere mob rule, and the mischievousness of demagogic pedantry."

At the same time, it is no mere political or social diatribe, but a powerful work of imagination, electric with a noble scorn of wrong, whether public or private. The author has created many striking and original characters, and has succeeded in evoking the reader's sympathy for a headsman not without human tenderness and rectitude of purpose. The situations are thrilling, the descriptions vivid, the sentiments always finely felt. There is a tendency to heighten the coloring of life—natural enough when one considers the circumstances of the writing, but there is not wanting a gentle, idyllic strain to soften a narrative that would else be too painful, and "the denouement, in which all enmities are reconciled, all evildoers are punished, and gentleness and heroism receive their retributive crowns, is a singularly happy one." (Were we criticising the preface, we should demur at this usage of the word "retributive.")

"The Day of Wrath" belongs to a high order of fiction, whether one regards its imaginative or its historic value. It cannot be affirmed that it contains the elements wont to command popular success, but it is an interesting and a suggestive study of humanity. It impresses anew the lesson so often hardly learned, so easily forgotten, that when those of large opportunity cease to live up to their "noblesse oblige," the day of wrath has dawned for aristocracy and peasantry alike. It is the story of Carlyle's "Irish widow," of the filthy waterside street poisoning the palace on the height above. Everywhere, in all lands, "the classes and the masses" are the twins of Siam, indissolubly connected for life or for death.

It is well that not only in revolutions of terror, but upon the pages of the masters of literature, this truth should again and again be blazoned, "Lest we forget; lest we forget."

War with the Hudson's Bay Company.*

"Lords of the North" tells the story of the fierce days of 1815 and thereabout, when the Northwest Company, with Indian allies, "carried war into the very heart of the vast territory claimed by its rivals, the Honourable Hudson's Bay Company."

As may be surmised, it is pre-eminently a novel of incident, and of uncommonly stirring incident. Adventure follows fast upon the heels of adventure, peril upon the heels of peril. The search of a young husband and his friends for his wife and child, stolen by a wandering band of Iroquois, furnishes the thread of the narration. Since the prisoners prove almost as elusive as Evangeline, there is room for many an episode of heroism and of romance, and for the introduction of a variety of characters among white men and red, of whom the best is, perhaps, the devoted and racy Irish priest, Father Holland. Indeed, no story can ever be written of the winning of the great Northwest without paying a tribute to the consecrated zeal and courage of the Catholic missionaries, who braved, and often endured, a torture infinitely worse than death, that they might carry the Gospel to the savage tribes of those harsh regions.

"Lords of the North" is well written, the characters are distinct and strong. The old priest's death is a scene of great beauty and pathos. But, in truth, the tale is o'er long for any save the leisure of youth—too rich in its future to wax impatient. Condensation would not only have made it possible to many more readers than will now venture upon the portly volume, but would have improved the story from a literary point of view.

As we look upon many attractive books of the present day, we are fain to murmur, as did the wicked Lady Pippenwerth to poor Tommy, "Too stout!" "Lords of the North" is decidedly "too stout," a fault the more to be regretted because it is altogether meet and right that we should put ourselves in remembrance of "the pioneers and their descendants, whose heroism won the land" we enjoy.

The Salt-Box House.*

The "Salt-Box House" was built in 1758, and the history of its century and more of usefulness gives an opportunity to record many an old order that has changed and custom that has passed away. The name "Salt-Box House" was a colloquial title springing from the resemblance borne by the building to the wooden salt box that hung in the kitchen chimney. The house was set upon a hill near the lovely village of Stratford, Conn., where it may still be seen, in a state of semi-ruin among woodbines and raspberry bushes.

It was built a "plank house," like others of its period, the sides being made entirely of wide planks two inches thick, standing upright side by side. "Raising bees" were then in fashion, and the neighbors gathered to help put together the framework of the new building "to the wagging of the fiddlesticks." Some of the planks were 30 feet long, however, and there was much more work than play to a "raising bee."

The shape of the house, with its deep sloping roof, was according to a fashion established in Queen Anne's time, when a tax was imposed upon houses of more than one story. The salt-box style gave a one story front and ample space for additional rooms under the roof behind. In this way the tax was eluded, and a very picturesque and individual example of architecture gained.

The house once built, the furnishing was a matter to be considered by the parents of the bride who was to occupy it. With people of the best class the expenditure amounted to £200. The list of essentials included some items strange to the modern taste; "four feather beds & bolsters & pillows," for example, consumed £134, and a "Pictor and fraim of ye Royal Family" cost £30 5s.; there were fourteen other "pictor fraims" and two "large punch boulds," but only three "likor glasses" and two tablecloths. These last, however, were 5½ yards long, showing that the bride was predestined to hospitality.

"Keeping house" was a complicated art in those days, when, as the author says, "every house was not only its own centre, but almost its own circumference." Everything that could be was done on the premises. The expression came when the family needed to go about their own affairs under their roof; the ladies came to make their clothing and the people to do the necessary "mending" and repairs. Flax was prepared at home for spinning, wool was carded, and many household soaps were made, beer was brewed, yarn was dyed, butter and cheese were made. "Idleness on the part of master or mistress, child or slave, was not countenanced; it was disreputable."

When, however, the spinning wheel was at rest in its corner as hand-made fabrics gave way to the machine made, and the old slaves who were born in slavery and trained to their duties died, making place for the younger generation born in freedom and settling in homes of their own, "the hard time for the housewife began." The traditions of "an open house" could only be lived up to with difficulty. "The foreign element had not yet lifted much of the burden that the negro had left on the white hands unaccustomed to so much of the work." "Mandy," who reigned for a time in the kitchen of the salt-box house, was an excellent example of a slave that had died out as entirely as mythological fauns. Her bread was baked in a brick oven that her ancestors were stocked in a distant Africa attending upon their fair sisters of to-day. She was [illegible] New England ancestors were not poor livers before the abolition of slavery; neither were they prohibitionists. Rum seems to have been a specific for most ills, and was the most available liquor, as it came direct from the West Indies. Clove water was made of cloves steeped in boiling water, loaf sugar, and rum; laudanum was prepared by adding an ounce of opium to a gill of rum; tansy bitters—the cure-all for chills and the sensation of "goneness"—was made from a few young tansy leaves added to a quart of rum; garlic-and-rum was administered as a fitting tonic; a glass of Santa Cruz rum was offered with a piece of fruit cake to the parson or to any other worthy visitor who chanced to call. While the cheaper New England variety was provided for common consumption, "the rum" [illegible] was scrupulously guarded as to its quality and quantity, and apparently it did not improve the tone in the household.

The [illegible] of the Salt-Box House were [illegible] linen $2½ a yard, and common calico $30 and $40 a yard.

As late as 1801 calico was more costly than satin, and therefore to be preferred for a wedding gown. She had waited until she was over thirty before relinquishing her state of single blessedness, and her years had been well employed preparing her wedding outfit.

BOOKS OF THE SEASON.

When she was nearly eighty she wrote again, without melancholy:

"Table and hearth have no occupant but myself—no hurry, very little work and care; my house is clean and still, nothing disturbed or out of place, and these quiet times in my own house suit me exactly—and somebody's growing old! that tells the story."

Soon after Miss Mary's death the house died also, in the sense of sinking into collapse and becoming uninhabitable. The little book devoted to its memory is pleasant reading, lacking only illustrations to make an unusually attractive addition to the holiday book counters.

Poems by a Banker.*

In this volume of sentimental and occasional verse of which a brief descriptive notice has already been given, the President of the Atlantic Trust Company presents some very well-turned poems of observation and a few tuneful lyrics. These we are told are survivals from a poetic youth—harmonious phrasings which have outlived in some quiet corner the hurry and bustle and mathematical exactness of financial life. As in much youthful verse, the prevalence of melody, frequently repeated in the same strain, might by the ungracious critic cause the lines to take on the measure of doggerel, but in these verses the sentiment is often so good that the detractor would sing-song in vain. It is not great poetry, to be sure, and the subjects chosen are commonly those which most young poets choose, but the inspiring note seems to be elevated and the meter swings easily, if somewhat monotonously, in the more serious stanzas. Some of the verses relate to Christmas.

In the lyrics, however, and in one or two anthems, the musical quality finds its truest expression in a variety and coloring of phrasing that is pleasing to the ear, as, for example the "Song for the Mercantile Library Dinner," (1888,) or "Easter," or a very spirited anthem entitled "Thanksgiving," (1875,) which opens with:

Give thanks, give thanks, my country!
For God hath given thee peace—
From sword and plague His shield hath saved,
And made thy power increase.

We doubt, however, whether the best poem in the book, both for its sentiment and maturity of thought and expression displayed, be a "survival." The title is "The Man with the Hoe," written in quotation marks. If it was not intended as a reply to Mr. Markham, it serves that purpose very well. The opening stanza reads:

Who least requires the pity of his kind—
Who least desires your condescending aid?
He who with plow and hoe has conquered Earth,
Piled high her treasures, gathered by his toil,
Then sent them far to fill his fellow-men
With cheer and strength in every walk of life.

Here is another touch, concerning which it is unnecessary to comment:

Shall we be blameless if we warm and nurse
The serpent Anarchy to work our woe?
Nay, rather, turn we to the fairer side
Of mysteries which Faith must find yet dim.

And here are the closing lines, which, like the rest of the poem, are inspired with the true ring of the gospel of toil:

Patience shall conquer all—not fierce recoil!
When man shall reach the topmost peaks of joy,
And in serenest mind look back on life,
Shall Dread Destruction or Impatience stand
The Almoner of grace and goodly gifts?
Nay, rather, shall a stately, Christly form
Emerge upon the path so bravely trod,
And, with a voice of gracious dignity,
Proclaim—I, Labor, am the Friend of Man,
His teacher, Guard, Companion to the end:
By me his great achievements all are won,
By me his feet have gained supernal heights.

"The Mantle of Elijah."*

We hardly think that Mr. Zangwill's new book will add to his literary laurels. While it is undoubtedly clever, nevertheless its very smartness is a main reason for complaint. It is, indeed, a pity that men and women in real life do not always talk in the bright, crisp way of Mr. Zangwill's characters. If they only did, how much more brilliant a place to live in would this world be. But most of us are plain men and women of plain speech, and the continuous flow of puns and epigrams with which Mr. Zangwill regales us, (there is not a stupid person between the covers of his book,) while it impresses the reader with the abundant wit of its author, leaves him somewhat doubtful of the lifelikeness of his characters.

The story is one of English social and political life and begins far more brilliantly, we think, than it ends. We have a feeling, upon reading it, that Mr. Zangwill himself was in doubt just what he should really do with his characters after he created them. They wander through the pages for a while and then drop out as easily as though they had never been, and even at the last we find Allegra turning her back on us as though her part had all been played and finished, instead of being just begun.

The story hangs loosely together, with, however, here and there passages of wonderful interest interspersed between pages of dry reading, as though Mr. Zangwill was perversely showing us what he could do if he really put his mind to it. Even the most conscientious of us have a sneaking wish to "skip."

There are, too, passages—for instance, that of the poisoned arrow—which impress us as though they were introduced for the dramatic effect, since the story is, we understand, soon to be adapted for the stage, and will probably be far better to see than to read.

In spite of all this, however, there is much of interest in the book. Broser, if not strictly honorable, is nevertheless a thoroughly well-drawn and logical character. Allegra, true to her chin, which "was pointed, which is said to be a sign of indecision," did everything, beginning with her marriage to Broser, that the reader most fervently wished her not to do. The Duchess, with her big heart and rough speech, and Mr. Marshmont, the dreamer and the prophet, betrayed where he most looked for help, are the most lovable of all the characters. On the whole, it is a book which, like so many men, has more of promise than achievement.

Famous Names in Fiction.*

We have seen what Mr. Nicholson's realistic work is. Even his recent portraits of such American worthies as Mr. Bryan and Mr. Croker are pictures that we do not forget. The hand that has drawn them has been so certain, the eyes of the artist are so trained to their work of observation, that while we may find the heavy black lines on those quiet brown backgrounds too coarse and rudimentary for beautiful portraiture, we find no unexplained spaces or forms, and no vague handling. The figure fills the clothes, the outline suggests the modeling with firm directness of execution. In these imaginary portraits of fictitious characters we cannot take quite the same satisfaction. They are neither so simple in execution nor so expressive. The line is less eloquent and flows less easily, and the effect is more shallow and empty than when Mr. Nicholson sits down before a living model in order to tell the precise truth about him. Which perhaps is only equivalent to saying that Mr. Nicholson's imagination is not so clear and adequate as his vision. But after all reservations are made the fact remains that these pictures, like the real portraits by the same artist, are both artistically and intellectually interesting.

To those who know the characters represented, (and we may venture to predict that a very few who will buy the book will be able to identify all the characters,) they will suggest successfully the charm or the eccentricity or the magnificence of the original. Miss Havisham, in her withered bridal finery, clutching her crutched stick, peers out from the folds of her veil with cruel and peevish lips, upon which her continual injunction to Pip, "Love her, love her, love her," may very well be imagined to be trembling. Miss Fotheringay on the arm of Captain Costigan wending her way churchward is fairly enough the kind of simple, handsome, friendly creature to win the heart of a Pendennis. Sophia Western corresponds not only to Fielding's description of her beauty, but the sweetness of temper that was said to "diffuse a glory over her countenance" is indicated in the gracious poise of her figure and the caressing gesture of her hand toward the little bird which played so lively a part in her early romance, but which, we believe, was lost when Sophia was much younger than Mr. Nicholson has here represented her. All the feminine characters, even Scott's mad gypsy, have a daintiness and grace of outline that is charming. With his men the artist has been more summary and renders a much less pleasing impression. The splendor of Porthos, the villainy of John Silver, the dignity and pathos of Quixote, are hinted at, but would hardly convince any but the initiated. Henry IV.'s gay jester is perhaps the least a mask of all. The anatomy of Mr. Nicholson's animals is certainly open to question, but in the matter of expression they excel their masters. The horse of Jorrocks smiles upon his leader with a peculiarly appropriate jollity of aspect. The single eye of Rochester's curtailed beast speaks volumes, and Snarleyyow is a miracle of fidelity to Marryat's description of his attractions of face and form.

With a strict adherence to the main incidents of the Revolution, the author of "Lady Hancock" has introduced many romantic situations. The story begins with the alarm sounded by Paul Revere. Then John Hancock was thirty-eight years old. It was Paul Revere who rode post haste to tell Hancock and Samuel Adams that the British regulars were on their track. In the various chapters of the story, the fight at Concord, the evacuation of Boston, the Declaration of Independence, Valley Forge, the battle of Monmouth, the surrender of Cornwallis, are all presented. The main characters are John Hancock and his wife. The manners and customs of the times are truthfully shown. After the death of John Hancock, Mrs. Hancock became the wife of Capt. Scott of the merchant service. Scott, however, volunteered, and bore a distinguished part in the action off the harbor of Tripoli. When Decatur undertook to blow up the stranded United States ship Philadelphia, Scott joined the seventy volunteers. He was so badly wounded in a later engagement that, fever having set in, the gallant Capt. Scott died. Boston after the Revolution is thus described:

The favorite promenade of gentlewomen and gentlemen was on the Mall after dinner in Colonial days, and a social evening at some friend's house, unless they attended the evening lecture. And the Mall, with fine shade trees on either side, and extending over a mile, was a fine place for a quiet stroll. The favorite pastime for gentlewomen was to drink tea and to gossip. Theatrical amusements did not find favor until after the Revolution, and many new customs were introduced then. * * * All the wealthier families, as well as a great many of moderate means, kept their own private carriages. Mrs. Scott always rode to church in great state, and never omitted attendance at divine service if she were able to go, while she exacted a punctual discharge of this religious duty from all the members of her family.

Short Essays on American Life.*

"Nature is very un-American. Nature never hurries," says Mr. Jordan in a little volume of essays which treats of the fallacies, the deceptions, as well as the underlying worth of American life and achievement. The above quotation is from a few pages devoted to "Hurry, the Scourge of America," in which the gospel of repose is preached. There are other essays on "The Majesty of Calmness," "The Dignity of Self-Reliance," and the paradox of "Failure as a Success," &c. They are reprinted from The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia, and present very good reading either for the brisk or for the meditative man, while their form of presentation makes the collection particularly acceptable as a giftbook of considerable literary value.

A Chinese Mother Goose.*

Minister Wu has written to Prof. Headland concerning this book: "By collecting and translating the Chinese rhymes into English, you have added a valuable contribution to the folk-lore of nations, and, at the same time, done a great service to juvenile literature by calling attention to the fact that children have the same thoughts and tastes in China as in America." This shows the idea of the book; it also intimates that the author has succeeded in his work. The rhymes are given both in Chinese and English, and their subjects are illustrated by half-tone reproductions of photographs, the characters in which must have posed especially for the occasion. These Chinese rhymes are very simple; and Mr. Wu was right in saying, as will be seen from the following, that "children have the same thoughts and tastes in China as in America":

Lady-bug, lady-bug,
Fly away, do,
Fly to the mountain,
And feed on the dew,
Feed upon dew,
And sleep on a rug,
And then run away
Like a good little bug.

As in the books of the children of the Occident the stories for little Orientals deal chiefly with domestic animals, birds, flowers and insects, and good and bad little boys and girls. But the Chinese mind is shown to be particularly impressionable in regard to the various aspects of nature and nature's creatures and their usefulness to mankind, and every rhyme, however simple and trivial, centres around some useful, instructive, or amusing idea, while those which may be called "Mother's Songs" are susceptible of soft and sweet melody. It is all very beautiful; but Prof. Headland has done more than merely to give us a complete view of Chinese childlife as it actually is, for he has by so doing produced a book which will bring the American child nearer nature and inspire in it a love for the simple and tender, the true and the good. There is no rupture between cause and effect in the Chinese nursery tale as there is so often in those of the Occident.

Two New Books for Little Ones.*

The grotesque and the uncommon particularly appeal to little children. In "Daddy Long Legs" these features are conspicuous, but the music to which the rhymes are to be sung are simple and attractive, and will doubtless be as mental burrs to the memories of the little ones. The rhymes, too, are effective, not only because each presents an idea or observation pertinently expressed, but because the words chosen are grouped in such a way as to be readily remembered. Here is the first stanza of a song about "Pussy Cat":

"Pussy cat, pussy cat, tell me, pray,
Why do you stay in the house all day
Snoozing around a-licking your paws?"
"My reason," said pussy, "is just because,
My reason," said pussy, "is just because."

It is very essential that little ones after the age of three should be taught some simple airs, and in the book before us the pictures and the rhymes are sure to arouse the curiosity of the youngsters in regard to the music which adds renewed interest to the words and pictures. Evidently the underlying idea of the book is sound, it would make the child responsive to melody in a way which is sure to lay the foundation of a sense of musical appreciation.

Mr. Williams's book on Indians is as instructive as it is picturesque. The text and pictures are on alternate pages, arranged in the alphabetical order of tribes—thus "Apache," "Blackfeet," "Crow," "Dakotah," &c. In simple, direct language each tribe is described, while on the opposite page is a hunting, camp, or battle ecene illustrative of the life of the tribe described, and so on through the alphabet, the "Zuni" being the last tribe treated of. As the artist-author has evidently failed to find a tribe whose initial letter is "X," he writes here "X is an Extraordinary Legend." Although essentially a juvenile, calculated to amuse, it cannot fail to inculcate in the infant mind an interest in the original Americans. The information given is also of such a character as to interest older persons, as may be judged from the following extract taken at random:

T for the Tuscarora—Ages ago, before the white man came to America, the Indians were the only Americans. They owned all the country as their hunting ground. A powerful tribe lived in the North called Adirondacks, who threatened all the weaker bands. The Tuscaroras were among these, and fled south to the land of the Delawares to escape their foes. Afterward they moved north and lived in the tents of the Iroquois, making the sixth tribe of the Six Nations. When the Iroquois became powerful, they exterminated their old enemies, the Adirondacks. The Tuscaroras use the toboggan as a sled, and drag their burdens many miles over the snow, using snowshoes to support them while walking on the soft snow. Sometimes they travel forty miles a day. The snowshoes of the Tuscaroras are four feet long, curving and tapering to a tail. The shoes of other tribes are of various sizes and many shapes. Indians used shells called wampum for their dollars and cents.

Scandinavians in the United States.*

A book of considerable value to the ethnologist comes from Minneapolis in the shape of a history of the Scandinavians in the United States. The name of O. N. Nelson appears upon the title page as compiler and editor and again as publisher, but the names of his associates, filling a page of the large octavo volume, are all resonantly Scandinavian, of the true Viking stamp, and strikingly increase our confidence in what follows. Knute Gjerst and J. J. Skordalsvold head the list.

The work goes back for a start to the Icelandic discovery of Vinland, a thousand years ago, as set forth in the Sagas and accepted by most recent historians. At the end of the prefatory division Columbus is referred to with the fine scorn that members of a really ancient family may be supposed to feel for a parvenu. "What, then, can be the value of the so-called discovery of Columbus? Columbus himself professes to have gone to and beyond Iceland. Whether he got any information there in regard to America is not certain; but the great sailor and rover that he was, together with his genius for geography and ambition for discovery, make it very probable and indeed almost certain that he did obtain the necessary information for his great subsequent voyage. "If not," we are asked in a burst of scorn, "what did he go to Iceland for?"

This may possibly be pronounced a non sequitur by some of our legal readers, but whether it "proves" or not does not affect the real value of the book, which is not a treatise on logic, but a very valuable compilation of facts relating to its subject. There are other passages, like the one just quoted, that suggest a regret that the Englishing of the work was not more carefully revised by one to the manner born.

The somewhat cumbrous size of the book is due to the fact that it comprises two volumes in one. The first includes the history of the Scandinavian immigration, the first settlements made in America by Icelanders, Swedes, and Norwegians, respectively; reviews of the various Scandinavian churches, principally in Minnesota and Iowa, and various tables of statistics. The second volume is principally devoted to a continuation of church histories and a large number of biographical notices. The work is illustrated with numerous portraits.

The Care of the Hair.*

To the ladies who would preserve their luxuriant tresses, and to the gentlemen who would recall their fleeting locks, Mr. J. R. Stitson, in a volume numbering about 230 pages, directs some sound advice and counsel. After a careful study of this book there would seem to be no reason why men and women should resort to wigs and switches, for, unless the roots are entirely dead, Mr. Stitson offers hope for a sturdy crop.

The book is carefully divided into classified chapters, giving the nature, uses, and properties of the hair, its care, the influence upon it of the general health; dandruff, falling out, &c., and the preventives, diseases, artificial means of changing its color, and one chapter, especially intended for the ladies, suggests appropriate styles for arrangement. There are also some prescriptions of tonics, &c., given, and as a whole, the book deals exhaustively with the subject.

Urchins of the Sea.*

"Urchins of the Sea." is the title of a rhymed story by Marie Overton Paine and Charles Buxton Going. The story details the moving adventures by flood rather than by field of three amusing little sea urchins named respectively Wopsy, Pudgy, and Wobbly Jim. It is dedicated to the "Land Urchin Godfrey," to some chapters of ingly written and appreciative verses. Here is one:

Are so well known that if you please
We'll leave the species that exist

And set upon our stage a scene
Of species as they might have been.

Miss Paine and Mr. Going are evidently appreciative students of childhood and childish moods and tastes. Their verses run smoothly and carry enough of incident and interest to hold even the attention of the older reader, while the child will find new delights on every page.

There is a certain indefinable and catchy swing also to the verses which renders them unusually attractive. "Urchins of the Sea" is well adapted to delight the nursery at Christmas tide, and is also worthy of a place on the parlor table.

First Part of the Arnold Sale.

Bangs & Co. announce that in January they will sell the first part of the fine collection of William Harris Arnold, the well-known bibliophile and author of "First Report of a Book Collector." The news of the coming sale will doubtless astonish many of Mr. Arnold's friends, as it was not thought that he had any desire to part with his notable library of first editions, to which he lately added, at the price of $160, the McKee copy of "Moll Pitcher."

The first part comprises first editions of the works of Bryant, Emerson, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, Thoreau, and Whittier. The fine items are so numerous that a detailed list would not be desirable, but among the many that might be named are these: A manuscript by Bryant, which has not been published; the complete holograph manuscript of Emerson's "Threnody," written in 1842; also his "High Tide at Fellowship," 1846, so rare that few collectors have seen it; Hawthorne's "Fanshawe," a remarkable copy; the little books for children, 1841, and "The Celestial Railroad," 1846; "The Blithedale Romance," in two parts, original paper covers, one of two known copies in this condition; Holmes's "Harbinger," 1836; "The Ouida-giousness of Feminine Fever," 1868; the "Fair Play" set, with an autograph letter; an autograph letter of Longfellow's to Charles Sumner; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1838; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1839; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1840; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1841; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1842; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1843; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1844; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard, 1845; Lowell's "Class Poem," Harvard,

MR. STEDMAN.

Speeches, Letters, and Poems at the Reception Given by the Authors Club in Celebration of the Completion of His "American Anthology."

On the evening of Dec. 6 the Authors Club of New York City, as already briefly chronicled in these pages, gave a reception to Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman. The occasion marked the completion of Mr. Stedman's critical works on English and American poetry. These include "Victorian Poets," "Poets of America," "A Victorian Anthology," and the final volume of the series, "An American Anthology," which was published on Oct. 10 of this year.

MR. STEDMAN'S SPEECH.

Mr. George Cary Eggleston, the Chairman of the evening, presided. Mr. Stedman, rising in acknowledgment of Mr. Eggleston's introduction, declared that he found himself beset by an actual embarrassment. He felt, he said, as if he were occupying the "other man's place." So often had he assisted at or initiated receptions to colleagues and friends that this first reception to him in his own town seemed a homecoming after years of enforced absence. A bright homecoming, that yet carried with it sadness, for his own generation was fast thinning out. He spoke of the friendships the years had brought him, of Richard Henry Stoddard, Webb, Winter, Aldrich, the Platts, the Egglestons, and Richard Grant White. There was Warner, too, but lately gone. Mr. Stedman spoke tenderly of Warner as a friend and in admiration of his work. A sonnet by Warner, so infrequent a writer of verse, was included in the "American Anthology." In writing to Mr. Stedman later, of his delight in finding his lines there, Mr. Warner said that the discovery gave him more pleasure than the whole "Library of the World's Best Literature."

As to the editorial part of his work, Mr. Stedman had a warning for young editors. "Don't get entangled," he said, "in your desire to pay a debt to your profession." In spite of the rewards of the work, uncertain at best, what with the arduous compiling, and above all, the demands of the inevitable correspondence, the editor may find himself with no profession to which to owe a debt. Mr. Stedman felt that he had done his share of editorial work. There is the eleven-volume "Library of American Literature," of which he and Miss Hutchinson (now Mrs. Cortissoz) were joint editors. Mr. Stedman paid a tribute to his colleague's critical taste and subtlety of judgment.

As for the "American Anthology," between the sins of omission and the sins of commission that had been attributed to him, Mr. Stedman laughingly compared himself to Lowell's "'Zekle," who > Stood a spell on one foot fust,

> Then stood a spell on t'other,
> And on which one he felt the wust
> He couldn't ha' told you nuther!

Emerson, Mr. Stedman continued, said that he hung his verses in the wind, and they were winnowed through and through until only five remained. Perhaps many of the minor poets are now doing the same thing. Besides, it is possible for a minor to become a major by a mere transposition of key. Mr. Stedman then turned his attention to the publishers. There had been times, he said, when authors owed very little to their publishers. He had had unpleasant times about copyrights himself, but, in truth, publishers and authors are getting on together much better nowadays, and there is a fair division of the spoils. After indulging in a good deal of kindly humor concerning publishers and their ways, Mr. Stedman closed his remarks with the following passage:

"As this is one of those occasions when a member rises to an explanation, I will say that I read to-day a very friendly reference in a magazine, in which a regret was kindly expressed that I had stated that hereafter I would cease from literary labor. Now, this would be exceptionally hard to do, when, by reason of prostration for nearly half of the last three years, I have had, for the first time since boyhood, enforced leisure for plenty of thinking and have meditated enough of poems, songs, plays, even novels, to require a Methuselish's term for their execution. It has often seemed to me during illness that literature would cease from being vexed by me, but never that I would voluntarily cease from trying at least to perform the labor we all delight in, because it physics pain.

And, indeed, which of us is too old, what one too young, not to feel in his heart of hearts that, although health and wealth and even hope may come and go, though the eyes dim or the hand be stricken, though friends may fall and love be a memory—more, though even that reputation, dear and fickle jade, after which we all at times have striven, (because, as Landor confesses, there is a something of Summer even in the hum of insects,) though even that be not his help in time of trouble—which of us toilers of the pen, if born with the art to write, does not know that it is at the last analysis his love, his wealth, his religion, his solace, and that to it he must return, for better or worse, again and again, so long as breath is in him. So it is with all the arts, with every craft, that come to man, as Dogberry said, by Nature. Yet among them all I, for one, know none other more sufficient and compensating to its votaries—nor is it in their own volition to cease from its pursuit."

THE LETTERS.

Dr. Rossiter Johnson then read letters of regret from those invited guests who could not be present, prefacing the reading with the remark that "We have many letters of regret and they are of two kinds, embroidered and plain. If it please you, I will read only those that are embroidered." Some of these were as follows:

I regret extremely that it will not be in my power to be present at the reception to Mr. Stedman on Thursday evening, the 6th of December. My duties here make it impossible.

I should be very glad to join you in this recognition of the eminent and honorable place which Mr. Stedman has gained in the history of American literature. He has had a great career, marked not only by extraordinary devotion to his art, and by a magnanimity of spirit and a lucidity of mind extremely rare in a writer who is at once poet and critic, and of the first force in both fields of literature. • • •

JOHN HAY.

My Dear Stedman: Owing to a severe cough, I am unable to be with you to-night. I regret my inability partly because I shall miss meeting so many of those who are properly my contemporaries, who were with us from the beginning of the Authors Club, but chiefly because I cannot personally take part in the event of the evening and the good cheer of renewed companionship. Most heartily do I join with the members of the club, the younger as well as the older, in their tribute to you of affection and appreciation, and in their congratulations on the completion of your "American Anthology." You have done more than any one of your generation toward a just and generous appreciation of American and English poetry; and in your own quiet way, or publicly, if the opportunity offered, you have been tirelessly helpful to young and as yet unknown authors, scores of whom gratefully remember you as the first to give them recognition and encouragement. All this, apart from your own direct contributions to our literature, which are known and honored wherever the English language is spoken.

To those who have come nearest to you and who have been permitted the pleasure and inspiration of your intimate friendship there comes on this occasion a feeling too deep for expression in words, and which I shall not attempt here to express. I have asked that this letter be read to you in the club's presence that it might be an open confession of my love and admiration and that, so far as possible, I might perceptibly join the host of friends that surround you to-night and wish for you all honor and happiness. H. M. ALDEN.

I beg to acknowledge the courtesy of invitation to the reception of 6th December night and much regret that the weight of years forbids acceptance; but I am glad you are to do honor to a man (Mr. Stedman) who has so long wrought wisely and well for America's literature. • • •

DONALD G. MITCHELL.

I have been laid up with a heavy cold and am still so far from well that I must deny myself the great pleasure of coming to the Authors Club reception for Mr. Stedman on the evening of the 6th. I had hoped to say or read something in expression of the pride and love we all have for him, but my sickness prevents my doing more than indirectly and informally joining in general gratulation upon the completion of his most admirable and signal labors in behalf of American and English poetry. W. D. HOWELLS.

I sincerely regret that I cannot express by my presence at the Authors Club this evening my affection for Mr. Stedman, and my appreciation of the significance of the nobly-conceived and patiently-executed work, which he has now completed by the publication of his "American Anthology." When I recall the sympathetic insight, the scholarly thoroughness, and the broad catholicity with which he has surveyed the field of English and American poetry, and reinforced his judgment by rich and ample illustration from the two literatures, I cannot escape the conviction that he has given us in these four volumes a searching and luminous record of the deepest life of the English-speaking peoples during the nineteenth century. He has traced their spiritual tendencies and estimated their imaginative achievements in that art which is the most sensitive and intimate of all the arts of expression. For such a service, entirely apart from his other work, we cannot too highly honor him, nor too generously recognize what he has done.

HAMILTON W. MABIE.

It is a cause of great regret to me that an engagement to meet with the Committee on the Revision of the Presbyterian creed, in Washington, will prevent me from joining, in person, in the expression of honor which the Authors Club is to make to Mr. Stedman on Dec. 6. But I want to have a little share, by letter, in that tribute. All of us love and respect Mr. Stedman, not only "for the work's sake," but also for the man's sake. He has done much; he has been more. In poetizing, in criticising, in anthologizing, and in best of all living, he has adorned his time and his country. May he live long to enjoy the fruits of his devotion to high ideals and hard work, and the gratitude of all who love poetry. HENRY VAN DYKE.

It pains me to think that I will not be at the Authors Club to-night, and join the others in congratulating you generally and in particular upon the accomplishment of your important work. But that to me is a detail. I should like to see you congratulated anyhow; just as much years ago, when you had kind words for fellows like myself much debated, as to-day, when we can acknowledge the generous and poetic mind within you.

JOHN LA FARGE.

POEMS BY RILEY AND JOHN PAUL.

After reading the letters, Dr. Johnson announced that a book had been received from James Whitcomb Riley for Mr. Stedman, with the accompanying poem written on the flyleaf:

TO EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN.

It is a various tribute you command,
O Poet-seer and World-sage in one!
The scholar greets you; and the student; and
The stoic—and his visionary son:
The painter, harvesting with quiet eye
Your features; and the sculptor, dreaming, too,
O classic marble figure, lifted high
Where Fame's immortal ones are waiting you.

The grizzled scientist; the young A. B.;
The true historian of force, of furce and grace;
The orator, of pure simplicity;
The journalist—the editor likewise;
The young war correspondent; and the old
War-seasoned General, with sagging eyes
And nerve and hand of steel and heart of gold;
The serious humorist; the blithe divine;
The lawyer, with that twinkling look he wears;
The bleak-faced man in the dramatic line;
The social lion—and the hulls and bears:
These—these, and more, O favored guest of all,
Have known your benefactions, and are led
To pay their worldly homage and to call
Down Heaven's blessings on your honored head.

Ideal to the utmost plea of art—
As real, to labor's most exacting need—
Your dual services of soul and heart
Enrich the world alike in dream and deed:
For you have brought to us, from out the mine
Delved but by genius in scholastic soil,
The blended treasures of a wealth divine—
Your peerless gift of song—your life of toil

When the reading of the letters and Mr. Riley's poem had been concluded, Mr. Eggleston announced that he had been requested to read a letter and a poem, both written for the occasion, by Mr. Charles Henry Webb. In the letter, Mr. Webb had expressly stated, and regretted, that he could not be present, and thereby, Mr. Eggleston averred, had convicted himself of falsehood by his own words, for his presence in those rooms at that time was quite apparent. Nevertheless, Mr. Eggleston read the letter and followed it with Mr. Webb's verses:

Dear Edmund, when I count the years
That over us have rolled,
It seems to me I must be young—
And only thou art old.
For, yet a private in the ranks,
At best I close the rear,
Whilst thou, bestarred, dost ride in front,
A mounted Brigadier.

So with our speec while thine ran free
As water laced with wine,
Mine showed a slight impediment—
None ever found in thine.
It seemed that thou on horseback wast,
And by thy side I walked—
Though when the monologue was done
I thought that I had talked.

Ah, dearest friend and poet best
Of all who woo the muse,
I am not envious, but to-night
Would I stood in thy shoes—
While all this mighty guild prese round
With words of love and praise,
None baying at thy heels, but all
Wreathing thy brow with bays.

And well they may, for hast thou not
Been generous to them,
To each extending the glad hand
And not thy garments' hem?
See Howells, and Morse—without the Re—
Old men, and wondering why
Thou stretchest too the helping hand
To youngsters such as I.

I'll tell them why the helping hand
And why the words of cheer—
Even to those who cannot write—
Thou canst not help it, dear.
'Tis just as Dr. Watts remarks,
Explainin' of the zoo,
Why lions and tigers bark and bite—
It is thy nature to—

Thy nature to be kind to all—
Women as well as men—
To see a Browning in a bore,
A pullet in a hen.
But blessings on thy frosty pow—
Whatever pow may be—
And, if this Authors' Club stood wine,
I'd drain a cup to thee.

Yet, if one have a catboat, dear,
Instead of a balloon,
Without some friendly slant of wind
He cannot make the moon.
So, while all other brows—and ears—
With laurel thou dost twine,
Although they be less prominent—
Oh, please remember mine.

And I will drink—when I get where
There's something fit to drink,
Instead of stuff as thin as thou'n
Each author brought his ink—
A cup to him who from his heart
Pours Poesy's choicest wine,
And as a critic never wrote—
Or thought—one unkind line.

MR. WINTER'S SPEECH AND POEM.

Mr. William Winter then made an eloquent and impressive speech. He told of his first youthful pilgrimage to the home of Longfellow and described eloquently the Cambridge he then knew. Continuing, he said:

"No realm of memory yields so much to comfort the heart and cheer the mind as the realm that is peopled with the poets of the past—that realm to which your honored guest, throwing wide the portals of song, has made the avenues of access so easy and so pleasant for the generations that are to follow him, and in which he himself is, and forever must remain, an immortal presence. From 'Bohemia' to 'The Blameless Prince', from 'Old Brown' to 'The Heart of New England,' from the unique, romantic, and tender ballad of 'Montagu' to the wild and pathetic rhapsody of 'The Lord's Day Gale,' from the Bryant ode to the gossamer, lace-like, exquisite loveliness of 'The Carib Sea,' from 'Alice of Monmouth'—with its wonderful, triumphant dirge—to the inspired and beautiful 'Ariel' that commemorates Shelley, the same pure stream of poetic thought and feeling flows steadily onward, and the same golden music sounds—the music of a noble mind and a passionate and tender heart, by nature consecrated to the service of beauty, and therefore to the highest welfare of mankind. The poet is not and must not be a teacher. He does not know, and he need not ask, in what way his spirit affects the world. Longfellow has told you that he found his wandering song in the heart of a friend. Emerson has told you that the sexton, ringing his church bell, knows not that the great Napoleon, far off among the Alps, has reined up his horse and paused to listen. The songs of the poet are sifted into the minds of men as the sunshine is sifted into the trees of the forest. In that way the muse of Stedman has become a loved companion to thousands of responsive souls; in that way his influence has wrought and his solid fame has grown. I sometimes think that the deadliest foe of creative impulse in poetry is the faculty of criticism, and that our poetic literature will never, as a whole, acquire the opulent vitality, bloom, and color of old English poetry until our authors cease to be self-conscious and critical, and—as that great poet, Richard Henry Stoddard, so often and so happily has done—yield themselves fully to their emotions. But the faculty of criticism, as Stedman has used it, becomes creative. Never have I found, in any of his pages, a narrow doctrine or a blighting word. Genius, he has said, is something that comes without effort and yet impels its possessor to heroic labor. No better word was ever said of it nor was ever a better example given of it than this which now we contemplate and acclaim, in the splendid fruition of his inspired, laborious, and grandly faithful life."

Mr. Winter closed his speech by reading the following lines, written by himself, and expressing "what we would like to say to-night to one most honored and most prized":

Comrade and friend, what tribute shall I render?
Roses and lilies bloom no more for me,
And naught remains of Fancy's squandered splendor
Save marish flowers that fringe the sombre sea.

But were each word a rose, each thought a blessing,
Each prayer a coronal of gems divine,
Honor and love and perfect trust confessing,
My words, my thoughts, my prayers should all be thine.

For thou hast kept the faith: thy soul undaunted,
Whatever storms might round thee rage and roll,
By one celestial passion still enchanted,
Has held its course right onward to its goal.

No sordid aim, no worldly greed, beguiling,
Could ever wile thy constant heart astray;
No vine-clad, Circean, Cyprian Muses, smiling,
Allure thy footsteps down the primrose way.

Thou hast not basely gathered thrift with fawning,
Nor worn a laurel that thou hast not won;
But, in thy zenith hour as in thy dawning,
The good thy nature willed thy hand has done.

On thy calm front the waves of trouble, broken,
Have backward surged and left thee regnant still;
Nor tempests of the soul nor griefs unspoken
Have e'er had power to shake thy steadfast will

Thy glory cannot die—for, were thy singing
E'en once to falter, through the domes of fame,
In one great organ burst, superbly ringing,
The whole poetic choir would chant thy name;

It will not falter: from the heart o'erflowing,—
With the glad freedom of the wild-bird's wing,
Where icy gales o'er sunlit seas are blowing,—
It sings because divinely born to sing.

No stain is on thy banner: grandly streaming,
Its diamond whiteness leads the tuneful host,
Forever in the front of honor beaming,
And they that know thee best must love thee most.

So rest: thy regal throne thou hast ascended;
The standards blaze, the golden trumpets ring,
And in one voice our loyal hearts are blended—
God bless the Poet, and God save the King!

MR. STODDARD'S REMARKS.

Mr. Richard Henry Stoddard paid his tribute to the poet in some interesting reminiscence. He said:

You are not fair to me, Mr. Chairman, nor considerate toward our comrades of the pen in calling me up now, for, after hearing all the fine things, the new things, and the true things, which the absent friends of Mr. Stedman have expressed in their letters of regret, I can hardly be worth listening to. They have divined and anticipated my feelings, they have bettered my best sentences, and left me nothing to say; or only a few words about my earliest recollections of Mr. Stedman. They date back a good while; as far back as the Summer or Autumn of 1850, and begin in a spacious old house in St. George's Place, of which Bayard Taylor and I were the tenants.

I was sitting in my chamber one afternoon, in an idle mood, thinking of nothing as hard as I could, when Taylor dropped in upon me, as was his constant custom in the afternoon, and told me, in the course of our chat, that he had met a new poet in the forenoon in the editorial rooms of The Tribune.

"A new poet," I said suspiciously; "what has he written?"

"'The Diamond Wedding' which you saw in yesterday's paper."

"Ah," I answered dubiously.

"And I have invited him to the house," Taylor continued. "For I know you will like him."

While we were talking there came a light tap at my door, and Taylor, who heard it before I did, hastened to open the door, and ushered in the new poet. He was modest, shy, timid, deferential, at least toward Taylor, who was what I hoped to be some day, a recognized American poet. He was right in thinking I would like Mr. Stedman. I took to him at once, if he will let me say so, as did the common friends of Taylor and myself—poets, painters, good fellows, fair women, and brave men; we all took to him, perceiving the strawberry mark—the coronet of genius, say—which declared him to be of our kith and kin, and opened our hearts to him, if not to the traditional long-loet son, to the just found young brother. He possessed two or three social virtues, which are not common, I am told, among young poets to-day. He never visited us too often; he never staid too long, and he never read to us, or expected us to read, his manuscript poetry. Unhelped, and unhindered, he wrote what he would, or what he could, for he had to earn his bread by writing other things than poems.

By the Spring of 1860, however, he had produced enough verse to make a little volume, "Lyrics and Idylls," which I thought then, and still think, the best first volume I ever read. It contained "The Diamond Wedding," and naturally, since his name was more widely associated with that than with anything else he had had published; but it contained more mature things than that piece of airy, good-humored persiflage, one being "The Ballad of Lager Bier," another that spirited, fiery, prophetic lyric, "How Old Brown Took Harper's Ferry." There was no money then for any one in poetry, whatever there may be for the popular favorites now. So Mr. Stedman continued his prose connection with The Tribune, and later, in the Winter and Spring of 1861, the same sort of connection with The World, of which I was then the literary editor. In fact as Junius he could be heard most as favorable to Lincoln's government. I don't know what Mr. Stedman wrote for The World, though I remember one day hearing over the counter of the publication office that he was writing a leader, and went to find out what the fuss was about.

"Why," answered an English critic, "Mr. Winter said Mr. Jefferson was the greatest actor living, and we agreed. Then Mr. Winter declared that Jefferson's performance in the mountain scene, where the phantoms appear, was the greatest piece of acting that ever was, or that ever would be to the end of time. Now, when it came to saying that there never would be such good acting again, even in the vast future, we hesitated, and—what do you think? Winter as good as told us we were all asses!"

"From that time I have held Mr. Winter as a critic in high esteem. There was only one Joe Jefferson, and there can never be another. There are some men that cannot be replaced. You may hear another Longfellow, another Lowell, another Whittier, but not another Wordsworth. Since Darwin's revelation of the predatory method of nature there can never arise another passionate lover of nature like Wordsworth. You can never have another Carlyle nor another Emerson; the conjunctions that molded them cannot recur. And now let me say to you writers of the younger generation: There sits Edmund Clarence Stedman; take a good look at him, for when he goes you will never see him again. New poets will come, new workers, but the place he occupied, the task he finely achieved, these are uniquely his own, and he has not left them for others."

STEDMAN'S SONNET.

The occasion of the evening was closed by Mr. Stedman's reading of a sonnet which he had written after reading Mr. Winter's chapter on "Beauty" in The Tribune and Elements of Poetry."

of song, a magnificent lyric, which was printed that day in the evening editions of The World, whence it flew with wings of lightning over every State and Territory of our disuniting, unhappy country.

Such was Edmund Clarence Stedman when I first made his acquaintance, and learned to know him as poet and man. I have known him, we have all known him since in other individual and intellectual characters, as a critic of poets and poetry, as editor of a great library of National literature, as a collector of English and American anthologies, and so on. But for me, while he commands my respect for the judgment, the scholarship, the industry, which the preparation of these works imposed upon him, I prefer to think of him, and care most for him, as the poet Stedman. He is one of the few, the very few, American poets who have written blank verse, not merely good, melodious blank verse, but harmonious, stately, majestic blank verse, which I take to be the highest achievement; the crowning glory, the imperishable monument of whatever is greatest in English poetry. He possesses another poetic gift which no other poet, American or English, ever possessed to the same extent, or with the same command of felicitous versatilities of the gift of smiles and tears, of a humor which is pathetic, of a pathos which is humorous, and the rare gift of wedding both, of making them "one and invisible" in an indissoluble and everlasting union.

Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Authors Club, I propose the health of the poet Stedman. Be good enough, therefore, to imagine me standing up sturdily here with a flagon in my hands and something bibulous in the flagon. Edmund Clarence Stedman! Not good health to him, but better health; not happiness, but more happiness, and not long life, but the longest of all possible lives! May he live as long as he wants to, for, however long it may be, it would not outlive our admiration and affection!

DR. CONWAY'S TRIBUTE.

Mr. S. V. White, following Mr. Stoddard, spoke of the other aspect of Mr. Stedman's career, of the love and esteem in which the poet is held in the active world of Wall Street, and Mr. Ripley Hitchcock, in a brief speech, dwelt upon the help, frequent and valued, Mr. Stedman had always been ready to extend to young writers. Following Mr. Hitchcock, Dr. Moncure D. Conway said:

"As an old witness of the work of Clarence Stedman, and of his fidelity to it, I unite in this welcome and testimonial. I regard his services to literature as unique. He recognized his particular task, marked it out for himself, finished it. I do not like the comparison of one writer with another, and estimating whether this or that is the greater. The important question is, What work has been done, and who has done it? Mr. Winter, whose [illegible] has been much [illegible] but I remember [illegible] seen in London, for [illegible] there always [illegible] The Times, and Mr.

"One of the Books of the Season."

"Mr. Charles W. Chesnutt," says the Boston Herald, (December 15, 1900,) "is not the first man to write strongly and impresaively of racial prejudices, but he is one of the first to write aympathetically and comprehensively from both viewpoints. 'The House Behind the Cedars,' (Houghton, Mifflin) is one of the books of the season, and one of the most vitally interesting books touching upon racial distinctions in the South that we have ever read.

"To begin with, Mr. Chesnutt writes with intense feeling and pity and also with a certain pride born of conscious distinction. He does not deal with the past, but with ever present realities which have grown out of the past. He does not take up his theme in a whining tone, ever protesting against the hard lines of fate; but in the simple directness of his story, in the quiet pity of the events he chronicles, he enlists one's full sympathies.

"Many questions arise in one's mind during the reading of the atory; some of them Mr. Chesnutt answers, others have implied answers, and still others are left to the imagination. Whatever the event, his characters are strong delineations of southern types—types peculiar to the South and southern in every accent and motion.

"The atory is passively a cry against the tyranny of custom which places a beautiful girl beyond the pale of marriage with the man who loves her, who ever finds himself questioning his sensitive superiority, and wondering how much is essential, how much is ignorance. Mr. Chesnutt writes with delicacy and kindred sympathy.

"As a story 'The House Behind the Cedars' is a brilliant performance—clear, to the point, keen in its interests, penetrating in its presentation of character; as a picture of some of the prevailing conditions of southern life, it shows vividly the hard and fast lines which are still drawn and some of the miseries which fate imposes upon those who, innocent themselves, must yet pay the penalty for the sins of their fathers.

"Prejudice is too strong for such a book as this, clever as it is in all its consecutive parts, to drown it; but there is no question as to the response in the light of compassion which it will receive or the surging pity which it arouses.

"The book is so uniform in its construction, so strong in its treatment, so vital in its interest, that one will sit up far into the night to read it through, oblivious of the fact that he is not a part of it, so potent are the touches of local color."

SUPPLEMENT TO

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SIXTEEN PAGES.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1900.

EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN.

The Authors Club did well to honor Mr. Stedman, with the cordial recognition of the fact that in so doing it honored itself, happy to avow modestly its devotion to the aims that have remained, through many trials and vicissitudes, those of the gifted poet and critic. The particular occasion of the tribute to Mr. Stedman, some of the most notable features of which our readers will find reported in full in the columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW this morning, was the completion of the "American Anthology."

This work, though it cannot be said to have the interest of much of like kind in a more fertile field done by Mr. Stedman, represents some of his most marked characteristics, and those that have made his service to letters of peculiar value. His painstaking attention to detail, his respect for the facts, however minute, so long as they are significant; his patient and conscientious use of his critical faculty—that one of the faculties which it is hardest to keep alert and active—and his capacity for sympathetic appreciation in widely different parts of the field of letters; all these are embodied in this work. In form a mere collection, in reality it is the fruit of sustained and trained intellectual effort. It is in labors of this sort, many of them, happily of wider and more succulent attraction, that Mr. Stedman has expended a large part of the time that he has been enabled to devote to literature.

In one sense it may be said that it is not creative. It is not, however, unfruitful, for it has the real and lasting effect of increasing the joy of his readers by teaching them what and how to enjoy. If we remember that in a land of public schools and of colleges by the hundreds the readers are not confined to the specially educated, as in England and in France, we can understand more clearly the rich influence of a mind like that of Mr. Stedman upon the much-taunted but incalculably important average mind of his countrymen. Nor must it be forgotten that, while his criticism is useful to the many, it is satisfying and helpful to the best informed. He does not ever descend to the level of the actual tastes of the multitude; he appeals to the latent faculty they have for higher tast and aids and directs it by the accepted high standards. He not only makes two blades of intellect grow where one had grown before, but he makes the growth sweeter and stronger.

This sort of work has crowded the days and taxed the energies of Mr. Stedman. And even this work has been done in hours wrested from an active and exacting business occupation, the steady pursuit of which has been made imperative by motives that he will pardon us for saying are nothing less than heroic. Yet it is to the joy of those who think alike as to the republic of letters—the only nobility permitted to our countrymen—that, in despite of the exhausting pressure of business and the demands of critical and editorial work hardly less exhausting, Mr. Stedman has made for himself the time and opportunity to write verse that stirs and thrills, gladdens and uplifts. Writing at intervals and irregularly, he has touched many chords, often with delightful delicacy and tenderness, sometimes with moving passion, not seldom with solemnity. We venture to reproduce here the few lines with which he prefaced a few years since his little volume of "Poems Now First Collected." They show the feeling that his friends find in his work, friends who cordially hope that for long years yet he may have joy in the renewed gift of the "bright spirit of song":

Thou—whose endearing hand once laid in sooth
Upon thy follower, no want thenceforth,
Nor toil, nor joy and pain, nor waste of years
Filled with all cares that deaden and subdue,
Can make thee less to him—can make thee less
Than sovereign Queen, his first liege, and his last Remembered to the unconscious dying hour.—
Return and be thou kind, bright Spirit of song.
Thou whom I yet loved most, loved most of all
Even when I left thee—I now so long strayed
From thy beholding! And renew, renew
Thy gift to me fain clinging to thy robe!
Still be thou kind, for still thou wast most dear!

MUNICIPAL EMBELLISMENT.

The article by Mr. Charles Milford Robinson upon another page pertains to a subject which it is perhaps too narrow to describe as "municipal embellishment." It is, in fact, the subject of making American communities, of all sizes, more attractive in the future than they have been in the past. For years the importance of the subject has been recognized by the formation in every village in which there has been any pretense of public spirit at all of a "Village Improvement Society." The villages which have paid attention to their communal housekeeping have found the advantage of their attention in becoming more favorite Summer resorts than the villages which have not. And this fact has come to be dimly recognized by all villagers within the radius of Summer resorts from the great cities, whether their own personal tastes lead them or not in the direction of communal embellishment. It is true that the principle is as sound about great cities as about small villages, that attractiveness attracts, and therefore pays. But it is not so readily recognized. If it were, the Naval Arch in New York would be well on the way toward perpetuation in durable granite or marble.

But we are all at any rate agreed that there should be no skimping in the embellishment of the National capital, in the beauty of which all Americans take interest and pride. The Attorney General has just been remonstrating, with justice, against the cheapening below the proper standard of the public buildings of Washington; of the new building for the Department of Justice. And the American Institute of Architects, at its convention in Washington, has been, with equal propriety, insisting upon the adoption of a comprehensive plan for the embellishment of the "Federal City."

The most important embellishment of Washington now under consideration is that for the development and completion of the "Reservation" from the Capitol to the Monument. The plans of Mr. PARSONS for that improvement, shown in maps and models at the room of the Senate Committee on the District, deserve attention and admiration for the skill and cleverness with which they have dissembled the fact that the communicating avenue cannot be made perpendicular to the axis of the Capitol, as well as for the elastic treatment of the park in general. The Pennsylvania Railroad is said to offer the chief obstacle to the adequate execution of the plan. But that is so eminently civilized a corporation that it is inconceivable it should not be willing and anxious to hear reason on such a subject, and to aid in solving the problem presented. It has been strongly suggested that the axis of the Park, as planned by Mr. PARSONS, should be also the axis of the new Memorial Bridge across the Potomac. To this suggestion it has been objected that the bridge has been established on the most economical line, as respects its construction, by reason of the minimum of foundation work there necessary. We do not think this consideration ought to prevail in such a matter. The bridge is a monumental and not merely a utilitarian project. The great improvement in the Capital that would be wrought by making it the prolongation of a monumental parkway is worth a considerable additional expenditure.

But, in any case, the American Institute of Architects deserves credit for directing public attention to this class of questions, which will not be settled less satisfactorily for being freely discussed. It is very certain that, taking the country through, the settlement of such questions has suffered, in the past, for lack of intelligent discussion.

LITERARY CONVERSATION.

These are the days of literary conversation. Perhaps many persons go calmly through the world without ever hearing any, but they must be hard of hearing. All sorts and conditions of men, and especially women, are reading all sorts and conditions of books, and they are all talking about them. And that is what constitutes literary conversation. It is a curious sort of talk, this literary conversation, notable chiefly for its complete absence of ideas. The one person says to the other, "Have you read 'The Fall of Lucifer'?" And the other answers unto the one, "Yes" or "No," according, at some times, to the truth, and at others to the condition of his conscience. If the answer is "Yes," the one says to the other, "Did you like it?" And the answer is again "Yes" or "No." Whereupon the one says to the other, "So" or "Neither did I." And then ensues a brief statement of the reason why the work was liked or not.

And this is the most intensely literary part of the conversation, for here you get at the secret of popular criticism. And do you think that you shall hear somewhat about the style of the author, about his power of description, his ability to sketch in clear lines a character, his mastery of the art of writing dialogue, or his cleverness in the handling of his incidents? If you do hear such, you have probably fallen upon professional commentators or authors. List not to them. Theirs is not literary conversation; it is mere shop talk. No; what you shall hear in ninety-nine cases of every hundred is the real literary conversation of the day: "I thought it awfully stupid." "Yes, so did I." Or, "Wasn't it exciting!" "Yes, especially that part where she ran away from him on the automobile."

Literary conversation, when raised to its Nth power, is likely always to be something of that type. One seldom discovers that people have gathered any new ideas from the books which they have read. No doubt this is because so many of them read books which do not contain any ideas. But surely there is something to be learned even from the romantic novels of our time to which our good Mr. Howells so warmly objects. But, reader, the formation of opinions is left too much to the reviewers. Conversation, when it has a broad idea behind it, is too often the product of a perusal of the criticism of the book. And at its highest, fiction, which is the topic of most so-called literary conversation, should teach us some lesson of human life, not by direct preachment, but by incident and character; and true literary conversation would concern itself with this lesson.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

There is no more important educational subject than that dealing with the co-operation between the public school and the public library. Each is an essential factor in the scheme of education, and the most strenuous efforts should be made toward formulating some practical and definite plan of co-operation.

This is not a new idea. Already considerable intercourse exists between the teachers and librarians in this city. Librarians are known to be very much in earnest over this particular extension of their work. This was made obvious at the Lake Placid meeting last September. It has been more recently brought to attention in the Library Club in this city. Librarians will not be satisfied until every school is systematically using a library and making it an indispensable adjunct in every department of its work.

A movement to establish a specific correlation was recently begun, the initiative having been taken by the New York Library Club through its Executive Committee. This committee met special committees from the High School Teachers' Association for a conference. The discussions and the decisions arrived at, together with the subsequent action of the Library Club in sustaining them, mean much for the future welfare and culture of the city.

This conference committee took as a basis for its discussion the relation that had already been established between the librarians and some of the teachers, and the excellent results that had come wherever such co-operation had existed. It was shown that only a few of the 10,000 teachers of the city made any use of the library in their school work, and that consequently only a comparatively small fraction of the total number of the pupils knew about the great world of books that was theirs for the asking. Before the members separated recommendations were adopted which, it is hoped, will lead to definite and concerted action on the part of both librarians and teachers that will be sustained long enough to bring about noteworthy results. These recommendations are comprehensive, and yet so simple and direct that no one can object to do his share in carrying them out.

It was recommended that a permanent notice be placed in every school building in the city giving the location of the nearest free library, or, in the case of the High School, of all the free libraries. Also, that the printed catalogues and bulletins of the libraries should be sent to every school for the use of the pupils. And as a yet more direct means of bringing the library to the attention of the pupils it was urged that the Principals of schools address their scholars several times during the year upon the value of the library in their work, and that they urge upon their teachers the necessity of advancing the interests of the children by promoting in every possible way intercourse between the school and the library. The teachers are an important factor in this plan of co-operation, and if they only realized how willing and great an ally the library could become in their work the whole question would be solved without further action or delay.

In order that the libraries may best meet the demands that they beg the schools to make upon them, the committee suggested that if it was practical the New York Public Library should be kept open during the evening, that teachers and others who are occupied during the day should have access to its treasures, which are now practically a sealed book to all except persons having leisure. And finally it was recommended that the various teachers' associations of the city and the New York Library Club make this question of the co-operation of the libraries and the schools a fixed subject for discussion at stated intervals, and that each association be represented at the discussions of the other.

The value of a public library consists not in its possession, but in its use by the public. The school is the only agency by which the people can be trained to use libraries, and if the teachers are equal to their opportunities the new century will bring an intellectual awakening. Until the effort has been persistently made we shall not know how great a force is vested in the public library for enlightening and uplifting the people, by bringing them while children into an understanding of its resources. The children are the library's greatest opportunity. They are to be the readers of the future, and if they can be trained to the use of the library there is gained not only more incentive for good school work, but a knowledge of the use of books as a whole, which will inevitably prepare the way for that later and more potent self-education that comes with the reading of good books.

Some plan of co-operation could also be most profitably arranged between the schools and the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Natural History, both of which should become extraordinary auxiliaries in the work of the public schools. If teachers would systematically take their pupils there and study the collections intelligently the pupils would not only secure a large outlook, but a generation would be trained to appreciate the value of these collections and to use them to some purpose.

As the soldier in Andersen's fairy tales could strike his tinder-box once, twice, or thrice and summon to his aid at critical times his stalwart helpers, one or all of them, so the children of this city, when they leave school, should have in their possession the power to make use of at any time the three great educational forces—their knowledge gained from the schools, the public libraries, and the public museums.

THE TURNING OF THE WORM.

The brutal cynicism displayed in the article "Editing a Magazine," which was published in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW Nov. 24, must have brought despair to the hearts of all unknown writers. Magazine editors have announced that they were always on the lookout for a "new talent," for something "fresh," "novel," "original"—that their great aim was to "discover unknown genius"—to make "literary finds." But the editor in question confesses that "the chief duty of a successful magazine editor is to keep literary aspirants out and to get celebrities in." This is the most disheartening utterence that I have ever read in a long and varied literary experience.

This was not the policy or the practice of Charles Dickens, George William Curtis, Charles A. Dana, William Blackwood, and it is not the practice of Frank A. Munsey, one of the most successful of living editors. William Blackwood, who was one of the most acute editors that ever lived, read all the manuscripts that were sent to his office. He knew the value to a periodical of new blood and fresh talent. He was constantly looking for clever new contributors; so also was Dickens. John Blackwood never rejected a good article for lack of space, nor accepted a bad one to fill up.

The custom now practiced by some magazine editors of accepting articles on the fame of the contributor rather than on the merit of the contribution is having its natural result in the present depreciation of magazine literature. I noticed in a recent announcement of attractions for the new year in a widely circulated periodical the names of Mrs. Leland Stanford, Miss Helen Gould, and Lady Burdett-Coutts. Now, although these ladies are well-known possessors of wealth, they have never been known to possess literary talent. Their names are undoubtedly worth much at the bottom of a check, but how much in a literary sense at the bottom of an article?

Many years ago Mr. William Dean Howells claimed that he "discovered" Henry James. Well, speaking from a critical point of view, I do not think the "discovered" was worth the discovery. But who "discovered" Mr. Howells? If no one else claims that honor, his discovery must belong to himself, for did he not in The Century Magazine make the extraordinary discovery that the "school" of Mr. James and himself had made fiction "a finer art than it was with Dickens and Thackeray?" The Saturday Review of London said this criticism "might make a stuffed bird laugh."

One thing "confessed" by the magazine editor of "wide experience" is that "it pays for an author to make the acquaintance of the editor, for it stands to reason that an editor knowing personally an author, will give his matter more consideration than he would the matter of one whom he does not know." That is as true as the Gospel. I have known authors who deliberately and systematically carry this advice out in their own practice. One, especially I have "in my mind's eye—a man who died several years ago. He wrote stories, long and short, which I have never found any person, man or woman, able to read; yet, by cultivating the friendship of editors—inviting them to his house, entertaining them at his home and at his club—he made it impossible for them to refuse his unreadable stories. I do not care to mention this gentleman's name, for he was a lovable old man personally, but I would not hesitate to name all the editors whose friendship for the author made them publish his worthless stories. I will say, just here, that they were the editors of some of the leading American magazines.

Discouraged by the appalling revelations of the magazine editor who wrote the article in THE SATURDAY REVIEW, the unknown must empty their ink bottles in the sink, throw their paper into the waste basket, and employ their pens in keeping books instead of writing them, for does not the American poet say—

While the polished pen scarce can earn a garret,
Double entry points to peace and claret.

I have written this article, not in my own behalf, for I have been admitted into the leading American periodicals—daily, weekly, and monthly—but in behalf of many clever literary aspirants who need encouragement.

ESSAYISTS NOT DEAD, BUT DISCOURAGED.

Now that a new magazine is well launched as a special record for "the men who do things," may we not hope that the older magazines will return to their first love, and give us more belles-lettres? There is always a class to be charmed by lovely Lamblike pieces, such as "The Man with One Book" and "Dear Old Books." An even larger class is beginning to awaken to the importance and dignity of criticism.

We are told that essays are out of fashion. Well, then, let us make them the fashion. It is said that the essayists are all dead, but we think we could name two or three. Rather are they discouraged and dismayed at the hurrying procession that strives to push them aside. In the name of everything that is noble and beautiful this must not be.

Macaulay, in this practical, cynical age, when the emotional provokes a smile and when shafts of ridicule are lightly cast and all too greatly feared; when the spirit of the Pilgrims is still so powerful that we are tearing down our sculptors' dream as rubbish, we think it takes far more courage to praise than to blame.

Early New York Maps and Views

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

In an article in THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Dec. 15, written by Mr. J. Lee Phillips, on "Early New York Maps and Views in the Library of Congress," which is in part a review of a monograph of mine recently published, and in part a praiseworthy effort to draw public attention to the cartographical treasures of the Congressional Library, Mr. Phillips objects to my "positive statement as to only one or two copies of certain maps and engravings being known, as it is misleading to students and does not show sufficient research."

After an examination of some of the 60,000 maps, and several thousand atlases that the Library of Congress contains, Mr. Phillips is able to report that he has discovered two out of the seven maps and engravings which I enumerate as of excessive rarity—namely:

The Duyckinck map of New York City and the Burgis "Prospect of the Colledges in Cambridge in New England." So far he has not found, or, if he has, he does not so state, an original Bradford map of New York City, a "Rip van Dam Church," a Burgis "View of New York," a "Castle William in the Harbour of Boston," or even a copy of that more modern and comparatively common print, a "North-West View of Nassau Hall," (Princeton College.)

I trust that Mr. Phillips will continue his examination of the thousands upon thousands of maps and atlases in the Congressional Library, and I shall be among the first to congratulate him if he should have the good fortune to bring to light more of the rarities mentioned in my book, and so prove the literary collections of the Nation to be richer than I had surmised.

This little brochure of mine upon the "Bradford Map" was written expressly to correct and counteract the effect of a misstatement made by Mr. John Fiske in his book, "The Dutch and Quaker Colonies in America." Referring in his table of contents to the map, which appears in Vol. II., Page 238 of this work, Mr. Fiske writes:

To this Mr. Fiske has added a footnote, in which he subsequently wrote me he did not believe he would claim to have, (which he subsequently wrote me he did not,) an impression of the map from the original copper plate of William Bradford. I thereupon wrote Mr. Fiske to the effect that the foregoing statement over his name, if erroneous, (as I thought he would find upon investigation that it was,) was calculated to do much harm, as it would aid book and print dealers to either wittingly or ignorantly deceive their customers with the numerous copies of the Bradford map that are in circulation, from the lithograph made by George Hayward in 1834 down to the reproductions of recent times, printed and published by the hundred for advertisement and other purposes. These have little value, but they are being continually palmed off upon the public as genuine impressions from the original copper plate of William Bradford.

In his very proper solicitude that students should not be misled by careless writers like myself, it is passing strange that Mr. Phillips should have preserved absolute silence in regard to the error made by Mr. Fiske to which my monograph called attention, and which Mr. Phillips knows to be a misstatement of a misleading and harmful character. This is straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.

Mr. Phillips's statements in relation to the Visscher map and the views in Adraen vander Donck's Beschryvinge, I am disposed to take "cum grano salis" until I have an opportunity to examine for myself the copies of the same in the Library of Congress to which he refers. These old books, maps, and prints are not always what upon their face they appear to be.

The Nordhoff Bindery Exhibit.

The Evelyn Nordhoff Bindery held its second annual exhibition of books and leatherwork at 114 East Twenty-third Street on Dec. 14 and 15. Fourteen volumes were on view, the bindings of which were executed by Miss Florence Foote, who continues the work inaugurated by the late Miss Nordhoff. A few of the bindings shown in the exhibition were executed by Miss Foote at the Doves Bindery under the eye of Mr. Cobden-Sanderson. Some of the more interesting of the bindings were as follows:

"The Life of William Morris," two volumes, bound in brown pigskin, with conventionalized heart and other motifs, Cobden-Sanderson style, done in blind tooling, with "Gaufred" edges. Rossetti's "The House of Life," in brown levant morocco, with powdered gold border. "Lyrics of Brotherhood" was in apple-green levant morocco, with wild rose border tooled in gold. Mrs. Browning's "Sonnets from the Portuguese" appeared in brown levant morocco, with all over blind tooling. An English Prayer Book had a binding of white levant morocco, with blind tooling that gave the effect of ivory in finish. The poems of William Watson were in brown crushed levant morocco, with delicate blind tooling, and Mabie's "In the Forest of Arden" was in a binding of brown levant, with border introducing blind tooling, red floral mosaics, and gold dots. Examples of the work of Miss Chapin and Miss Matthiessen, advanced pupils at the bindery, also appeared in a separate case.

In connection with the bindery exhibit there was also shown under the patronage of the Guild of Arts and Crafts, hand-woven fabrics by Miss Marie Little, Sabatos rugs by Mrs. Douglas-Volk, native grass baskets by Miss Sarah Francis, brasses by Mrs. C. E. Busck, and homespun "kivers" made by the Kentucky women of Berea College. Among those who are prominent in connection with the present management of the Nordhoff Bindery are Dr. Edward Everett Hale, Paul Leicester Ford, George H. Gilman, Mrs. Richard M. Hunt, Mrs. William G. Choate, Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, and Mr. Samuel P. Avery.

Mr. Barry's Story in The Smart Set.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

Will you be kind enough to let me explain in your columns that the novel entitled "The Congressman's Wife," which appears in the January number of The Smart Set, with my name attached, is not printed as I wrote it, and is published as it stands against my protest? When it came to me in proof I found that the editor, Mr. Arthur Grissom, had made an appalling number of verbal changes, all unnecessary, many trifling or silly, several ludicrous, two containing errors of speech. In one instance the original phrase has been restored; but the other changes have all been retained. Some of them I did not object to, they were of so little consequence. I did wonder, however, why these should have been made at all. Three or four seemed to me to be improvements, though the language first used had adequately conveyed the meaning. The quality of the editing may be judged from this change. Where one of the characters, a young graduate of Harvard, a Northerner, had remarked, "Well, I guess it's all over," the editor made him say "It looks like it's all over." When I objected to this phrase and to other phrases, Mr. Grissom declared that he had merely edited the manuscript according to the characters of The Smart Set." I then failed to withdraw the story, but Mr. Grissom refused to give it up.

THE PUBLISHER'S POINT OF VIEW.

"The World's Work" for January will be published on Thursday, December 27th. Like the numbers which have preceded it, the January issue is full of vital interest and vigorous life. The subscription season is just beginning, but the receipt already of about three hundred paid subscriptions daily shows how fast the magazine is finding true friends. Readers of The Times are invited to join this goodly company—terms $3.00 a year.

The December number of "The Monthly Review," which we publish in association with Mr. John Murray, of London, contains a remarkable article by the Earl of Rosebery, "The Love Affairs of William Pitt," with many hitherto unpublished letters. For sale by newsdealers generally.

The eleventh thousand of Mrs. Seton-Thompson's delightful book, "A Woman Tenderfoot," is just ready. There are 200 illustrations and for a Christmas present its attractions are obvious.

Miss J. L. Gilder's "The Autobiography of a Tom Boy," is one of those fortunate books which is read both by grown up and children. The illustrations, by Mrs. Shinn, are marvellously appropriate. The third thousand has been exhausted. $1.25.

The English papers are teeming with dissensions and speculations about "An English Woman's Love Letters." The Academy has set aside a space for free speech of pros and cons. One correspondent thus closes her letter:

"I write chiefly out of sympathy with the Englishwoman, and to save her piteous little ghost from the additional pain of hearing the reviews speak with harshness and injustice of the man whom she loved so passionately, and who, I fondly believe, did not long survive her."

A second large edition of the book will be ready next week.

"The Furniture of Our Forefathers," which is the only satisfactory book on antique furniture published, is printed in this edition: 50 copies on Japan, with inserted hand-painted colored plates, price, $200; 100 large paper with plates on mounted Japan tissue, $64, and the regular edition $16. The success of the book has been immediate, showing the well-defined demand which existed. A circular on request.

Reaping and singing by herself,' while another of the poems is entitled 'The Highland Girl.'

"The quotation in the two editions of Wordsworth I have (one of them edited by Richard Henry Stoddard) has the word 'perhaps' instead of 'perchance,' thus:

'Will no one tell me what she sings?
Perhaps the plaintive numbers flow
For old, unhappy far-off things
And battles long ago.'"

A Poem that Makes One Glad.

JUNE MARSH PARKER, Detroit, Mich., writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "I am surprised that more is not said about the fine poem in the December Scribner—'Gloucester Moors,' by William Vaughn Moody. Can it be that it will fall unnoted by a public that has so much to say about the 'poor stuff called poetry given in the magazines'? Now I am wishing that you would ask your readers to answer the following question (put it in any form you wish): Which one is 'the' poem of the leading monthlies for December? And let us see how many will name 'Gloucester Moors.' Ask for the line or verse liked best of the poem named. I confess to never having heard of my poet before. I know nothing about him, but when I read those verses I said, 'Here is a poet—the real thing.' Let us give thanks. And not one word about the poem have I seen. Call them out, your readers—and if I am the only one to name 'Gloucester Moors,' I shall be surprised and disappointed."

The December number of Pets and Animals contains valuable hints about the keeping of pets, which has added interest through the illustrations. It has an attractive cover design by Burton E. Ashley, and the opening article, entitled "Dogs," is illustrated by [illegible] Old St. Bernard, [illegible] Dog, [illegible] Dog, [illegible] Dog

EDWARD FITZ-GERALD.

A Biography of the Englishman Who Made Omar Famous.*

Starting with a prejudice against the present life of FitzGerald, simply because it seemed that so reserved a man as the Laird of Little Grange should have been left to the seclusion he always courted, yet upon a careful reading of the 350 pages which go to make up the volume there is revealed such a wealth of small details and such an absence of merely gossipy comment upon certain episodes in FitzGerald's life—such, for instance, as his marriage and consequent separation—that we lay down the book feeling it contains nothing the world has not a perfect right to know and that our estimate of the man must always be fuller and more just by reason of the added detail contained in the present volume.

Mr. Glyde tells us his information has been largely obtained from private sources, as well as from biographical articles and the published memoirs and letters of FitzGerald and others, the latter being open to us all. A glance over the names of those from whom most of the information concerning FitzGerald personally was obtained—Crabbe, Allen, Purcell, Lawrence, Woolner, Donne, Bernard Quaritch, and the Mr. Fox who was for three years FitzGerald's boy reader, will show how valuable must be the point of view of these:

> Men and women who knew him well, who could describe his habits, who were as familiar with his generosity as with his eccentricity, who knew how tenderly he was beloved by his intimate friends, how sensitive he was to their sufferings, and how deeply he felt their loss.

The volume also contains an introduction by Mr. Edward Clodd, at one time President of the Omar Khayyam Club of London and author of a privately printed "Pilgrimage to FitzGerald's Grave," the latter being partly incorporated in the volume. Mr. Clodd thinks that since Mr. Aldis Wright—to whom the world should ever be grateful—decided to publish FitzGerald's letters, which he thinks their writer had never contemplated, the thread of narrative on which they are strung is quite too slight, some of the letters containing references more or less cryptic, which either need explanation or should have been excluded from the published volume, had it been thought best to keep the public in entire ignorance of certain matters alluded to. Mr. Clodd thinks, and quite wisely so, that Mr. Glyde's book will do much good in clearing away the mystery surrounding FitzGerald's marriage to Lucy Barton.

The facts concerning this marriage, as presented by Mr. Glyde, are of the simplest. He says it was merely a case of a wide difference in habits and disposition; the one being neat and orderly almost to the degree of prim fussiness about her home and her own and her husband's dress; the other careless about all domestic arrangements and utterly regardless of dress. Unused to conforming to the conventions of life, FitzGerald had lived too long as a bachelor, a student, and a bohemian to change his methods, even had love rather than a cordial liking been at the bottom of the marriage.

Bernard Barton was a widower with this one daughter, Lucy. A poet among the Quakers before the days of a Whittier, he was lionized in his neighborhood in consequence, seeing much good society, through which his daughter, who had much natural ability, became a cultured woman with a manner that enabled her to hold her own at all times. Bernard Barton's salary and pension, together with the income derived from the sale of his poems, enabled them to live comparatively well, but this income was so diminished at his death that Miss Barton was compelled to sell the pictures and furniture, which, in addition to the publication of a volume of "Selections" from her father's poems, to which FitzGerald's biographical sketch of Bernard Barton was prefixed, enabled her to meet all necessary expenses. After a few months she entered the family of Mr. Hudson Gurney of Keswick Hall, Norwich, as chaperon and companion to two young women members of the family, remaining with them for seven years, in fact until preparation for her own marriage became necessary. Lucy Barton, then nearly fifty years of age, was quietly married at Chichester, where she had relatives, to Edward FitzGerald, in November, 1856, the honeymoon being spent at Brighton, followed by a residence in London. A feeling of discontent came about gradually, and before many months had elapsed a formal separation was agreed upon, Mrs. FitzGerald's allowance from her husband's estate being a generous one. This she enjoyed for many years, dying recently at the age of ninety. A woman, a mutual friend of both, seems to have hit upon the true solution:

> The marriage was a mistake, both so clever, both so good and honorable, but neither fitted, I think, for married life. Each made to live alone, I should say, from peculiar disposition, good as they were, clever people are not always the best in home life.

If ever there was a case of "success is in the silences" it is shown in the life of the man who, indeed, counted among his dearest friends so many who attained a high position in the world, but who lived so quietly that the majority of his neighbors in the little Suffolk town of Woodbridge, where most of FitzGerald's life was spent, looked upon him as an eccentric bohemian, while others, Charles Keane tells us, even considered him daft.

Mr. Glyde touches interestingly upon the main facts of FitzGerald's life, which are, of course, familiar in these days to all lovers of the letters and the man's charming, if whimsical, personality. Although it must be confessed that there are certain small details set down in the present volume which would point to the fact that some of his little peculiarities might be annoying to say the least, as, for instance, when he invited, and not for the first time, a Mr. James Read, an old bookseller of Ipswich, with whom he often enjoyed long talks, to dine with him. Mr. Read drove over at the appointed hour and day, to be told by the housekeeper that Mr. FitzGerald could not be seen, the latter writing him the next day: "I saw you yesterday when you called, but I was not fit for company, and I felt I could not be bothered," which Mr. Glyde rightly thinks equals any of the whimsicalities of George Borrow.

The author also gives much detailed information as to the formation and gradual development of FitzGerald's many friendships; his life at the university, including the gatherings in the different undergraduates' rooms every evening, where, over coffee and tobacco, the talk and fun waxed high. Lord Houghton, in an address delivered at the opening of "The New Cambridge Union" in 1866, says of the men who were FitzGerald's associates there: "The members of that generation were, for the wealth of their promise, a rare body of men, such as this university has seldom contained"; a glance at the names of a few of his friends, Allen, Thackeray, Spedding, Trench, Alford, Merivale, Blakesley, Charles Buller, Spring-Rice, and many others, well bears out Lord Houghton's statement. A far from uninteresting portion of Mr. Glyde's volume is the attention paid to more or less detailed accounts of some of the men whose names are familiar to us through FitzGerald's letters, and yet with whose careers American readers, at least, are not entirely familiar. The Tennysons and Carlyles were friends of a later period, while all through FitzGerald's life the new friendships which meant so much to him were constantly being formed.

Mr. Glyde's account of the awakening of FitzGerald's interest in Spanish and Persian translations will be found very interesting, including the account of Prof. Cowell's accidental discovery in a mass of uncatalogued Oriental manuscripts of Sir William Ouseley's in the Bodleian of a most beautiful Persian manuscript, written on thick yellow paper, with purple black ink, profusely powdered with gold. Cowell recognized it as an original manuscript of a poem by Omar Khayyam, of which he knew nothing; was much attracted by it, as was FitzGerald, who visited the Bodleian to examine it. Later in the same year, 1856, Prof. Cowell made a transcript of it for his own and FitzGerald's use, the latter being so pleased with the poem that for a while it was his constant companion.

Mr. Glyde's account of FitzGerald's home life is interesting and curious—small rooms so crowded with books and pictures that even the chairs and floor were occupied, and it would seem he must have taken his meals standing. His love of books was as strong as his distaste for society; his library not being large, but containing books in many languages and on a wide variety of subjects, and even his eccentric habit of occasionally pulling leaves or whole sections out of a book which he considered mere padding which the volume would be better without, would hardly detract from one's pleasure in the possession of one of his old treasures, containing, perhaps, the charming book plate designed for him by Thackeray, with its angel "a trifle unsteady on her feet." Another of FitzGerald's queer habits was the drawing of a considerable amount of money from the bank for current expenses, which, banknote by banknote, were tucked away between the leaves of various books which stood in a certain case. After FitzGerald's death about £40 was thus rescued by his executors. Of this love of books Mr. Glyde says:

> Sitting in the room in which some of his favorite volumes were stored he would take down a volume for the fifth or sixth time, and was as well pleased as if he were having a hearty shake of the hand from a dear old friend. He had as much affection for his books as he had for a dog or any living animal. He divided them, as he divided men, into sheep and goats, and those which he selected were to him not dead things; they spoke to him of men and times of the past, which had left their impression to enrich the present. His favorites were those in which the writers were transparent. Men and women who exhibited themselves in the printed page, and with whom he could hold sweet communion, as if they were bodily present in his room. * * * Books full of passion and tenderness were to him pearls of great price. Even a cursory perusal of his letters will show how extensive was his reading, how discriminating was his criticism, and a library which contained side by side John Henry Newman's "Parochial Sermons," "The Quatrains of Omar Khayyam," Montaigne's "Essays," and "John Wesley's Journal" shows his catholicity as well as eclectic taste.

The only portion of the book which seems unnecessary is the transcript of FitzGerald's will in an appendix, possibly added, however, to show how the families of old friends were remembered. This is followed by a letter from Lucy FitzGerald, written in 1865, which gives a very pleasant glimpse of the latter; followed by a partial bibliography, while a brief index adds to the usefulness of this volume, which is attractively printed on paper of a pleasing yellowish tint, but poorly and unattractively bound.

Mr. Glyde's volume can hardly fail to add to our knowledge of FitzGerald, the man, and will be sure to send his readers to the letters themselves, with fresh appreciation of the delightful personality of the man behind them.

THE LIFE OF EDWARD FITZGERALD. By John Glyde. With an Introduction by Edward Clodd, sometime President of the Omar Khayyam Club. 1900. Portrait, Preface, and Introduction. Pages xvi.-359. Chicago and New York: Herbert S. Stone & Co.

Scribner's for January

A RICH NUMBER

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE begins the new year and the new century with a particularly characteristic and individual number, unusually rich in text and in illustrations.

RUSSIA OF TO-DAY

Mr. Henry Norman's third article in his series of "RUSSIA OF TO-DAY" describes the Caucasus, and the illustrations reveal the extraordinary scenic beauties of that country. Many readers will say that this is the best of Mr. Norman's notable articles thus far published. The author has certainly done no better writing than his description of the scenes and people of this romantic region.

MODERN ATHENS

Another article, and one quite different from the ordinary descriptive paper, has for its subject "MODERN ATHENS." It is by George Horton, for some years Consul at Athens and an authority on modern Greece, its people and languages. It shows in every line long familiarity with the scenes described and an affectionate interest in the subject. The many rich illustrations, by C. K. Linson, are the result of a visit to Athens made specially for the work.

HENRY JAMES

A third article, also descriptive, but quite different in character, is that by Mr. Henry James on "WINCHELSEA, RYE AND 'DENIS DUVAL,'" which tells of the quaint old double town of which Mr. James is now a resident, and which forms the scene of Thackeray's unfinished novel. It is illustrated by E. C. Peixotto.

THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN

Of the stories in the number, "No Sinecure," by E. W. Hornung, is especially noteworthy as the first of the NEW CRACKSMAN STORIES, of which announcement has already been made. It reintroduces the incomparable Raffles with his friend and partner in intrigue, the faithful Bunny, in a wonderful succession of hairbreadth escapes. The illustrations are by F. C. Yohn.

THE ARMIES IN CHINA

Mr. Thomas F. Millard, whose brilliant articles in SCRIBNER'S on the Boer War will be remembered by magazine readers, has been in China for some time acting as a correspondent to SCRIBNER'S. The January number contains an article of marked interest and distinction, comparing the armies in China and reviewing military conditions there. It is illustrated from photographs taken by the author.

STORIES AND POEMS

There is a remarkable story of adventure on the China coast, called "THE PLAGUE SHIP," written by Stephen Bonsal. There is also a story by Mary Tappan Wright, and poems by Robert Bridges, Grace Ellery Channing, and Marguerite Merington.

RODIN, THE FRENCH SCULPTOR

Special note should be made of Mr. W. C. Brownell's critical article on the French sculptor RODIN, an art contribution of unusual distinction, which is illustrated by reproductions of a number of Rodin's most significant works.

ADVERTISING DISFIGUREMENT

An interesting article by Arthur Reed Kimball considers the subject of the disfigurement of nature in its various manifestations as observed in several countries and tells of the efforts that have been made to check it.

MR. HOWELLS.

His Personal Recollections.*

In Mr. Howells's "Literary Friends and Acquaintance," which covers his personal recollections for the past forty years, will be found a book of peculiar charm, the reason for this charm being probably not hard to discover. United to the worldly wisdom and experience gathered during long years of a literary life, in which he has passed through many phases—journalist, magazine writer, foreign representative, editor, poet, essayist, and successful novelist—he yet unites with this side of his character—a point of view and its result shown in many a volume of an autobiographical nature—the much less seldom seen freshness of youthful impression and a vivid recollection of the older men and women of the literary world and the strong influence they exerted upon the young Howells, of whom the present man says:

> If there was any one in the world who had his being more wholly in literature than I had in 1860, I am sure I should not have known where to find him, and I doubt if he could have been found nearer the centres of literary activity than I then was, or among those more purely devoted to literature than myself. I had been for three years a writer of news paragraphs, book notices, and political leaders on a daily paper in an inland city, and I do not know that my life differed outwardly from that of any other young journalist who had begun, as I had, in a country printing office, and might be supposed to be looking forward to advancement in his profession or in public affairs. But inwardly it was altogether different with me. Inwardly I was a poet, with no wish to be anything else, unless in a moment of careless affluence I might so far forget myself as to be a novelist. I was, with my friend J. J. Pratt, the half author of a little volume of very unknown verse, and Mr. Lowell had lately accepted and had begun to print in The Atlantic Monthly five or six poems of mine. Besides this, I had written poems and sketches and criticisms for The Saturday Press of New York, a long-forgotten but once very lively expression of literary intention in an extinct bohemia of that city, and I was always writing poems and sketches and criticisms for our own paper.

Mr. Howells adds a short prefatory note in which he most delicately disclaims all idea of portraying those intellectual men and women of their actually work, but of the impression they made upon him, and of the influence they exerted upon him. This impression, this influence, is the keynote of the book, and it is struck with a delicacy and a sureness that is a delight to the reader. Not only does it sound on every page, and the volume closed with not only a wealth of new facts added to our knowledge of the men and literature of the past, but, what is much more important, with a feeling of getting closer to the personality of the writers described, and especially so in their younger days—a time when all men and women are most thoroughly differentiated and when it is possible to approach most clearly to the real being.

The book contains a wealth of illustrations, which adds greatly to its interest, its pictures being drawn not only from familiar sources, but containing so many which seem practically unknown to us, including photographs of the young writers whose faces as older men and women we are perfectly familiar with, as well as of others whose personality and appearance are almost unknown to the general public. Among these will be found a most attractive portrait of Mr. Howells, taken in 1860, and of E. C. Stedman, of William Allen Butler, and of R. H. Stoddard and his clever wife, at probably about the same period. We see also the interior of the celebrated bohemian café, Pfaff's, where the young Howells is grasping the hand of a Whitman whose features are recognizable indeed, but whose hair, mustache, and beard seem too carefully arranged for the Whitman of the later days. Hale, Hildreth, and Theodore Winthrop are also shown in interesting portraits, while that of Francis J. Child will be found particularly interesting by many. Best of all, however, is the first likeness we have ever seen of a man whose more celebrated brother's personality has cast his shyer self almost completely into the shade—John Holmes—a short, stout figure, helped out with a cane, and a grizzled head with features turned to win the heart rather than the eye of the beholder. In one of his own eyes there was a cast of such winning humor and quaintity that it was the thing more than any beauty could have done, and the sweetest sky laugh in the world went with this cast. It is strange how strong an appeal this little-known brother of the Autocrat seems to make through it is possible to approach most clearly to the real being.

Other illustrations and descriptions include views of the famous Old Corner Book Store, where so many celebrated feet have trod, and of the beautiful larch walk at the "Wayside," Concord, the trees bordering it said to have been planted by Hawthorne himself. Although not usually a friend to extra-illustration, this volume suggests itself as peculiarly adapted for the insertion of a few rare prints and autograph letters referring to the subjects therein treated, and collectors might do well to secure sheets uncut for this purpose.

When it comes to the text itself, one interesting subject succeeds another so closely that it is hard to decide what to speak of first. The volume is divided into eight chapters, three of which are devoted to interesting studies of Lowell, Holmes, and, best of all, "the whilr Longfellow," in which many a little personal touch will be found, throwing new light upon these men, not so much from the literary standpoint as that of neighbors and friends, and as to their influence upon those students and neighbors with whom they were thrown in the daily happenings of ordinary life.

Mr. Howells rapidly reviews the literary conditions existing throughout the entire country in his younger days and the personal impressions made upon him by the celebrities of the time. Bayard Taylor, so prominent in those days as traveler, lecturer, and poet—his novels coming later—was the first celebrity—a disappointing one—to be met, although later he came to know him for what he was.

The most interesting episode in Mr. Howells's first visit to New England is the haste with which he sought the Old Corner Book Store and his glance over its treasures, before being ushered into the presence of both Mr. Ticknor and Mr. Fields, the latter of whom was just looking over the magazine sheets of a poem by Howells, into which a fatal error had crept in its printing. The story of its tragic effect upon the young poet, its being ordered reprinted, and his relation of Mr. Ticknor's counting out from a bag of bald-eagles the payment for this poem is so well told that we have the feeling we must have been present at this interview. The interior view accompanying it is delicious. Mr. Ticknor, bag of gold pieces in hand, the five half-eagles lying on his desk, is looking at the young man, who is sitting very primly and properly on a chair in the room, a room in which the whole attitude, portraying what an honored and at the same time genial time looked forward to literature really was.

Perhaps, after all, the most valuable portion of the book is that which deals with the personality of the writers described, and especially so in their younger days—a time when all men and women are most thoroughly differentiated and when

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.—The two new bibliographical societies in England seem to have quickly reached a very flourishing condition. The Type Fac Simile Society, whose membership list was filled almost at once, has already issued its first publication, a handsome set of forty-two plates, while the other association, the Bibliographical Society of Lancashire, is even more energetic. Mr. Gordon Duff has prepared for the society an interesting paper upon "English Books Printed Upon Vellum," while Mr. J. P. Edmond is preparing for publication a work he has long had in hand, notes upon books printed by Sweynheim and Pannartz. The first book to be published by this society will be a fac simile of a unique copy of Caxton's "Commemoratio Lamentationis B. Marie," from a rare original at Ghent, which must prove of great interest to all lovers of early printing. The most valuable return from a membership in a society of this nature is the pleasure and profit to be derived from a reading of its papers, books, and other publications, but a recent listing in a London catalogue of a complete set of the London Bibliographical Society's publications for the first half dozen years of its existence shows the very pleasing fact that its issues have about doubled in value. The influence of societies of this character is also shown in the rapid growth of bibliographical knowledge all over the world, and the consequent preparation of a portion of the book-buying public to take an interest in the reading and purchase of books of this nature, which are often somewhat costly in price.

HIAWATHA.—Ellis Woodsworth, Chief Sachem of the Pipe, Syracuse, N. Y., to whom all orders or other communications may be addressed, announces the completion of "The Godly Seer: A True Story of Hiawatha," the first publication of the Iroquois Press. The Sachems of the Pipe hope that this little volume will prove to be of much interest to all lovers of the early Iroquois legends and myths, as well as of great value in tracing the true sources of Longfellow's inspiration. The book has been attractively printed on Van Gelder hand-made paper, with specially designed initials and marginal illustrations in color, while other illustrations in black and white add much to the interest of the text, the binding showing an attractive cover design, which appears on its front cover, an Indian's head in profile. The edition is strictly limited to 227 numbered copies, 140 of which have been subscribed for before publication. The Sachems have reserved seventeen copies for their own use, and until the entire edition is exhausted will receive orders for the remaining seventy copies at $1 per volume.

NEWSPAPER ESSAYS.—"Monday Sermons" is the title of an attractive little book containing what their author calls "Essays in Miniature," which have appeared in The Syracuse Post-Standard during the last two years, and which have been reprinted in this attractive form through the suggestion of its editor. This collection of twenty short editorials is attractively printed on a good quality of old Stratford paper, in very pleasing type, with rubricated initials, side captions, and title page, the volume's gray paper cover, bearing a paper label, with the book's title and author's name in fac simile autograph, the whole manufacture reflecting great credit upon the printers, Messrs. Hall & McChesney of Syracuse. The papers cover a wide range of topics; their author, Paul M. Ford, seeming to be a lover of Stevenson and Kipling, so many are the allusions to them found scattered through these pages, many of the subjects being directly suggested by them, as, for instance, "The Road of the Loving Heart" in Samoa, containing "a road is in fact, a habit, a route worn smooth, a way we have of reaching certain ends." "On Going to Bed by Day" is distinctly Stevensonian, while another paper has for its text Dr. Van Dyke's advice that a man should be governed by his admirations rather than by his disgusts. The little volume may be had from Messrs. Bailey & Sackett, Syracuse, for 50 cents per copy, and will be found well worth reading.

STEVENSON—A new Stevenson has lately come to the knowledge of collectors, description of which has never appeared in any published bibliography of that writer. The story itself is well known, it having been written during Stevenson's first voyage across the Atlantic in the steerage, which voyage also led to the preparation and publication of "The Amateur Emigrant." The tale in question, "The Story of a Lie," is perfectly familiar to all Stevenson collectors, having been published in The New Quarterly for October, 1879, and being afterward included in the "Edinburgh" and "Thistle" editions. Lately, however, it has come to the knowledge of a few that copies of this story are in existence in book form, the title page bearing the imprint "London: Haley and Jackson, 1882." This book seems to be well authenticated, a copy having been sold at auction in London last year for a little over £30. A recent catalogue issued by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. contains a description of a copy of the same issue, bound by Zaehnsdorf in elaborately tooled green levant, which is listed at $175. A well-known bibliographer of this city is authority for the statement that this book was not issued in cloth, its great rarity being due to the fact that while intended to be published in the regular way, after its printing was finished, Stevenson, who was always most fastidious as to the perfection of style and manner, became so dissatisfied with what he had written that he ordered the book withdrawn from publication, the whole edition being destroyed in consequence, with the exception of a few copies only—perhaps a half dozen in all—which by a lucky chance were overlooked. These copies having been in sheets, are never seen out of binding, the two copies referred to above being the only ones of which the present writer has any knowledge.

MR. W. CAREW HAZLITT.—Mr. Hazlitt has been engaged during some time in drawing up what he proposes to call "A New Essay on the Private and Literary Life of Shakespeare," with notes on some of the plays and characters. It will form a volume in crown octavo of about 300 pages, and is expected to throw a considerable amount of light on many aspects of the life and works of the poet. Mr. Hazlitt has in the course of the last thirty years or more devoted great attention to Shakespeare and Shakespeariana, and he has been encouraged to carry his scheme to completion by the recent appearance of a series of editions of a life of Shakespeare by Mr. Sidney Lee. The new undertaking is nearly ready for the press.

SIDNEY LEE'S "SHAKESPEARE" IN GERMAN.—Most educated Germans pride themselves, and rightly so, on their knowledge of English. That a serious work of English literature should therefore be honored by a German translation is a great testimony to its worth. Such a compliment has just been paid to Mr. Sidney Lee's "Life of Shakespeare." The translation has been well done by Fräulein Marthe Schwabe of Leipsic, under the superintendence of Dr. Richard Wülker, who contributes an appreciative preface. The volume, well printed and more tastefully gotten up than is usual with German publishers, is issued by Georg Wigand of Leipsic.

In his preface Dr. Wülker declares that Lee's life of the poet will, in the future, belong to the "indispensable books of Shakespeare scholarship." The translation, therefore, was undertaken from a desire to bring the book within the reach of the widest possible circle of German readers. The original English work received unanimous praise in the German press, and Dr. Wülker predicts a very large sale for the German edition and rejoices that by this means the knowledge of Shakespeare in the fatherland will be still further increased.

Dr. Wülker especially draws attention to Mr. Lee's demonstration that in their use of the sonnet form the English were imitating the French and Italians, and he thinks that so clear a proof must alter the whole point of view of Shakespeare scholarship. He also characterizes as of especial interest the chapters dealing with the relations between the Earl of Southampton and the young Shakespeare, and with Shakespeare's posthumous reputation, as well as the passages in which the separate plays are described, notably "The Taming of the Shrew" and "The Merchant of Venice." Such recognition of an English work on Shakespeare from a German critic should tend to influence and deepen the good feeling which seems to be establishing itself between England and Germany.

JULIAN RALPH.—Mr. Ralph has been alternately well and then ill again from his overstrained nerves since he got back to London from the South African war. He has been obliged to give up newspaper work for the time, but has found plenty of occupation in making two books. The first one, now finished and in press, is called "At Pretoria," and is a second collection of the letters he wrote from the war. More than half the book will be new to English readers, being made up of original matter and of his letters to America, which have been reconstructed and rearranged. We have not heard whether this second book will be published in America or not. The other book upon which Mr. Ralph is at work is a novel attraction for the English-reading public. It is a compilation of the most interesting articles and the articles by famous men which were contributed to The Friend, that unique newspaper maintained by any army for an army on the immediate field of war at Bloemfontein.

Among the contributors to this journal of one month's duration were Generals, noblemen, journalists of Canada, Australia, and the United States, and such literary lights as Rudyard Kipling and Conan Doyle. Mr. Ralph says that the two most plentiful things in the newspaper were printers' mistakes and poems by Tommy Atkins, but the military proclamations alone give at once a history and a picture of the conquest and new government of one country by another. The book will be very handsomely done and will probably be sold at about $4 a copy, so as to give it currency among buyers of first editions and literary curios, as well as among those persons of means who will desire it for the actual value of its reading matter. As is well known, the correspondents chosen by Lord Roberts to conduct and edit The Friend were Percival Landon of The Times, H. A. Gwynne of Reuter's, F. W. Buxton of The Johannesburg Star, and Julian Ralph. Mr. Buxton was called away. Rudyard Kipling joined the little group at about the same time, and Mr. Ralph was chosen managing editor of the paper because he had enjoyed a wider experience than the others, in so far as he had been a printer, a reporter, an editor, and, doubtless to his regret, a proprietor. After Mr. Kipling went back to England the great author-poet suggested the permanent organization of the "Order of Friendlies," to be confined at first to his journalistic comrades and himself.

ON DON LITERARY LETTER.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW by William L. Alden.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The fourth, fifth, and sixth volumes of Mr. Augustus J. C. Hare's autobiography have just appeared. Mr. Hare is well known as the author of a number of guide books of more or less merit, and as the irreconcilable enemy of the kingdom of Italy. In his Italian guide-books the King of Italy is called "the Sardinian King," and the Italian kingdom is scornfully alluded to as the "subalpine monarchy." Also Mr. Hare is full of sympathy—in his guide books—with the Pope, and resents the fact that Rome is no longer under his rule. The suppression of the monasteries in Italy fills Mr. Hare with indignation, and if in an Italian city a street is widened or some pestilential slum swept away, Mr. Hare's grief knows no bounds. It is rumored that the royal family of Italy feel Mr. Hare's hostility to be the greatest grief and misfortune which has ever come to them. If Mr. Hare would only formally recognize the kingdom of Italy as the other great European powers have done, the house of Savoy would begin to know what peace of mind really means. It certainly does seem hard that Mr. Hare should be so determined in his hostility to Italy. Of course the kingdom can never prosper so long as he disapproves of it, and, of course, he knows this as well as the King himself. Let us hope that some day he may yield to the logic of events, and see that for him to abstain from recognizing Italy when all the other great powers have recognized it, is a cruel mistake. Mr. Hare's autobiography is certainly readable. He has met, in the course of his long and busy life, with many men, women, and ghosts. He dearly loves a lord, and fate has been very kind to him in permitting him to know a large number of lords, and even more than one royal Prince. Of all the people whom he has met he gossips in a cheerful way, and tells stories without number. Some of these stories are, it must be confessed, very much of the character of those said to be told over the tea table by maiden ladies of advanced years, but others are decidedly amusing. As for Mr. Hare's ghost stories, they are delightful. Most of them are quite new, and no one who conscientiously wades through the numerous volumes of Mr. Hare's autobiography will deny that Mr. Hare's ghosts are rather more interesting than either his lords or his middle-class people.

Irreverent critics have made merry over the length of Mr. Hare's great autobiography, and have asked why it should be so much longer than the autobiographies of other men. The answer is plain. The length of an autobiography may naturally be expected to be in proportion to the importance of its subject. Mr. Hare undoubtedly thinks that the public ought to take more interest in his life than in the life of any other man, for the reason that no man of equal importance has lived during the present generation. If the autobiography of Mr. Hare stretches out through half a dozen or more volumes, it will only approach toward doing justice to the great man who defies the kingdom of Italy and refuses to lay down his scissors and make peace with the "Sardinian King."

***

Another humorous book—for looked at in one way Mr. Hare's interminable volumes are full of unconscious humor—is Mr. Samuel Butler's translation of the "Odyssey." Mr. Butler will be remembered as the man who, a few years ago, made the astonishing discovery that the "Odyssey," instead of being written by Homer, was really written by a woman. In his new book he has made the additional discovery that this woman was a young laundress. Mr. Butler has translated the "Odyssey" into English prose, and it is only fair to say that while he occasionally makes his reader smile, the translation is on the whole a good one, and may attract readers who do not care for either Pope or Chapman. Mr. Butler appears to have been born without the capacity to comprehend the existence of such a thing as humor. As a consequence, he is at times extremely funny when he imagines that he is serious and convincing. Could anything be more funny than the conception of the author of the "Odyssey" as a young laundress? And yet Mr. Butler never dreams that there is anything funny in it. Probably he will discover before very long that this remarkable laundress wrote her verses on the cuffs of shirts sent to her laundry by her male clients. I need hardly say that I do not fully accept his theories. My own belief is that the author of the "Odyssey" was one of the Popes of Rome, and that he intended it to be not a romantic poem, but a treatise on mathematics.

There is a very pretty quarrel in progress between Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill, who has gone to America on a lecture tour, and another war correspondent, and the two have each made speeches reflecting severely upon the veracity of one another. a subject would be certain to produce a stupid and dreary story, but, knowing what Mr. Wells has already done with subjects quite as difficult, we may feel sure that he will contrive to interest and impress us. Mr. Wells has so long been in a delicate state of health, which made it to the last degree unwise for him to do any work, and has nevertheless poured out story after story, that I am inclined to believe that he is never so well as he is when the doctors solemnly warn him against the danger of work. At any rate, I have ceased to be uneasy about him, and fancy that, sick or well, he will contrive to outlive most of us.

Reading Mr. Hesketh Prichard's book on Haiti, entitled, "Where Black Rules White," I perceived that the United States had made a mistake in seizing the comparatively prosperous islands of Cuba and Porto Rico, instead of the wilderness of Haiti. The Haitians have reverted to barbarism, and have therefore no right to continue in possession of a wonderfully fertile territory, which civilized colonists would soon make one of the richest places on the globe. If the United States had seized Haiti they would have conferred a benefit on the world at large, as well as on themselves, and no one could have found reasonable fault with them. Probably they will seize it some of these days, but it is a pity that they have not done so already.

It is curious that within so short a distance of the American coast there should be a vast region that is almost as unknown as Central Africa was a few years ago. Haiti is never visited by the explorer or the tourist, and of the real condition of the people in the interior of the island we know nothing—or, rather, nothing except what Mr. Prichard tells us. He has made a very interesting book on Haiti and the Haitians, and has made so clear the savage state of degradation into which the negroes have fallen that sooner or later some civilized power will improve them off the surface of the earth. Mr. Prichard had a happy thought when he decided to go to Haiti. He has since gone to Patagonia in search of an extinct animal, which some naturalists believe not to be extinct. Haiti, however, is even less known than Patagonia, and it is one of the few places still left on the earth that offer a field to the explorer. Now that Mr. Pritchard has drawn attention to Haiti it will not be very long before Haiti is either annexed by the United States or becomes a German colony.

MUNICIPAL ART.

A Conference in Washington Looking to Improvements in American Cities.

The cause of municipal art in the United States received an impetus in Washington last week. There were coincident meetings of distant but entirely harmonious organization that had at heart the artistic improvement of American cities. And the coming together of many enthusiasts on this subject, the interchange of ideas and suggestions by those who have studied far and carefully, and who are hoping much, and, finally, the adoption of practical resolutions and the determining of definite lines of work gave promise of a beginning of a National movement that may have large results.

For several years indications of an awakening to civic aspirations in an aesthetic line have been growing frequent. But they have been sporadic. They have appeared officially in the formation of Municipal Art Commissions, and in the passage of State laws providing for an annual expenditure by cities for art. They have appeared popularly in the formation of Municipal Art Societies, of village and neighborhood improvement associations, in the banding together of local art societies in representative and strong city federation, in the protest against violations of good taste in advertising and in building, in the founding of Tree Planting Societies, in demands for clean streets, and for the suppression of soft-coal smoke. There has been thus revealed a widespread and urgent interest; an army of willing workers for the cause of town improvement. There has been evidenced, in illustration and in newspaper and periodical literature a vision of an attainable "City Beautiful."

The problem now is to co-ordinate the many interests, to marshal the scattered forces into one mighty army, to make available the experience of any one body for the profit of all the others, and by trained and skillful leadership to prevent needless waste and diffusion of effort. The transformation of local municipal art endeavor into a National movement by this means is no idle dream. In one way or another it has been realized in Europe. In Belgium, Italy, and England there are great national societies for the improvement of towns, and in every country there are some men of recognized leadership in experience, taste, and judgment to guide by counsel the high hat untrained wishes of the many. At Washington last week there was the beginning of serious efforts to make such leadership available in the United States.

The American Institute of Architects, in National convention assembled, adopted a number of resolutions bearing on this point. One resulted in the appointment of a committee, consisting of Messrs. Boring and Post of New York, Coolidge of Boston, Eames of St. Louis, and Glenn Brown of Washington, to formulate and present to Congress a bill providing for the appointment of a committee to consider and recommend a comprehensive plan for the improvement and continued development, topographical and architectural, of the City of Washington. There is great hope that the bill will be passed, for it is made pertinent by the large number of public buildings under consideration. Another resolution petitioned the Senate committee to permit no changes in the present White House until Congress calls to its aid "an architect or architects whose education and experience have been of such character as will give assurance that such alterations or additions will neither mar the present beauties nor fail to obtain satisfactory results from the work undertaken."

The value of these resolutions, that are nominally of specific application, to the general cause of town and city improvement, is not merely in the safeguarding of a single city or the enhancement of its beauty. It is in the force of a striking and widely seen example. From that point of view there attaches National interest also to a public meeting that was held in Washington on the evening of Dec. 13, for considering the grouping of the public buildings, the landscape, and the statuary of the city. A large audience of both men and women, mainly in evening dress, sat with eager interest and enthusiasm from 8:30 o'clock until nearly twelve, listening to four illustrated talks. These were by C. Howard Walker of Boston, Edgar V. Seeler of Philadelphia, Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., and H. K. Bush-Brown. While the general subject was Washington, much was said, of course, of wider application. In this connection, importance is further to be attached to the resolutions presented to Congress last week by the Fine Arts Union of Washington, with the indorsement of the Fine Arts Federation of New York, of the Municipal Art Society of Baltimore, of the Maryland Historical Society, of the National Sculpture Society, of the Architectural League of America, and of local architectural societies in all parts of the country. This resolution urged that changes in the executive mansion be made only on the advice, or, at least, on the approval, of an expert commission to be "composed of architects, landscape architects, and sculptors of National reputation;" and it recommends that such commission be appointed "by the President of the American Institute of Architects, the President of the National Sculpture Society, and the President of the National Academy of Design."

But more important in promise than even these crowding events was the meeting of a National committee at the Arlington on Friday the 14th. Some months ago there was formed by the Architectural League of America this committee on municipal improvements. It consists of nine men from various cities, and not all architects. In fact, its Chairman is Mr. H. K. Bush-Brown, the sculptor. The committee is designed to furnish just the expert leadership, the experienced counsel, and co-ordinating power of which there is now so great a need among the workers in the United States for beauty of town and city. The committee had an enthusiastic session, and determined upon a line of action that should make popularly known its willingness to aid the cause of civic art, that should foster and increase the popular interest in the matter, and that, by calling attention to books on various phases of the subject and to a volume that is shortly to appear on the subject as a whole, should make available all data on current municipal art endeavor. It was resolved, also, to prepare brief general suggestions and instructions for the guidance of the public. So there is earnestly begun a National crusade for greater beauty in towns and cities, a movement whose small beginning gains dignity from the standing of this committee, both in its membership and in the source of its appointment, and from the broad and eager field that awaits its efforts.

A Superb Gift Book

An American Anthology

BY

Edmund Clarence Stedman

The Book is a large crown octavo, handsomely printed and bound. Price $3.00; cloth, full gilt, $3.50; half calf, gilt top, $5.00; tree calf or levant, $6.50.

To the banquet recently given in honor of Mr. Stedman in New York Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie sent the following letter:

"I sincerely regret that I cannot express by my presence at the Authors' Club this evening my affection for Mr. Stedman and my appreciation of the significance of the nobly-conceived and patiently-executed work which he has now completed by the publication of his 'American Anthology.' When I recall the sympathetic insight, the scholarly thoroughness and the broad catholicity with which he has surveyed the field of English and American poetry and reinforced his judgment by rich and ample illustration from the two literatures, I cannot escape the conviction that he has given us in these four volumes a searching and luminous record of the deepest life of the English-speaking peoples during the nineteenth century. He has traced their spiritual tendencies and estimated their imaginative achievements in that art which is the most sensitive and intimate of all the arts of expression. For such a service, entirely apart from his other work, we cannot too highly honor him, nor too generously recognize what he has done."

The four volumes referred to by Mr. Mabie are:

An American Anthology, $3.00	Poets of America . . $2.25
A Victorian Anthology, $2.50	Victorian Poets $2.25

"Lessons in Love."

MRS. SHERWOOD writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Katrina Trask's "Lessons in Love": "A new book by Katrina Trask must be hailed with enthusiasm, as there is a quality in her mind so original and so thoroughly unique that the reader rarely knows what to expect. She has gathered together a number of stories, delicate, evanescent, yet full of meaning. They have attracted attention in the magazines and have been talked about for the last half decade. They are somewhat baffling in places, and one wishes that she had made the purpose clearer, but on a second reading we find that it was our ear that was deaf, and not her purpose which was obscure.

"In the 'Acta and Entr'actes,' a beautiful little story of Baireuth, this purpose, which recedes and comes again, is especially apparent. It is too delicate to dissect, (as well cut up a butterfly,) but it is full of research into the mystery of the human heart.

"The 'Hall Mark,' which attracted attention when it first came out, is an entirely different, more material, story, and comes very near being a tragedy, almost the old story of shutting up Ginevra in the chest. It gives a powerful picture of the horrors of suspense, and is a wonderful example of the good English which Mrs. Trask always writes. The tempestuous Maide and her cooler, more didactic John, are admirably done. We are very glad when the locksmith arrives.

"But the gem of the eight stories is the one called 'Beyond,' full of the subtle contrast of a quick-witted, gifted woman wedded to an honest son of toil. 'A crash, a stirring crash, a railway accident lets free two imprisoned souls. And then, on the other side, Gladya meets a spirit who understands her.' She takes an outstretched hand— But it is profanity to anticipate the awakening. This story is the gem of the book. Treading on the verge of that other world, it mates spirit to spirit, free from the embarrassment of the flesh.

"'After All' is too sad and too tragic, and yet it is full of the masterly poetry which infuses all that Mrs. Trask writes.

"The others, 'Evidence,' 'A Just Man,' and 'S. P. Q. R.,' remind one in their unlikeness, yet likeness, of the play of an electric fountain. Just a shower of rubies, diamonds, emeralds, and pale amethysts, then a shower of pearls. Then higher and even higher up to the light they fly, and fall and rise again, and as the light shines through the water, so we see love filter through nature, giving it all that it has to redeem grossness, to make patience and virtue sweet, to take away the dreariness of commonplace, to fortify the heart against grief and disappointment. Such is love, and such its learned lessons, as portrayed in this dainty, unusual little volume which has fallen from the hand of a prophetess fitted to prophesy."

"Stringtown on the Pike"

RAYMOND FULLER AYERS writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "The recent review in your columns of 'Stringtown on the Pike,' by John Uri Lloyd, while noting many meritorious points of the narrative, has passed over a predominant feature which to my mind overshadows its excellence as an entertaining work of fiction. Mr. Lloyd has chosen to exploit a character which, while so strong as to dominate the personages around which the tale centres, is of a type so utterly depraved as to appeal only to the most primeval instincts of the reader. Red-Head, Red Nordman, or the Red-Headed Boy, as he is variously termed, is a typical Kentucky mountaineer, who, through early associations and environments, has imbibed the gospel of feud as an all-predominating law. The bloodthirsty nature of this most to be deplored of our national types is held before the reader's eyes in a way that frankly solicits his admiration for the gore-seeking, hereditary criminal. To find enjoyment in the chronicles of wanton murder is a hallmark of degeneracy, and to pander to the craving for annals of criminal viciousness is a course much to be regretted in an author, still more so in Mr. Lloyd, who, as a native of Kentucky, should know better. It is a pity that 'Stringtown on the Pike' should be marred by the exploitation of a character whose prototypes may be found in the prize ring or at a dog fight, and the evidences of the author's ability associated with a nauseating mental picture. Such a picture as the roasting alive of a negro wretch as sometimes occurs in the South of which Mr. Lloyd writes, and is the worst blot on our national emblem of justice and liberty."

Methuen & Co., 36 Essex Street, W. C., London, announce the early publication of a carefully revised edition, in two volumes, of the Stevenson letters, which will be sold at 6 shillings each. Not only will this announcement prove of interest to lovers of Stevenson who are not blessed with overflowing purses, but will be of interest to all lovers of the letters from the fact that the new and cheaper issue will contain a number of new letters to Mr. George Meredith and to Kipling. This revised edition, which will be in two crown 8vo. volumes, will be the fourth English edition of these famous letters, the first edition having long since sold at a considerable premium.

MAYA

A Story of Yucatan

By WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, author of "Slav or Saxon." Illustrated, 12mo, $1.25.

"MAYA: A Story of Yucatan," is a tale of love and adventure, in which the scenes are laid amid the abodes of that wonderful people whose ruined cities are to-day the noblest monuments of aboriginal art. The period is that of Spanish invasion, and the Maya Princess, who is the chief feature of the story, will hardly fail to awaken in the mind of the reader a warm feeling of sympathy and admiration.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill, who is now lecturing in this country, has contributed a striking character sketch of Lord Roberts to the January number of The World's Work, based upon intimate, first-hand study of the great soldier while Mr. Churchill was a war correspondent in South Africa.

Dr. Weir Mitchell will have a long story in the January Century, entitled "A Comedy of Conscience." The story is woven around a curious situation, in which a thief, while stealing a purse, leaves a valuable diamond ring in its place. The same number of this magazine will also contain an article by Jacob A. Riis, called "Hamlet's Castle," one of the illustrations of which is a fac simile of a page from the town records of Elsinore, chronicling a visit from certain English actors who then (1585) or later were the poet's colleagues.

A new edition of Laurence Hutton's "A Boy I Knew and Four Dogs" will shortly be issued by Harper & Brothers under the title of "A Boy I Knew, Four Dogs, and Some More Dogs," which will contain much new matter.

The life of Henrietta, daughter of Charles I. and the Duchess of Orleans, is being published by E. P. Dutton & Co. under the title of "Madame." The author is Julia Cartwright, (Mrs. Henry Ady.) This issue, which is a new and cheaper edition of the English work, is illustrated with half-tone and photogravure pictures.

An illustrated edition of "Bob, Son of Battle," will be presented in a few months by Doubleday, Page & Co. The pictures will be by Mr. A. Radclyffe Dugmore, who has gone to the North of England to make sketches of the scenes in which the story is laid. The unillustrated edition of this book is now selling near its thirtieth thousand. Everybody, of course, is acquainted with the story of how the book proved to be almost a drug in the market until nearly six months after publication. Since then it has enjoyed a steadily increasing sale.

Mr. Will M. Clemens is issuing through the Abbey Press a limited autograph edition of a small volume entitled "The Mistakes of Authors." Mr. Clemens's experience as author and newspaper writer for several years has afforded him an excellent opportunity to find what he calls mistakes in most masterpieces. Writers, living and dead, are placed under the same microscope. Having once read the mistakes of the big ones, the literary aspirant of today is expected to realise the value and importance of the book as applied to his own work in the future.

In January, the first issue of a new publishing firm at 141 West Twenty-fourth Street, New York, styling itself The Royal-Columbia Press, is to be a book of fiction from the French of George de Fontanges by Deshler Welch, called "The Story of Louise." The publishers announce that it is at once absorbingly dramatic, clever, and original. The scenes of the story are at Paris, Monte Carlo, on board of a yacht, and at Tangier. Louise is a woman of Paris; it is her perfidy and a young man's duplicity that provide the story.

We find that "The History of the United States from the Compromise of 1850," republished in four volumes by the Macmillan Company, embraces the years 1850 to 1804, not 1850 to 1862, as has been erroneously stated. Mr. Rhodes's work covers both the development of the political impasse which ended the war and the complete history of the civil war itself.

A record has been kept of the growing popularity of "Eben Holden," by Irving Bacheller, in the following figures: In a single day, Thursday, Dec. 13, the sales exceeded 13,000 copies, while the five business days from Dec. 8 to Dec. 13 showed total sales by the Lothrop Publishing Company of 33,000 copies of the novel.

It is a gratifying sign of the times to note that the translation which will shortly appear in London of Prof. Seignobos's "Political History of Contemporary Europe," of which we made mention a week ago, drew its inspiration from this country, the translation, which will be used over there already having been published in this country by Henry Holt & Co. and edited by Prof. S. M. Macvane of Harvard University.

An interesting article showing the work so far accomplished in the New York tunnel appears in the current number of Collier's Weekly from the pen of Mr. J. B. McDonald, the contractor. The text is accompanied with illustrations from photographs of the work above and below ground. There is also a story by Frederick Palmer in this number entitled "Marrying Out of the Army," the scene of which is laid in the Philippines.

The first New Testament volume of Dr. Alexander Whyte's series of Bible characters is soon to be published by the Fleming H. Revell Company. Dr. Whyte is the senior pastor of the Free St. George's of Edinburgh, in this country almost every minister of importance. His book will probably see light some time in the Spring. It has been so far withheld as, for certain reasons, Mr. Allen wished to bring out "The Reign of Law" first.

A curious item in the history of bookselling is offered by the record of "Ben Hur." The sales of Gen. Lew Wallace's masterpiece during 1900 are about 4,000 copies in excess of those of 1899; the sales of 1899 were about 2,000 copies ahead of those of 1898, and so on back to 1890, when, as everybody knows, for a few years only a few hundred copies of the book were disposed of. Since then, however, over 700,000 copies have been sold.

The Korean branch of the Royal Asiatic Society has just been formed by Americans and Englishmen living in Korea. The American Minister, Dr. H. N. Allen, is on the council. The Corresponding Secretary is the Rev. J. S. Gale. No doubt we shall soon have a volume of the transactions or valuable papers on Korean themes. Several papers have been read and are in preparation. At the first meeting three honorary members were elected —Mr. W. G. Aston of England, the Rev. John Ross, D. D., of Mukden, and the Rev. William Elliott Griffis, L. H. D.

"Studies in Zechariah" is the title of a small volume by A. C. Gaebelein, published by Francis E. Fitch. The text has interest both for the theologian and the layman.

"Angel's Wickedness, a True Story," by Marie Corelli, is being presented in a neat 16mo volume, with lined margins by Walter R. Beers of this city. It is the story of a little girl who hated God, that is, "she hated what seemed to her poor unenlightened mind the wanton cruelty of the inexorable fate that forced her father to starve and die." It is a tale that carries with it a particular message at Christmas time.

Noyes, Platt & Co. have just published a well-bound little volume entitled "Official Illustrated Catalogue Fine Arts Exhibit, United States of America, Paris Exposition of 1900." The material is presented upon rubricated pages. We have diagrams of the pavilions where the exhibits were held, together with the names of the United States Commission, &c. Brief biographical notes occupy the first fifty pages of the book, and then come the titles of the pictures. Following is a complete index and about fifty pages of half-tone pictures illustrative of the most distinctive work exhibited in the American galleries.

"The Childhood of Ji-shib, the Ojibwa," by Albert Ernest Jenks, is an Indian tale told something after the manner of Kipling's "Jungle Book," but from the point of view of a North American Indian who looked at things from an Indian point of view, and who knew the wild animals, not as they exist in tradition, but as they actually appeared to the Indian mind.

"Flowers of Thought"—is the title of a miscellaneous volume of verse and prose collected by Cecilia M. Tibbits, who also publishes the book. It deals with such subjects as aspiration, character, comfort, consolation, &c., and the collection represents wide and discriminating reading among the very best writers, as well as long searches through unbeaten paths. A "Foreword" has been contributed by Margaret E. Sangster, who aptly indicates the nature of the extracts by saying: "Many a busy woman, cumbered with the cares incidental to homemaking and housekeeping, finds that she has little time for reading books, but she can now and then, in a leisure moment, solace herself with some flower of thought."

"The Register of the Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, National Commandery," has just been issued for the year 1900. It is bound in red, yellow, and blue cloth, and includes official records of the present members of the order who have fought in the foreign wars in which their country has been engaged. The New York Commandery, which leads the list, was instituted in 1894 and incorporated in 1895. The book contains the records of nearly 1,000 commissioned officers serving in the Spanish war.

A volume entitled "The Sanity of Mind," which G. P. Putnam's Sons are to publish next week, is intended as a popular demonstration of certain human phenomena which are most useful to know. Abnormal tendencies are fully illustrated and interpreted in a way that can leave no doubt in the reader's mind. The complete title of the book is "Sanity of Mind: a Study of Its Conditions, and of the Means of Its Development and Preservation." The author is Dr. David F. Lincoln, author of "School and Industrial Hygiene," &c.

The Fleming H. Revell Company has published a number of books especially for the benefit of travelers or prospective travelers in Palestine as well as for those who wish to study the country without going there. As this is the period of the year when so many are planning a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, readers of these volumes seems timely. The Rev. Dr. Robert Laird Stewart's "Land of Israel" embodies the results of the most recent researches in Palestine. The book contains many maps of Jerusalem, the Holy Land, and is a valuable book for the traveler. It is written by Mr. Stewart, who is a native of the United States, but has spent many years in Palestine.
